

THE TRUE

Nature of Imposture

Fully Display'd in the

LIFE

O F

MAHOMET.

WITH

A DISCOURSE annex'd for the Vindication of CHRISTIANITY from this CHARGE.

Offered to the Confideration of the Deists of the Present Age.

By Humphrey Prideaux, D. D. Dean of NORWICH.

The Eighth Edition, Corrected:

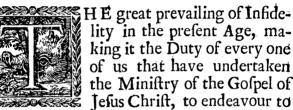

LONDON:

Printed for E. Curll against Catharine-street in the Strand, J. Hooke against St. Dunstan's Church in Fleetstreet, W. Mears and F. Clay without Temple-Bar. Moccanill.

TO THE

READER.

the Ministry of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, to endeavour to put a Stop thereto; that I may in some Measure do my part herein, is a sufficient Reason to justify the present Publication. But besides, the Poyson having, I sear, reach'd some Places, where it is my particular Duty to prevent its Mischies; and infected some Persons, for whose eternal Wessare, as well as temporal, I have Reason to be nearly concern'd; I have hereby been more especially engaged to set forth the ensuing History, with the Tract subjoin'd thereto, for an Antidote against it. And if I can hereby avail any Thing with those who have cast

iv To the READER.

off Christianity as an Imposture, to make them see the Error of their Apostacy, I shall then obtain the full End I propose; if not, at least I shall discharge my Conscience and my Duty, in doing the best I can in order thereto.

That which at present seems mostly to carry Men away into this Infidelity, is the giddy Humour which too many among us, especially of the younger Sort, are liable un-to, in sollowing whatsoever hath gotten in-to Fashion and Vogue: For these, looking no farther than what prevails most among fuch as they converse with, of Course fall in with it, whatfoever it be, without any other Consideration, but that they think it the Dress which is most fashionable and genteel for them to appear in, and the Mode wherein they may make the most acceptable Figure among the Company they keep. therefore that kind of Infidelity which is called Deism, being of late impiously patroniz'd by too many of those who govern the Humours of the Times, abundance of this fort of unthinking People have meerly, out of Complyance with them, run in thereto. and confidently taken upon them to call Christianity a Cheat and an Imposture, without ever having consider'd, what an Imposture is, or whether any of the Marks and

and Properties thereof can possibly agree with this Holy Religion, or no.

That therefore these may see what it is they charge Christianity with, and how far all the Marks and Properties thereof are from having any Agreement with it, I have in the enfuing History, which contains the Life of that famous Impostor, who is on both fides equally acknowledged to be fuch, fully laid open what an Imposture is; and in the Discourse subjoin'd thereto, shewn that none of these Marks and Properties which are so visible in the Imposture of Mahomet, and must be also in all other Impostures in Religion, can possibly be charged upon that Holy Religion which we profess. And an History being that which gives the most lively and fensible Representations of a Matter, and Books of this Nature being such as most obtain the Favour of being read, I hope I have taken the properest Method of coming home to the Consciences of those to whom I write.

And that I may not be thought to draw this Life of Mahomet, with Defign to fet forth his Imposture in the foulest Colours I am able, the better to make it serve my present Purpose, I have been careful to set down all my Authorities in the Margin, and at the End of the Book have given an Account of all the Authors from whom I collected them.

vi To the READER.

And that I may the more remove all Suspicion of this Matter, I think it requisite to acquaint you, That although at prefent I have adapted the Life of Mahomet to this Purpose, yet it was not originally designed for it; it being when I first wrote it, only the interspersed Parts of one Chapter of a much larger Work, which I intended for the Publick, viz. The History of the Ruin of the Eastern Church; which beginning from the Death of the Emperor Mauricius, Anno Dom. 602. was design'd to have been brought down to the Fall of the Saracen Empire, which happen'd Anno Dom. 936. when the Governors of Provinces under the Caliph, usurping the Sovereign Authority, each in their several Districts, did put an End to that large and formidable Empire, by dividing it among them.

And such an History I promised my self might be of some Use in our present Age: For notwithstanding those earnest Expectations and strong Hopes, which we entertain'd in the Beginning of this Government, of having our Divisions heal'd, and all those Breaches which they have caused in the Church again made up; finding those of the Separation still to retain the same Spirit on the one Side, and some others to be so violently bent on the other, against every Thing that might tend to mollify and allay it, as to frustrate all those excellent Designs which have been laid in Order thereto; I thought I could not better let those Men see what Mischief they Both do hereby to the common Interest of Christianity, than by laying before them the grievous Ruin and Desolation, which from the like Cause happen'd to the Churches of the East, once the most flourishing of the whole Earth. they having drawn the abstrusest Niceties into Controversy, which were of little or no Moment to that which is the chief End of our Holy Christian Religion, and divided and fubdivided about them into endless Schisms and Contentions, did thereby so destroy that Peace, Love and Charity from among them, which the Gospel was given to promote, and instead thereof continually provoked each other to that Malice, Rancour, and every evil Work, that they loft the whole Substance of their Religion, while they thus eagerly contended for their own Imaginations concerning it, and in a Manner drove Christianity quite out of the World by those very Controversies in which they disputed with each other about it. So that at length having wearied the Patience and Long-Suffering of God, in thus turning this A 4

the

viii To the READER.

this Holy Religion into a Firebrand of Hell, for Contention, Strife, and Violence among them, which was given them out of his infinite Mercy to the quite contrary End, for the Salvation of their Souls, by living holily, righteously, and justly in this present World, he raised up the Saracens to be the Instruments of his Wrath, to punish them for it; who taking Advantage of the Weakness of Power, and the Dillractions of Counfels, which these Divisions had caused among them, foon over-run with a terrible Devastation all the Eastern Provinces of the Roman Empire. And having fix'd that Tyranny over them; which hath ever fince afflicted those Parts of the World, turn'd every where their Churches into Mosques, and their Worship into an horrid Superstition; and instead of that Holy Religion which they had thus abused, forc'd on them that abominable Imposture of Mahometism, which dictating War, Bloodshed, and Violence in Matters of Religion, as one of its chiefest Virtues, was in Truth the most proper for those, who had afore by their Schism and Contentions resolved all the Religion they had thereinto. And when the Matter came to this Tryal, some of those who were the hottest Contenders about Christianity, became the first Apostates from it; and they, who would not afore part with a Nicety, an abstruse Notion

To the READER.

Notion, or any unreasonable Scruple, for the Peace of the Church, were foon brought by the Sword at their Throats, to give up the whole in Compliance to the Pleasure of a barbarous and favage Conqueror. wonder that fuch, who had afore wrangled away the Substance of their Religion in Contention and Strife against each other, and eat out the very Heart of it by that Malicc and Rancour which they shew'd in their Controversy about it, became easily content, when under this Force, to part with the Name also. Thus those once glorious and most flourishing Churches, for a Punishment of their Wickedness being given up to the Infult, Ravage, and Scorn of the worst of Enemies, were on a sudden overwhelm'd by them with so terrible a Destruction, as brought them to that low and miserable State, under the Pressures of which they have ever fince groan'd; wherein they, retaining no more than some few and lamentable Ruins of what they once were, seem thus to be continued even unto this Day, by the allwise Providence of God, in the same miferable Condition, under the Pride and Perrecution of Mahometan Tyranny, for no other End, but to be an Example and Warning unto others, against that Wickedness of Separation and Division, by which they were brought thereto. A fad Memento to us; for of all Christian Churches now remaining in the World, which is there that hath more Reason than we at this present, to learn Instruction from this Example, and take Warning therefrom? For are not our Divisions brought to much the same Height with theirs, which drew down from the just Hand of God this terrible Destruction upon them; when Men making no Conscience of breaking the publick Peace of the Church, divide and fubdivide from it into endless Factions, Schisms, and Contentions, about their own Imaginations? When they durst reject the ancient and primitive Government of the Church, which was by the Direction of God's Holy Spirit establish'd in it from the Beginning, to make Way for new Schemes of their own Invention; and are content to ruin all, rather than not obtain their Humour herein? When they will have the Decency and Order of our outward Worship condemn'd as Crimes; and for the Privilege of praying in Publick, according to their own unpremeditated Conceptions, without Method or Sense, advance such Arguments against our Liturgies and Forms Prayer, as have in a Manner totally deftroy'd the Devotion of the Nation? When they fcruple more at the kneeling to God in the Holy Sacrament of the Eucharist, while they are receiving from him one of his greatest test Mercies, and ought to be rendering to him their highest Thanksgiving in Return thereto, than in breaking the chiefest of his Commandments; and thus in a Manner refolve all Religion into contending against our just and legal Establishments about it. And when others, on the other Hand, whose Duty it is to labour for our Peace, would rather have this devouring Flame of Strife and Division still continued among us, than throw in one Bucket of Water to cool and allay it: I fay, when Matters are brought to this pass, do we not equal, or rather excel that Wickedness of Contention, Strife, and Division, for which God pour'd out his fierce Wrath upon those once most flourishing Churches of the East, and in so searful a Manner brought them to Destruction thereby? And have we not Reason then to be warn'd by the Example? Have we not Reason to fear, that God may in the same Manner raise up some Mahomet against us for our utter Confusion; and when we cannot be contented with that blessed Establishment of Divine Worship and Truth which he hath in so great Purity given unto us, permit the wicked One by some other such Instrument to overwhelm us instead thereof with his foulest Delusions? And by what the Socinian, the Quaker, and the Deist begin to advance in this Land, we may have Rea-

xii To the READER.

Reason to fear, that Wrath hath some Time since gone forth from the Lord for the Punishment of these our Iniquities and Gainsayings, and that the Plague is already begun among us.

That therefore we may fully fee to what these Mischiess among us lead, and be influenc'd thereby to fuch an Amendment as might divert the Judgment from us, was the Reason that made me design the Publication of the History I have mention'd; wherein my Purpose was to give an Account, first of the Controversies which miferably divided those Eastern Churches, and then of that grievous Calamity and Ruin which happen'd to them thereupon, through that Deluge of Mahometan Tyranny and Delufion which overwhelm'd all those Provinces in which they were planted, and hath continued there to the afflicting of the poor Remainders of them with Misery and Perfecution ever fince. For Mens Minds being usually more influenced by Example, than by Precept or Exhortation; and easier convinced of the Mischief which any Evil leads to, by feeing the Sufferings of others herein, than by the greatest Strength of Reason and Argument that can be pressed upon them in order hereto, I hope that, perchance, by laying open before the contending Parties here among us, what Mischief those Eastern Churches

To the READER. xihi

Churches suffer'd in the like Case, through that dismal Ruin which was by their Divisions brought upon them, I might awaken them with this affrighting Example, to think of those Things which might tend to their Peace; and hereby prevail with them to set some Steps toward the happy Re-establishment of it among us, which as yet no Reason or Argument hath been able to induce them to.

But when I had made my Collections, and gone a great Way in putting my last Hand to the Composure, those Disturbances that happen'd about the Doctrine of the Holy Trinity among us, gave me a Reflection which put a Stop to my Pen, and made me resolve to surcease the whole Work. For perceiving what Advantage the unwary flirring of this Controversy did give the Atheist, the Deist, and the Socinian, for the advancing of their Impieties, by confounding and distracting the Minds of Men with their Cavils and Objections against what we hold in this Mystery to be above our Understandings fully to comprehend; and how feveral of them did, in a Manner fo licentious as was scarce ever before allow'd in a Christian State, exercise their Wits in this Matter, I durst not, considering the Subject of this Book, venture it abroad in so wanton and lewd an Age. the

xiv To the READER.

the two great Mysteries of Christianity (and which will be always fuch unto us while in this State of Ignorance and Infirmity) being the Doctrine of the Trinity, and that of the Hypostatical Union; and this latter being the Subject about which all those Divisions were, which occasion'd that Ruin of those Churches, of which in this History an Account was purposed to be given; and this necessarily leading me therein, not only to unravel all those Controversies which they made about it, but also to unfold all the Niceties and subtil Notions which each Sect did hold concerning it, I had Reason to fear. that those who made such Work with one of the Mysteries of our Holy Religion. would not be less bold with the other, which is altogether as great, were it in that Manner laid open unto them, as it is in this Hi. flory contain'd; and therefore I rather chose totally to suppress my Labours, than run the Hazard, in their Publication, of doing more Hurt than Good thereby. Only that Part which relates to the Life of Mahomet, after having gather'd it together out of that Chapter of this History where it lay interspers'd with other Matters, I have here publish'd, to answer that Design which I have already given an Account of.

As to the Discourse annexed, I have directed it only to those Deists, who according to Mr. Blount's Description of them, hold a Providence, and future Rewards and Punishments. For such seeming to retain the common Principles of Natural Religion and Reason, allow a sufficient Foundation whereon to be discoursed with. But as to the Atheist, who denies the Being of a God, which all Things else prove; and the Epicurean Deist, who allowing his Being, denies his Providence, and his Government over us, which all the Occurrences of our Life become conftant Arguments for, they being such as must necessarily reject first Principles, and bid Defiance to all manner of Reason, before they can so far blind themfelves as to arrive hereto. do leave no Room for any Argument but that of the Whip and Lash, to convince them of those impious Absurdities, and therefore deserve not by any other Method to be dealt with. sides, if you will know the true Reason which induceth the Atheist to deny the Being of a God, and the Epicurean Deist his Government over us; it is, That they may give themselves up, without Fear of suture Judgment, to all those Bestial Enjoyments of Lust and Sensuality which their corrupt Hearts carry them after; and therefore it not being the Reason of the Man, but the brutal Appetite of the Beast that makes them such, they deserve no otherwise than as Beasts to be treated by us; and for this Reason, as I write not to them, so I desire to be understood to have nothing to do with them.

XVI To the READER.

For the clearer Understanding of the Hiftory, I desire you to take Notice, That in the proper Names, Al is a Particle which fignifieth in Arabick the same with the English The, or the Greek b, i, i, as in Al Abas; Ebn, or with the Particle Al after it. Ebno'l is the Son, and Abu, or with the Particle Al after it, Abu'l, is the Father: and thus Mahomet is called Ebn Abdollah Abu Casem, that is, The Son of Abdollah, the Father of Casem. For it was usual with the Arabs to take their Names of Diffinction from their Sons as well as from their Fathers; and thus Ebno'l Athir, is the Son of Al Athir, and Abu'l Abbas is the Father of Al Abbas; Abd, or with the Particle Al after it Abdo'l, fignifieth Servant; and thus Abdo'llah signifieth the Servant of God, and Abdo'l Shems, the Servant of the Sun. In these and all other Arabick Names I exactly follow the Arabick Pronunciation. without regarding how they they have been written or spel'd by any other Western Author that hath treated of them; and that the rather, because of the Agreement which the Arabick hath with the English, both in the Power of its Letters and the Pronunciation of its Words, there being no Language in the World more a-kin to ours, than the Arabick is in these Particulars: Only as to the Name of the Impostor himself, I rather chuse to make use of the vulgar Manner of Writing it, because of the Notoriety of it, than make any Change, although to the Truth, from that which hath been generally receiv'd; and therefore I call him every where Mahomet, although Mohammed be the alone true and proper Pronunciation of the Name.

To the READER. XVI

To conclude; on thy Perusal of this Treatise, as far as thou hast need of what is design'd thereby, either for the Restoration of thy Faith, or the Confirmation of it; so far I pray God it may be useful to Thee, and I am

The hearty Wisher of thy Peace

and Everlasting Salvation,

Norwich, March 15. 1696--7.

H. PRIDEAUX.

The General CONTENTS of the BOOK.

- I. HE Preface to the Reader, shewing the Design and Reason of its Publication.
- II. The true Nature of Imposture fully difplay'd in the Life of Mahomet, from his Birth, An. Dom. 571. to his Death, An. Dom. 632.

III. A Letter to the Deists, shewing that the Gospel of Jesus Christ is no Imposture, but the Sacred Truth of God.

IV. An Account of the Authors quoted in this whole Work.

The Contents of the Life of MAHOMET.

F the Family of Mahomet, and his	Mâr-
riage with Cadigha. Pa	ge 1
Of his first pretending to be a Prophet.	14
Of the Alcoran.	16
The Proofs of his pretended Mission.	16
The Framers of the Alcoran.	37
Mahomet's Marriage with three Wive	s. 41
His Night-Journey to Heaven.	ζ1
His Oral Law.	ź
The Beginning of the Hegira, and the	Computation of their Year.
His Rabberies.	59
बिक्ट राज्यक्र रहा रहा हु।	71
	OF.

The Contents.

Of Mecca, and the Temple there.	74
The Month of Ramadam their yearly F.	alt. 76
Mahomet's Intimacy with the Jew Car	ab. 70
The Occasion of his forbidding Wine	s and
Games of Chance.	84
Of Pilgrimages to Mecca.	88
Mahomet's Poisoning at Chaibar.	100
His Death and Burial at Medina.	103
General Reflections on the Life of Mal	10met
Tours at Englishment on the English William
Of the Contradictions in the Alcoran.	104
The Texts of Holy Scripture Mahomet	116
for his Religion.
jui was thengrow.	121
The Contents of the Letter to the DE Ntroduction. 1. What an Impost 2. What are the Marks and Pro-	ure is.
of an imposture. 2. That all those	Marke
mult belong to every Impolture.	end all particularly aid to Mahometism	r. and that none of them can be charge,	d upon Christianity; is proposed to be the	Design of the enjuing Discourse.	100
Sect. 1. The first Mark of an Imp	offure
I hat it must always have for its En	d fome
Carnal Interest; not chargeable of	n Chri-Itianity.
Sect. 2. The second Mark of an Imp	posture.
That it can have none but wicke	d Men

for

The Contents.

for the Authors of it; not chargeable on Christianity. Sect. 3. The third Mark of an Imposture, That both these two last Marks must appear in the very Contexture of the Imposture it self; not chargeable on Christianity. 159 Sect. A. The fourth Mark of an Imposture, That it can never be so framed, but that it must contain some palpable Falsities, which will discover the Falsity of all the rest; not chargeable on Christianity. 184 Sect. 5. The fifth Mark of an Imposture, That whenever it is first propagated, it must be done by Crast and Fraud; not chargeable on Christianity. Sect. 6. The fixth Mark of an Imposture, That when intrusted with many Conspirators, it can never be long conceal'd' not chargeable on Christianity. Sect. 7. The seventh Mark of an Imposture, That it can never be establish'd, unless back'd with Force and Violence: not chargeable on Christianity. 218 The Conclusion. 232

THE

LIFE

OF

M A H O M E T.

AHOMET (or, according to the true Pronunciation of the Word, Mohammed) was born (a) at Mecca, a City of Arabia, of the Tribe of the Korashites, (b) which was reckoned the Noblest in all that Country, and was descended in a direct line of Primogeniture from Pher Koraish, the first Founder of it, from whom they derive his Pedigree in this manner; (c) The Son of Pher Koa

⁽a) Abul Faraghius, Abul Feda. Elmacin. Alkodai, &c.

⁽b) Hottingeri Hist. Orient. lib. 1. c. 4. (c) Abul Feda. Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 50 & 51. Ecchelensis Hist. Arab. Part 1. c. 3. Liber de Generatione & Nutritura Mahometis.

raish was Galeb; the Son of Galeb, Lawa; the Son of Lawa, Caab; the Son of Caab, Morrah, whose younger Brother was Ada; from whom was descended Omar Ebno'l Chattab, that was Calif. Sons of Morrah were Chelab, Tayem, and Yokdah: From Tayem, Abu-Beker, and Telha; and from Yok-dah; Chalid Ebn Walid, had their Descent. Chelab was he who first gave the Months of the Year those Names by which the Arabs ever fince have called them, even to this day. They had formerly other Names, (d) but Chelab having given them those new ones, they first grew into use among the Korashites, and after, by the Authority of Mahomet, when he had brought all the rest of the Tribes of the Arabs under his Power, obtained every where elfe, and the old ones became totally abolished. The eldest Son of Chelab, was Cosa; and the younger, Zabrah, from whom was Amena, the Mother of Mahomer. (e) Cosa was very famous among the Korashites, for gaining to his Family the Reeping of the Keys of the Caaba, and with them the Presidency of that, Temple, which is the same to which the Mahometans now make their Pilgrimage at Mecca, and was then as much celebrated for the Heathen Worship among the Arabs, as it hath since been for the Mahometan; and therefore the Presidency of it was a matter of great Moment, as being a Station, which render'd him that was in it Honourable through all Arabia. It was before in the Possession of Abu-Gabshan, of the Tribe of the Cozaites, who were of the Ancient Race of the Arabs. descended from Joktan, and formerly had their dwelling in Yaman, or Arabia Felix, till being driven, thence by an Inundation from the breaking down of the Banks of the Lake Aram, which destroyed their Country, they came and fettled in the Valley of Marry, not far from Mecca, and from thence they were called Cozaites, which fignifieth the cutting off. because by this remove they were separated, and as it were cut off from the rest of their Kindreds. They had not long lived at Marry, till they grew so powerful, as to make themselves Masters of Mecca, and also of the Caaba, or Temple, which. stood there, and held both the Government of the one, and the Presidency of the other, for many Ages after; 'till at length the latter falling into the Hands of Abu Gabshan, a weak and filly Man, Cold circumvented him while in a drunken Humoura and bought of him the Keys of the Temple, and with them the Presidency of it, for a Bottle of Wine. But Abu Gabshan being gotten out of his drunken Fit, sufficiently repented of his foolish Bargain from whence grew these Proverbs among the A= rabs; More vex'd with late Repentance than Abu Gabshan; and, More silly than Abu Gabshan: Which are usually said of those who part with a thing of great Moment for a small matter. However, he was not fo filly, but when he came to himfelf, he understood the Value of what he had parted with, and wou'd fain have retriev'd it again; to which purpose he gave Cosa some disturbance in the posfession of his Purchase; and the rest of the Cozaites joined with him herein, as not liking that he should be thus deprived of his Right by a Trick, and thereby the Presidency of the Temple go out of their Tribe into that of the Korashites. But Cosa being aware hereof, fent privately to all the Koras Shites:

⁽d) Golii notæ ad Alfraganum. p. 4. (e) Abul Feda. Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 42, 50, & 342. Ecchelensis Hist. Arab. p. 1. c. 3. Fortalitium Fidei, lib. 4. Consid. 1.

shites, who were dispersed abroad among the Neighbouring Tribes, to meet with him at Mecca on a Day appointed; with whose help falling on the Cozaites, he expell'd them all out of the City, and from that time the whole Possession of Mecca remain'd to the Korashites; and Cosa, and his Posterity in a right Line down to Mahomet, had the Presidency of the Temple, and the chief Government of the City ever after.

The eldest Son of Cosa was Abd Menaph, and the younger Abdol Uzza, Names taken from the Idols of the Temple, of which Cosa had now gotten the Presidency. For Abd Menaph in the Arab Language, signifiest the Servant or Worshipper of Menaph; and Abdol Uzza, the Servant or Worshipper of Uzza, which were Heathen Deities then worshipped by the Arabians. Of the Posterity of Abdol Uzza, were Zobair, and Cadigha the Wise of Mahomet.

The eldest Son of (f) Abd Menaph was Hashem, and the younger Abdshem, whose Son was Ommia, from whom the Ommiada, who for so many Descents governed the Saracen Empire. Hashem, as well as his Father and Grandsather, was Prince, of his Tribe, and a Person of great Note in his Time through all Arabia. From him the Kindred of Mahomet are called Hashemites; and he whose governs at Mecca and Medina (who must always be of the Race of Mahomet) is called in their Language, (g) Al Emamo'l Hashem, that is, the Prince of the Hashemites, even unto this Day.

⁽¹⁾ Abul Feda. Pococ. Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 51. Ecchelensis. Hist. Arab. Part 1. c. 3. Liber de Generatione & Nutritura Mahometis. (g) Sionita in Append. ad Geographiam Nubiensem, c. 7.

The

.The Son of Hashem was (h) Abdol Motallab, who Succeeded his Father in the Government of his Tribe at Mecca, and had to do with two very formidable Enemies in his Time; (i) Chofroes, the first of that Name, King of Persia, and Abraham King of the Ethiopians. The first having extended his Empire a great way into Arabia, on the North of Mecca; and the other possess'd himself of the Kingdom of the Homerites on the South, became very dangerous Neighbours unto him; but he defended himself against both, and forced the latter to a very shameful Retreat, when he came with a numerous Army to beliege the City, as shall be hereafter more fully related. He lived to a very great Age, being (k) an hundred and ten Years old at his Death: He had thirteen Sons, their Names were as followeth: Abu La-Abbas, Abu Taleb, Abu Laheb, Al-Gidak, Al-Hareth, Jahel, Al-Mokawam, Dorar, Al-Zobair, Ketham, and Abdal Caaba. eldest of them, Abdollah, having married Amena, the Daughter of Waheb, was by her the Father of Mahomet (1) who was born at Mecca in the Month of May, in the Year of our Lord 571. Justin the Second being then Emperor of Constantinople, and Chofroes the First, King of Persia.

By this it appears, Mahomet was not of such mean and vile Parentage as some have asserted. For being a Korashite, he was of the noblest Tribe of all Arabia, and the Family he was born of, was the most considerable of that Tribe, as being that which, for feveral Descents together, had born the chief Rule over it. However, in the beginning of his Life he was in (m) a very poor and despicable Condition. For his Father dying before he was two Years old, and while his Grandfather Abdol Motallab was still living, all the Power and Wealth of his Family became derived to his Uncles, especially to Abu Taleb, who after the Death of Abdol Motallab his Father, bore the chief Sway in Mecca as long as he lived, which was to a very great Age; and under his Protection chiefly was it that Mahomet, when he first broach'd his Imposture, was supported against all his Opposers, and grew up to that height thereby, as to be able after his Death to carry it on, and also establish it through all Arabia by his own Power.

⁽b) Abul Feda. Pocock, Ecchelensis, ib. (i) Hottinger. Hist. Orient. lib. 1. c. 3. (b) Elmacin. lib. 1. c. 1.

⁽¹⁾ Abul Feda. Alkodai. Abul Faraghius. pag. 101. Elmacin. lib. 1. c. 1. Pocock, Spec. Hift, Arab. p. 170. Hottinger Hift. Orient. lib. 1. c. 6.

After his Father's Death, he continued uncer the Tuition of his Mother till the eighth Year of his Age; when (n) she also dying, he was taken home to his Grandsather, Abdol Motallab, who at his Death, which happen'd the next Year after, committed him to the Care of his Uncie, Abu Taleb, to be educated by him out of Charity, who carrying on a Trade of Merchandize, took him into this Employment, and bred him up in the Business of it. For Macca (o) being situated in a very barren Soil, could not of it self subsist; and therefore the Inhabitants were forced to betake themselves to Merchandize for their Support; and the best ⁽n) Abul Feda. Abunazar. Abul Faraghius, p. 101. Elmacin. I. 1. c. 1. Hottinger. Hist. Orient. I. 2. c. 1. Guadagnol. Tract. 2. c. 10. (n) Abul Feda. Abul Faraghius, p. 101. Elmacin. lib. 1. c. 1. (o) Geograph. Nubiensis Sionira in Append. ad eandem, c. 7. Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. P. 127. Golii notæ ad Alfraganum, p. 98.

Men among them had scarce any other Estate but in their Stock wherewith they did Traffick; and therefore they all betook themselves to this course of Life, which they feem to have received down from the Ismaelites, from whom they were descended, and in the same manner as they carried on a Trade into Syria, Persia, and Egypt, on Camels backs, furnishing those Countries with such Commodities, as came to them from India, Ethiopia, and other Southern Parts, for which Commerce they were very advantageously situated, as lying near the Red-Sea, where they had the Port (p) Jodda, the most convenient for Shipping in all

Streights.

And in this Course of Life Mahomet was bred up under his Uncle; and as soon as he was of a fit Age, he was fent with his Camels into Syria. On his coming to Bostra, a City on the Confines of that Country, while he was attending his Uncle's Factors in the vending of his Wares in the publick Market-place (q), he was there feen (fay the Mahometans) by Bahira, a Learned Monk of that place. who immediately knowing him to be the great Prophet that was to come, pressed with great earnestness through the Crowd unto him, and taking him by the Hand, there foretold of him all those great things which afterwards came to pass. The Mark whereby he knew him (fay they) was the Prophetick Light, which shone on his Face. This Prophetick (r) Light, they tell us, God first placed on Adam, to be a fign of the Prophets that were to be born of him; That this Light descending down to Abraham, was from him divided into two; one on the Face of Isaac, and the other on the Face of Isaac; that Isaac's Light was soon after manifested in the many Prophets which appeared of his Posterity among the Children of Ifrael; but that which was placed on Ismael was suppressed, and lay hid till the coming of Mahamet, on whom it first appeared; and that Bahira seeing it on him, thereby knew him (fay they) to be a great Prophet sentof God, who was e're long to manifest himsels. But others (/) say, the Mark by which he knew him, was the Seal of his Prophetick Mission, stamped with a wonderful Impress between his Shoulders. But the truth is, Mahomet did not become acquainted with this Bahira, till many Years after, when he traded for Cadigha in those Parts; as shall in its proper place be hereafter related.

⁽p) Geographia Nubiensis clim. 2. Part 5. Golii New ad Alfraganum, p. 100. (q) Abul Feda, Alkodai. Al-Jannabi. Abul Faraghius. p. 101. Pocock. Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 170. Gentii Notæ ad Musladinum Sadum, p. 536. (r) Sharestani Liber de generatione & Nutritura Mahometis, Pocock, Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 53. & p. 168.

Till the Twenty fifth year of his Age, he continued in this Employment under his Uncle; but (t) then one of the chief Men of the City dying, and his Widow, whose Name was Cadigha (to whom he left all his Stock, which was of considerable value) wanting a Factor to manage it for her, she invited Mahomet into her Service; and having offered him such advantageous Conditions as he thought fit to accept of, he undertook this Employment under her, and for three Years traded for her at Damascus, and other Places; and in the management of this Charge gave her that content, and so far insinuated himself into her Favour and good Opinion thereby, that about the (u) 28th year of his Age she gave her self to him in Marriage, being then forty Years old; and from Being Servant, thus advanced him to be the Master both of her Person and Estate; which having render'd him equal in Wealth to the best Men of the City. his ambitious Mind began to entertain thoughts of (x) possessing himself of the Sovereignty over it. His Ancestors had for several Descents been Chiefs of the Tribe; and his Great Grandfather Hashem had made himself very considerable, not only at home, but also among his Neighbours abroad: and had his Father lived, the Power and Wealth of his Family, after the death of his Grandfather. would have descended to him, as being the eldest Son; and after his decease, to himself; and it was only his Misfortune in being left an Orphan during the Life of his Grandfather, that deprive him of all this. These Considerations meeting with an Ambitious, Aspiring Mind, soon put him upon Designs of raising himself to the Supreme Government of his Country; and being a very Subtile Crafty Man, after having maturely weigh'd all ways and means whereby to bring this to pass, concluded none to likely to affect it, as the framing of that Imposture which he afterwards vented with so much mischief to the World. For the course of Trade which he drove into Egypt, Palestine, and ⁽u) For she died in the 50th Near of the Life of Mahomet. Elmac. lib. 1. c. 1. when she had lived with him 22 Years. Abul Faraghius, p. 102. (x) Disputatio Christiani contra Saracenum, c. 3. Cusani Cribratio Alcorani, lib. 3. c. 8. Ricardi Confugatio Legis Saracenica, c. 13.

(/) Gentii Notæ ad Musladinum Sadum, p. 536. Vide etiam librum de Generatione & Nutritura Mahometis.

⁽t) Abul Feda, Abul Faraghius, p. 102. Rodericus Toletanus, ç. 2. Joannes Andreas, c. 1. Pocock. Spec. Hist. Arab. P: 171:

Syria, having made him well acquainted both (1) with Christians and Jews, and observing with what eagerness as well they, as the several Sects into which the Christians of the East were then miserably divided, did engage against each other; he from thence concluded, That nothing would be more likely to gain a Party firm to him for the compassing of his Ambitious Ends, than the making of a New Religion. And for such a Change he judged his Citizens might be well disposed, because their Traffick and frequent Converse with Christians having much taken off their Affection and Zeal for that gross Idolatry which they had hitherto been addicted to, they were at that time from Heathenim generally fallen (z) into Zendicism, an Error among the Arabs near of kin to the Sadducism of the Jeps, as denying Providence, the Resurrection, and a Future State; which being in reality to be without any Religion at all, they were the better fitted, while thus void of all other Impressions of God, and his Worship, to receive any he should impose upon them; and therefore betaking himfelf to frame such a Religion as he thought might best go down with them, he drew up a Scheme of that Impasture he afterwards deluded them with. which being a Medley made up of Judaism, the several Heresies of the Christians then in the East, and the old Pagan Rites of the Arabs, with an Insulgence to all Sensual Delights, it did too well enswer his Design, in drawing Men of all sorts to the embracing of it.

⁽⁴⁹⁾ Disputatio Christiani, c. 1. Fortalit. Fid. lib. 4. Confiden. (x) Liber Almostatras. Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p.ings. And Mahomet upbraids them with it in the 6th Chapter of his Alcoran, and else where in that Book.

But

But that he might not immediately, from that Idolatry which he had hitherto practifed with the rest of his Citizens, commence a Preacher against it; and from his present Course of Life, which was very licentious and wicked, take upon him a Character fo unsuitable to it, as that of a Problem. without some previous Change: In the 38th Year of his Age (a) he withdrew himself from his former Conversation, and affecting an Eremetical Life. used every Morning to withdraw himself into a Solitary Cave near Mecca, called the Cave of Hira. and there continue all Day, exercifing himself, as pretended, in Prayers, Fastings, and Holy Meditations; and there it is supposed he first had his Consults with those Accomplices, by whose help he made his Alcoran. On his return home at Night, he used to tell his Wife Cadigha of Visions which he had feen, and strange Voices which he had heard in his Retirement. For he aimed first of all to draw her into the Imposture, knowing that thereby he should secure his own Family to his Defign (without which it would be dangerous for him to venture on it) and also gain in her an able Partizan for him among the Women. But she rejecting these Stories as vain Fancies of his own disturbed Imagination, or else Delusions of the Devil; at length he opened himself further unto her, and feigned a Converse with the Angel Gabriel, which she was also as backward to believe, till after several repeated Stories to her of his Revelations from the faid Angel, she (b) consulted with a fugitive

⁽a) Liber Agar. Joannes Andreas de Confusione Sectæ Mahometanæ, c. 1. Bartholomæus Edessenus. Bellonius, lib. 3. c. 1. Guadagnol. Tract. 2. c. 10. sect. 1. (b) Theophanes. Cedrenus. Miscella Historia. Zonaras.

Monk then in their House, (of whom I shall hereafter speak) who being in the Plot, helped to confirm her in the belief of what Mahomet had communicated unto her, whereby being totally perswaded that Mahomet was really called to that Prophetick Office which he pretended to, from thenceforth gave up her Faith totally to him, and became his first Proselyte in this Imposture.

After he had carried this Point, having now, by two Years constantly practising a retired and austere Life, gained, as he thought, a sufficient reputation of Sanctity for his Design: In the 40th Year of his Age, (c) he began to take upon him the Stile of the Apostle of God, and under that Character to propagate the Imposture which he had been so long a projecting. But for four Years he did it only in private among fuch as he had most Confidence in, clancularly infinuating his Delufions into His first Proselyte, as has been said, was Cadigha, his Wife; his second was Zayd Ebn Hareth his Servant; and the third his Cousin Ali, the Son of Abu Taleb his Uncle, who from hence was (d) used to stile himself the first of Believers, not making any reckoning of the other two. tempted his Servant Zayd by promising him his Freedom, and accordingly, on his receiving his Religion; he manumised him. And from hence it hath become a Law among the Mahometans ever fince to make their Slaves free, whenever they turn to their Religion.

⁽c) Abul Feda. Abul Faraghius, p. 102. Elmacin. lib. 1. c. 1. (d) Sionita in Append. ad Geograph. Nubiensem, c. 8. (e) Joannes Andreas, c. 1. Bellonius, lib. 3. c. 10. Guadagnol. Tract. 2. cap. 10. sect. 1.

It is to be observed, that Mahomet began this Imposture about the same time that (f) the Bishop of Rome, by virtue of a Grant from the wicked Tyrant Phocas, first assumed the Title of Universal Paftor, and thereon claimed to himself that Supremacy which he hath been ever fince endeavouring to usurp over the Church of Christ. And from this time Both having conspired to found themselves an Empire in Imposture, their Followers have been ever fince endeavouring by the same Methods, that is, those of Fire and Sword, to propagate it among Mankind; so that Antichrist seems at this time to have fet both his Feet upon Christendom together, the one in the East, and the other in the West; and how much each hath trampled upon the Church of Christ, the Ages ever fince succeeding have abundantly experienced.

Mahomet's fourth Disciple was (g) Abu Beker, who being one of the (h) Richest Men of Mecca, and a Person of great Wisdom and Experience, brought with him no small help and Reputation to his Cause; and his Example was soon follow'd by sive others, (i) Othman Ebn Assan, Zobair Ebno'l Awam, Saad Ebn Abu Waccas, Abdorrahman Ebn Auf, and Abu Obeida Ebno'l Jerah, who were afterwards the principal Generals of his Armies, and the chief Instruments under him, by whose help he established both his Empire, and his Imposture together in those parts of the World.

⁽f) Phocas made this Grant A. D. 606. which was the very Year that Mahomet retired to his Cave to forge that Imposiure there, which, two Years after, A. D. 608. he began to propagate at Mecca.

(g) Elmacin, lib. 1. c. 1. Abul Feda.

(b) Sionita in Append. ad Geographiam Nubiensem, c. 8.

(i) Elmacin, lib. 1. cap. 1.

After he had gotten these nine Disciples, some of which were the principal Men of the City, he began (k) openly to publish his Imposture to the People of Mecca in the 44th Year of his Age, and publickly to declare himself a Prophet sent by God to reduce them from the Error of Paganism, and to teach them the true Religion. The first Doctrine that he propagated among them was, (1) That there was but One God, and that he only is to be worshipped, and that (m) all Idols were to be taken away, and their Worship utterly abolished; and that those who say God hath (n) Sons or Daughters, or that there are any other Gods (o) affociated with him, are impious, and ought to be abhorred. By denying him Sons and Associates, he reflected on the Christians for holding the Doctrine of the Trinity, and that Jesus Christ is the Son of God; the Belief of both which he doth in many places in his Alcoran vehemently forbid. By denying him Daughters, he condemned the Idolatrous Practice of the Arabians, (p) who worshipped Allat, Menah, and Al Uzza, Female Deities, which they held to be the Daughters of God, whose Idols and Temples he afterwards every where destroyed.

He did not pretend to deliver to them any new Religion, but to revive the old one, which God first gave unto Adam; and when lost in the corruption of the Old World, restored it again by Revelation to (q) Abraham, who taught it his Son Ismael their

⁽k) Abul Feda, Abul Faraghius, p. 102. Elmacin. lib. 1.
(i) Elmacin. lib. 1. c. 1. Alcoran c. 2, 3, 4, 5, &cc.
(m) Elmac. ib. & Alc. passim.
(n) Alc. c. 4, &c.

⁽o) Alc. c. 4. 5, &c. (p) Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 89, 90. Hottingeri Hist. Orient. lib. 1. c. 7. (q) Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 53. Alc. c. 3. &c.

Foreafther; and that he, when he first planted himfelf in Arabia, instructed Men in the same Religion which he had received from Abraham; but their Posterity afterwards corrupted it into Idolary, and that God had now fent him to destroy this Idolatra and again restore the Religion of Ismael their Forefather. And therefore, according to his own Do-Arine, it is not unfitly called Ismaelisme by the Tews, although they call it so only out of contempt, by transposition of the Letters from Islamisme, the Name whereby the Mahometans themselves most love to call it, from the Arabick (r) Word Salama. which in the Fourth Conjugation is Aslama, to enter into the State of Salvation; hence Estam, the Saving Religion, and Muslimon, or as we call it Musleman, be that believeth therein.

He (s) allowed both the Old and the New Testament, and that Moses and Jesus Christ were Prophets fent from God; but that the Jews and Christians had corrupted these Holy Writings, and that he was fent to purge them from these Corruptions, and restore the Law of God to that purity in which it was first deliver'd; and therefore most of those Passages which he takes out of the Old and New Testament. are related otherwise by him in his Alcoran, than we have them in those Sacred Books. And in this certainly he acted much wifer than our Socinians. who with him denying the Holy Trinity and the Divinity of our Saviour, yet still allow the Holy Scriptures, as now in our Hands, to be genuine and uncorrupted, with which their Doctrine is in the most manifest manner totally inconsistent. If they had with this their (t) Master denied the Scriptures which we now have, as well as the Trinity, and the Divinity of our Saviour, which are so evidently proved by them, and forged others in their stead, they might have made their impious Hypothesis look much more plausible, than now it can possibly appear to be.

⁽r) Golii Lexic. in voce Salama, & Pocockius ubi supra, (1) Alc. c. 3, 4, 5, &cc.

He pretended to receive all his Revelations (u) from the Angel Gabriel, and that he was fent from God on purpose to deliver them unto him. And whereas he was subject to the Falling Sickness, (*) whenever the Fit was upon him, he pretended it to be a Trance, and that then the Angel Gabriel was come from God with some new Revelations unto him, the Splendor of whose appearance he not being able to bear, this caused him to fall into those Trances, in which the Angel conversed with him, and delivered to him those Messages from God, which he was fent to reveal unto him.

His pretended Revelations he put into several Chapters, the Collection of which make up his Alcoran, which is the Bible of the Mahometans. The Original of this Book he taught them (x) was laid up in the Archives of Heaven, and that the Angel Gabriel brought him (y) the Copy of it Chapter by ⁽t) The Socinians say just the same, and no more of Jesus Christ, than Mahomet did before them, excepting only that he makes himself the greater of the two; and how many other things they agree in with him, and seem to have taken from him, may be seen in Hottinger's Historia Orientalis, lib. 2. c. 3. where he fully compares the Dodrines of both together.

(u) Alc. c. 2. Joan. Andreas. c. 2. Guadagnol, Tract. 2. c. 10. sect. 1. Libet Agar.

(*). Rodericus Toletanus, c. 6. Ricardi Confutatio, c. 13. Theopheness. Zonaras. Miscel. Historia. Hottingeri Hist. Orient. lih. 1. c. 2. Fortalitium Fidei lib. 4. Consid. 2.

(x) Alc. c. 6. &c. 80.

(y) Alc. c. 25.

The Life of Mahomet. 17

Chapter, according as occasion required they should be published to the People. Part of these he published at Mecca, before his flight from thence 3 and the other part at Medina, which he did after this manner. (2) When he had forged a new Chaprer, which he intended to publish, he first dictated it to his Secretary, and then delivered the written Paper to be read to his Followers till they had learnt it by heart; which being done, he had the Paper brought to him again, which he laid up in a Cheft, which he called the Cheft of his Apostleship. This he did, I suppose, in imitation of the Ark or Holy Cheft among the Jews, in which the Authentick Copy of their Law was reposited. This Chest he left in the keeping of Haphia, one of his Wives; and out of it, after his death, was the Alcoran compiled, in the same manner as Homer's Rhapsodies were out of the loose Poems of that Poet. Abu Beker, who fucceeded the Impostor, first made the Collection.

(*) For when Mosailema, who in the last Year of Mahomet set up for a Prophet as well as he, had, in hopes of the same Success, in like manner composed an Alcoran, and published it in a Book to his Followers (as shall hereafter be related) Aba Beker thought it necessary to publish Mahomet's also in the same manner, and that not only in opposition to the new Imposture, but also for the better supporting of that which he adher'd to; and therefore having recourse to Haphsa's Chest, partly out of the Papers which he found there, and partly out of the Memory of those who had learnt them by heart, when the Impostor first delivered them unto them, he composed the Book. For several of those Papers being lost, and others so defaced as not to be read, he was forced to take in the affiftance of those who pretended to remember what the Impostor had taught them, to make up the Matter, and under this Pretence made use of their Advice to frame the Book, as he thought would best answer his Purpose. When the Work was compleated, he caused the Original to be laid up in the same Chest, out of which he had compiled it, which he still continued in the keeping of Haphia, and then delivered out Copies of it among his Followers. But the Book had not been long published, but so many various Readings were got into the Copies, and so many absurdities discovered in the Book it felf, that (4) when Othman came to be Caliph, he found it necessary to call it in again to be lick'd into a hetter Shape; and therefore having commanded all to bring in their Copies, under pretence of correcting them by the Original in the keeping of Haphfu, he caused them all to be burnt, and then published that Alcoran a-new model'd by which we have, of which having order'd four Copies to be written out fair, he deposited the first of them at Mecca, and the Record at Medina; the third he fent into Erack, or Chaldea, and the fourth into Syria: The three first were after a while all Jost, but the last of them several Ages after (1) was said to be preserved at Damascus in a Mosque there, which had formerly been the Church of St. John the Baptift. This (||) was done in the 32d Year of the Hegira, An. 652. twenty one Years after the Death of the Impostor; after which time the Book underwent no other Correction.

C

⁽²⁾ Joannes Andreas, cap. 2. (4) Elmacin. I: 1: c. 2. Abul Feda: Pococ. Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 362. Bartholomæus Edessenus. Golii præfatio at Suratam. Locman. Hinckelman. præfatio ad Alcoranum. Joannes Andreas, c. 2. Ricardi Confut. c. 13:

^(†) Eutych. Tom. 2. p. 340. Abul Feda. Pococ. ib. Disputatio Christiani c. 15. Joannes Andreas, c. 2. (1) Bartholomæus Edessenus. p. 423.

On his first appearing publickly as a Prophet, (*) the People laughed at him for the ridiculousness of his Pretence; some called him a (+) Sorcerer; and a Magician, others a Lyar, an Imposter, and a Teller of old Fables; of which he often complains in his Alcoran; fo that for the first Year he prevail'd nothing among them, or got any thing else by his publishing those Chapters of his Alcoran which he had then composed, or his Preaching to them the Doctrine of them, but Scorn and Con-But this did not discourage him from still proceeding in his Design, which he manag'd with great Art. For he was a Man of a (a) ready Witz and a very acceptable Address; he bore all Affronts, without feeming to refent any; and applied himself to all forts of People, without contemning the meanest; was very courteous both in giving and receiving Visits; the Great Men he foothed with flattering Praises, and the Poor he relieved with Gifts and Alms; and towards all Men manag'd himfelf with that Art of Infinuation (in which he exceeded all Men living) that at length he furmounted all the Difficulties, which fo bold an Imposture in the first venting of it must necessarily be liable unto; and several other new Profelytes joined themselves unto him, among whom was (b) Omar Ebno'l Chattab, who was one of his Successors, and then a considerable Man in the Ciry. His Example was soon followed by several others; so that in the fifth Year of his pretended Mission, he had increas'd his Party to the Number of Nine and thirty, and himself made the Fortieth.

^(||) Eutychius, Tom. 2. p. 340. (*) Joannes Andreas, (†) Alc. c. 15, 25, 37, 8t, &c. (a) Elmacin, lib. 1. E. 1. Abdnazar. Hottinger. Hift. Orient. lib. 2. c. 4;

On his having made this Progress, (c) several began to be alarm'd at it. Those that were addicted to the Idolatry of their Forefathers, stood up to oppose him as an Enemy of their Gods, and a dangerous Innovator in their Religion. But others, who faw further into his Designs, thought it time to put a stop thereto, for the sake of the publick Safety of the Government, which it manifestly tended to undermine for the establishing of Tyranny over them, and therefore they combining together against him, intended to have cut him off with the Sword. But (d) Abu Taleb, his Uncle, getting notice hereof, defeated the Design, and by his Power, as being Chief of the Tribe, preserved him from all other like attempts as were afterwards ramed against him. For although he himself peristed in the Paganism of his Ancestors, yet he had hat Affection for the Impostor, as being his Kinfnan, and one that was bred up in his House, that ne firmly stood by him against all his Enemies, and vould suffer no one to do him any hurt as long as le lived. And therefore being fafe under so powrful a Protection, he boldly went on to preach to he People in all publick Places of the City where hey used to assemble, and published unto them more Chapters of his Alcoran, in the order, as he pretended, they were brought him by the Angel Gabriel. The chief Subject of which was to press upon them the observance of some moral Duties, the Belief of the Unity of God, and the Dignity of his own pretended Apostleship, in which indeed, besides some Heathen and Jewish Rites which he retained, consisted the whole of his new forged Religion.

(d) Elmacin, ib.

⁽b) Elmacin, lib. 1. cap. 1. Joannes Andreas, c. 1.

⁽c) Elmacin, lib. 1. c. 1. Joannes Andreas, c. 1.

The main Arguments he made use of to delude Men into this Imposture, were his Promises and his Threats, as being those which easiest work on the Affections of the Vulgar. His Promiles were chiefly of Paradife, which he so cunningly framed to the gust of the Arabians, as to make it totally confift in those Pleasures which they were most delighted with: For they being within the Torrid Zone, were, through the nature of the Clime, as well as the excessive corruption of their Manners, (e) exceedingly given to the love of Women; and the scorching Heat and Dryness of the Country making Rivers of Water, cooling Drinks, shaded Gardens, and pleasant Fruits, most refreshing and delightful unto them; they were from hence apt to place their highest Enjoyment in things of this nature. And therefore, to answer the heighth of their carnal Desires, he made the Joys of Heaven, which he proposed for a Reward to all those that should believe in him, to consist totally in these Particulars. For he tells them in many Places in his Alcoran, that they shall enter into pleasant Gardens, ⁽e) Ammianus Marcellinus de Saracenis, lib. 14. c. 4. In credibile est quo ardore apud eos in Venerem uterque d'Tolyatur sexus.

(f) where many Rivers flow, and many curious Foun-tains continually send forth most pleasing Streams, nigh which they shall repose themselves on most delicate Beds adorned with Gold and precious Stones, under the Shadow of the Trees of Paradise, which shall continually yield them all manner of delicious Fruits; and that there they shall enjoy most beautiful Women, pure and clean, having black Eyes, and a Countenance always fresh and white as polished Pearls, who shall not cast an Eye on any other but themselves, with whom they shall enjoy the continual Pleasures of Love, and solace themselves in their Company with amorous Delights to all Eternity, drinking with them most delicious Liquors, and most savoury and pleafant Wines, without being ever intoxicated or overcharged by them, which shall be administred to them by beautiful Boys, who shall be continually running round their Beds to serve them up unto them in Cups of Gold, and Glasses fixed on Diamonds. And as thus be framed his Promises of Reward in the Life hereafter, as might hest suit with the sensual Appetites and Defires of those to whom he proposed them; so, on the contrary, he described the Punishment of Hell, which he threaten'd to all that would not believe in him, to confift of fuch Torments as would appear to them the most afflicting and grievous to be born. As (c) that they (hould drink nothing but boiling and stinking Water, nor breath any thing else but exceeding bot Winds, (things most terrible in Arabia) that they (hould dwell for ever in continual Fire ex-

⁽f) Alcoran. c. 3. c. 4. c. 36. c. 37. c. 43. c. 47. c. 78. c. 90. &c. Joannes Andreas, c. 9. Ricardi Confut. c. 8. Cantacuzenus Grat. 2. Sect. 11. Hottingeri Hift. Orient. 1. 2. c. 4. Pocockii Mifcellanea, c. 7. Disputatio Christiani. c. 26, & 29. Bellonius. lib. 3. c. 9. (g) Alcoran c. 7. c. 37. c. 43. c. 44. c. 47. c. 50. c. 74. c. 77. c. 78. c. 90. &c.

dessively burning, and be surrounded with a black hot and salt Smoak, as with a Coverlid; that they should eat nothing but Briars and Thorns, and the Fruits of the Tree Zacon, which should be in their Bellies like burning Pitch. In the proposing of these Promises and Threats to the People he was very frequent and sedulous, making them to ring in their Ears on all Occasions, whereby he failed not of his End in alluring some, and affrighting others into the Snare he laid for them.

And that he might omit nothing whereby to work on their Fear, which is usually the most prevalent Passion of the Ignorant, he terrified them with the Threats of grievous Punishments in this Life, as well as in that which is to come, if they would not hearken unto him. And to this end (b) he did fet forth unto them on all Occasions, what terrible Destructions had fallen upon the Heads of fuch as would not be instructed by the Prophets. that were fent before him. How the Old World was destroyed by Water, for not being reformed at the preaching of Noah; and Sodom by Fire from Heaven, for not hearkning to Lot when fent unto them. How the Egyptians were plagued for despising Moses: and how Ad and Thamod, two ancient Tribes of the Arabs, were totally extirpated for the same reason. His Stories of the two last were Fables of his own Invention, which he related unto them after this manner; that (i) Ad the Grandson of Aram, the Son of Sem, planted himself after the Confusion of Languages in the Southern Parts of Arabia, where his Posterity falling into Idolatry, the Prophet Hud

⁽b) Alc. c. 6. c. 7. c. 11, &c. Joannes Andreas, c. 12.

⁽i) Alc. c. 7. c. 11, &c. Pocockii Spec. Hift. Arab. p. 37.

(whom the Commentators on the Alcoran will have to be Heber) was fent unto them to reclaim them unto the true Worship; but they not hearkening unto him, God fent a violent hot Wind, which in feven Days time destroyed them all, excepting only the Prophet, and some few who were reformed by him. As to Thamod, his (k) Story was, that they were an ancient Tribe of the Arabs, dwelling on the Confines of Syria, and that on their Revolt to Idolatry, God fent to them the Prophet Saleh; that on their demand of a Miracle to testify his Million, he caused a Rock to bring for a Camel in the fight of them all; that they notwithstanding in contempt wounded the Camel, and that thereupon God sent terrible Thunders, which in three Days time destroyed them all, excepting Saleh, and fome few who believed on him. And the like Fable he also told them of (1) Chaib, another Prophet of the ancient Arabs, sent to the Tribe of Madian. and how that Tribe was in like manner destroyed by Thunder; for not hearkening unto him. For the fake of these Stories (which he was very frequent in inculcating into the People, and very often repeats in his Alcoran) those who believed not on him, called him (m) a Teller of old Fables; but notwithstanding, they wrought upon the Fears of others, and by this and other fuch Artifices, he still went on to increase his Party, to which two of his Uncles, (n) Hamza and Al Abbas, at length joined themselves. But the rest of his Uncles approved not of his Designs, and although Abu Taleb still continued to befriend him, because of the Affection which he bore him, the other nine had not this regard to him, but joined with his Enemies, and opposed him all they could, as a Man that under the false Mask which he had put on, carried on dangerous Designs to the prejudice of his Country.

⁽⁴⁾ Alcoran, c. 7. c. 11. c. 26. &c. Pocockii Spec. Hist, Arab. p. 37. Hott. Hist. Orient. lib. 1. c. 3. (1) Alc. c. 7. c. 11. c. 26, &c. (m) Alcoran, c. 25, &c. (n) Joanne Andreas, c. 1.

But that which gravell'd him most, was, that his Opposers demanded to see a Miracle from him. For faid they (o) Moses and Jesus, and the rest of the Prophets, according to thy own Doctrine, worked Miraeles to prove their Mission from God; and therefore if thou be a Prophet, and greater than any that were sent before thee, as thou boastest thy self to be (p) do thou work the like Miracles to manifest it unto us. Do thou make the Dead to rife, the Dumb to speak, and the Deaf to hear; or else do thou cause Fountains to spring out of the Earth, and make this Place a Garden adorn'd with Vines and Palm-Trees, and watered with Rivers running through it into divers Channels; or else let us see come down from Heaven some of those Punishments which thou threatness us with. Or do thou make thee an House of Gold, adorn'd with Jewels and costly Furniture; or let us see the Book thou wouldest have us believe to come from Heaven, descend down to us from thence legible in our Eyes, or the Angel which thou tellest us doth bring it unto thee, and then we will believe in thy Word. This Objection he endeavour'd to evade by several Anfwers. One (q) while he tells them, he is only a Man sent to preach to them the Rewards of Paradise, and the Punishments of Hell. At another Time, (r) That their Predecessors contemned the Miracles of Saleb, and the other Prophets, and that for this Reason God would work no more among them. And a while after, that those (s) whom God had ordained to believe, should believe without Miracles, and those whom he had not ordained to believe, should not be convinced, though all those Miracles should be wrought in their sight. which they required; and that therefore they were totally needless. But this not satisfying, as being a plain Confession that he wanted that Power of Miracles, which all other Prophets had to prove their Mission, several of those that were his Followers departed from him, of which he much complains in his Alcoran. And therefore finding that this would not do, on his coming to Medina, and having there taken the Sword in hand, and gotten an Army to back his Cause, he began to sing another Note. For his Doctrine then was, (t) That God had fent Mofes and Jesus with Miracles, and yet Men would not be obedient to their Word; and therefore he had now fent him in the last place without Miracles. to force them by the Power of the Sword to do his Will: And pursuant hereto (u) he forbad his Difciples to enter into any further Disputes about his Religion; but instead thereof he commanded them to fight for it, and destroy all those who should contradict his Law, promising great Rewards in the Life to come, to fuch as should take up the Sword n this Cause, and the Crown of Martyrdom to all hose who should die fighting for it. And upon his Head, some of the Mahometan Doctors argue ery subtilly. For * say they, the Prophets of God are of divers forts, according to the divers Attributes of his divine Nature, which they are fent to shew forth. That Jesus Christ was sent to manifest the Righteousness, the Power and Knowledge of God; That he shewed forth the Righteousness of God in being impeccable; his Knowledge, in that he knew the Secrets of Mens Hearts, and foretold things to come; and his Power, in doing those miraculous Works which none else but God could. That Solomon was fent to manifest the Wisdom, the Glory, and the Majesty of God; and Moses, his Providence, and his Clemency: None of which carrying with them a Power to force Men to believe, Miracles were necessary in their Missions to induce them thereunto. But Mahomet was a Prophet, sent principally to shew forth the Fortitude of God by the Power of the Sword, which being of it felf alone fufficient to compel all Men into the Faith, without any other Power accompanying it, for this reason, say they Mahomet wrought no Miracles, because he had no need of them, the Power of the Sword, with which he was fent, of it felf alone fufficiently enabling him to accomplish his Mission, for forcing Men to believe therein. And from hence it hath become the Universal Doctrine of the Mahometans, That their Religion is to be propagated by the Sword, and that all of them are bound to fight for it. And for this reason (x) it hath been a Custom among them for their Preachers, while they deliver their Sermons, to have a Drawn Sword placed by them, to denote thereby, that the Doctrine which they teach them, was with the Sword to be defended and propagated by them.

⁽a) Alcoran, c. 2. c. 6, &c. Bidawi ad Alcorani cap. 12. (b) Alcoran, c. 17, &c. (q) Alcoran, c. 17. (r) Alc. ib.

⁽c) Alcoran, c. 6. (t) Richardi Confutatio, c. 7. Canicuzeni Apologia, 4. & Orat. 1. Sect. 11. Alcoran, c. 2. c. 3. 4, &c. (u) Alc. c. 4. Cantacuzeni Orat. 1. Sect. 12. Ahmed Ebn. Zin, Guadagnol, Tract. 2. c. 10. Sect. 11.

⁽x) Cantacuzeni Oraț. Sect. 11. Guadagnol Tract. 2. c. 5. Sect. 3.

However, it is not to be denied, but that there are feveral Miracles reckoned up, which Mahomet (y) is faid to have wrought; as, That he did cleave the Moon in two; That Trees went forth to meet him; That Water flowed from between his Fingers; That the Stones faluted him; That he fed a great Company with a little Food; That a Beam groaned at him; That a Camel complained to him; That a Shoulder of Mutton told him of its being poisoned; and several others. But those who relate them, are only fuch who are reckoned among their Fabulous and Legendary Writers. Their Learned (2) Doctors renounce them all, as doth Mahomet himself, who in several places in his (a) Alcoran owns that he wrought no Miracles. But when they are pressed how without Miracles they can prove his Mission, their common Answer is; That instead of all Miracles is the Alcoran. For (b) that Mahomet, who was an Illiterate Person, that could neither write nor read, or that any Man else by humane Wisdom alone should be able to compose a Book so excellent in Eloquence, and so excellent in Doctrine, as they will have that to be, is what they will not admit to be possible; and therefore they alledge the Excellency of the Book for the truth of all contained therein, and will have that to be a Proof equivalent to the Miracles of all the Prophets that went before him, to manifest that it came from God. And on this (c) the Impostor himfelf often insists in his Alcoran, challenging in several places of it all Men and Devils by their united Skill to compose another Book like that in Eloquence and Instruction, or else any one Chapter that can be compared in Excellency with the meanest Chapter therein: Which they taking for granted that both together cannot do, will have this to be a most clear manifestation beyond all contradiction, that this Book could come from none other but God himself, and that Mahomet from whom they received it, was his Messenger to bring it unto them.

⁽y) Abul Pharaghius, p. 104. Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 187, & 188. Hottinger. Hist. Orient. lib. 2. c. 6. Guadagnol. Tract. 2. c. 2. Sect. 2. (z) Abul Pharaghius, p. 104. Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 191, 192, &c. Hottinger. Hist. Orient. lib. 2. c. 6. (a) Alc. c. 6, &c. (b) Al. Gezali. Sepher Cozri. Bidawi. Ahmed Ebn Edris. Hottinger. Hist. Orient. lib. 2. c. 6. Pocockii Spec. Hist, Arab. p. 191, 192, &c.

As to the Particulars in this Argument alledged. it must be allowed, that the Alcoran, bating the Folly, the Confusedness and incoherency of the Matter contained therein, is as to the Stile and Language the Standard of Elegancy in the Arab Tongue; and as to Mahomet, that he was in truth. what they say, an Illiterate Barbarian (d) that could neither write nor read. But this was not so much a defect in him, as in the Tribe of which he was, with whom it was the Custom as to all manner of Literature, to continue (e) in the same Ignorance with which they came out of their Mothers Bellies. unto their Lives end. And therefore at the time when Mahomet first set up for a Prophet, there was not any one Man of Mecca that could either write or read, excepting only (f) Warakah, a Kinfman of Cadigha's, who having first turned Jew, and afterwards Christian, had learned to write Arabick in

⁽c) Alcoran, c. 2. c. 10. c. 17, &c. (d) Alc. c. 7. Joannes Andreas, c. 2. Pocockii Spec. Hift. Arab. 156. Disputatio Christiani, c. 12. Richardi Confutatio, c. 3. (e) Ebnol Athir Sharestani. Al. Motarrezi in libro Mogreb. Pocock. Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 157. (f) Al. Bochari. Pocock. ib. Hebrem

Hebrew Letters. And for this reason the Men of Mecca were called (p) the Illiterate, in opposition to the People of Medina, who being the one half Christians, and the other half Jews, were able both to write and read; and therefore were called (b) the People of the Book. And from them several of Mahomet's Followers, after he came to Medina, learnt to read and write also, which some of them had begun to learn before of Balhar the Cendian (i) who having sojourned at Anbar, a City of Erack, near Euphrates, there learnt the Art: from whence coming to Mecca; and marrying the Sister of Abuforbian, he settled there, and from him the Men of Mecca are first said to have received the Art of Letters. Among the Followers of Mahomet, Othman was the greatest Proficient herein, which advanced him afterwards to (k) be Secretary to the Impostor. But for want of Paper at first, as in a place where there was never before any occasion for it, they were forced to make use (1) of the Spade-Bones of Shoulders of Mutton, and of Shoulders of Camels, to write on; which was a device anciently made use of by other Tribes of the Arabs, who had Letters, but wanted Traffick to accommodate them with more convenient Materials for this purpose; and therefore their Books in which their Poems, and other matters they delighted in were written, (m) were only so many of those Spade-Benes tied together upon a String. This Balbar afterwards became one of Mahomet's Disciples.

¹⁸⁾ Sharestani. Pocock. Spec. Arab. Hist. p. 156. (b) Sharestani & Pocock. ib. Hottin. Hist. Orient. lib. 1. c. 1.

⁽i) Pocockii Spec. Hift. Arab. p. 157. (b) Elmacin, l. 1. c. 1. Bartholomaus Edeffenus. (l) Pocockii Spec. Hift, Arab. p. 157. (m) Ebnol Athir. Pocock. ib.

and followed him in his Wars, till poisoned at Chaibar, as shall be hereafter related.

But these Particulars being thus allowed, That the Alcoran of the Mahometans is of so elegant Stile, and the supposed Author thereof such a Rude and Hliterate Barbarian; it will be here asked, who were the Affiftants by whose help this Book was compiled, and the Imposture framed? And there will be the more reason to ask this, because the Book it self contains so many particulars of the Jewish and Christian Religion, as necessarily imply the Authors of it to be well skill'd in both; which Mahometo who was bred an Idolater, and lived fo for the first forty years of his Life, among a People totally illiterate, cannot be supposed to be. But this is a Question not so easily to be answered, because the nature of the thing required it should be concealed. Mahometan Writers, who believed in the Impostor. as they will allow nothing of this, fo to be fure will fay little of it, and the Christians who abhorred his Wickedness, are apt to say too much. For it was usual with them, as it is with all other contending Parties, to fnatch at every Story which would difparage the Religion they were against, and believe it right or wrong, if it would ferve their Purpose this way. And from hence it hath proceeded, that we have so many fabulous and ridiculous Accounts, both of Mahomet and his Imposture, go current among us, which serve only to the exposing of us to the laughter of the Mahometans, when related among them. And besides, the Scene of this Imposture being at least fix hundred Miles within the Country of Arabia, amidst those Barbarous Nations, who all immediately imbraced it, and would not afterward permit any of another Religion, fo much as to live among them; it could not at that distance distance be so well searched into by those who were most concerned to discover the Frauds of it, and therefore an exact Account cannot be expected in this Particular. However, that I may give all the satisfaction herein, that I am able, I shall here lay together whatsoever I can find in any credible Author concerning it, and give the best Judgment hereof, that the matter will admit.

That Mahomet composed his Alcoran by the held of others, was a thing well known at Mecca, when he first broach'd his Imposture there, and it was often flung in his Teeth by his Opposers, as he himself more than once complaineth. In the 25th Chapter of the Alcoran, his Words are; They [ay; That the Alcoran is nothing but a Lie of thy own Invention, and others have been assisting to thet herein: Where the Commentators say, the Persons here. meant (n), were the Servants of a certain Sword-Smith at Metca, who were Christians, with whom Mahomet was used often to converse for the better informing of himself from them in the Old and New Testament. :- And from hence it is, that * Bellonius tells us, That Mahomet found at Mecca two Christians, who had with them Copies of the Old and New Testament, and that he was much helped by them in the Composing of his Alcoran. But this is too open Work for fo fecret a Delign. They that upbraided him with his being affifted by others. meant not those whom he publickly conversed with, but the private Confederates, whom he fecretly made use of at home, in the framing of the whole Imposture, and the writing for him that Book.

* Lib. 3. c. 2.

⁽n) Liber Agar. Guadagnol, Tract. c. 10. Sect. 1. Joannes Andreas de Confusione Secta Mahometana, c. 11

The Life of Mahomet. 33

which he pretended was brought to him from Heaven by the Angel Gabriel. And what he hath in another place of his Alcoran, doth particularly point at one of those, who was then looked upon to have had a principal hand in this Matter. For in the Sixteenth Chapter his Words are; I know they will say, That a Man hath taught him the Alcoran; but whom they presume to have taught him is a Perlian by Nation, and speaketh the Persian Language. But the Alcoran is in the Arabick Tongue, full of In-Struction and Eloquence. Now, who this Persian was: Friat Richard, in his Confutation of the Mahometan Lim, helps us to understand. For in his Thirteenth Chapter of that Tract he tells us, That Mahomet being an illiterate Person, he had for his helper in the forging of his Imposture, among others, one Abdia Ben Salon, a Persian Jew, whose Name he afterwards changed, to make it correspond with the Arabick Dialect, into (p) Abdollah Ebn Salem: And Cantacuzenus, and Cardinal Cufa fay the same thing. And (a) most others that write of this Imposture, make mention of him as the chief Architect made use of by Mahomet in the framing of it. And that he was the Persian pointed at in this Passage of the Alcoran I have last mentioned, the same Friar Richard in the Sixth Chapter. of the same Tract expressy telleth us. And he is. the same Person whom Elmacinus calleth (r) Salman

⁽p) Abdiah is the same in Hebrew that Abdollah is in Arabick, i. e. the Servant of God, and Ben the same with Ebn, i. e. the Son. (7) Schickardi Taric in Protemio, p. 34. Forbefius Instruct. Hist. Theolog. lib. 4. c. 3. Spanhemius in Introductione ad Hist. Ecclefiast. ad Sec. 7. c. 6: (r) Bidawi, an eminent Commentator on the Alcoran, says, The Persian meant in the place abovementationed to have belped Mahomet, was Salman.

the Persian, who by his skill in drawing an Intrenchment at the Battle of the Ditch, faved Mahomet and all his Army, where otherwise he must have necessarily been overpowered by the number of his Enemies, and totally ruined. For he was a very cunning crafty Fellow, and fo throughly skilled in all the Learning of the Jews, that he had commenced (i) Rabbi among them. And therefore from him Mahomet seems to have received whatsoever of the Rites and Customs of the Tews he hath ingrafted into his Religion. For this making a very considerable part of it, and many of the Particulars being drawn from the abstruser parts of the Talmudic Learning, this necoffarily snews so able an helper to have been in the whole contrivance. And What Johannes Andreas, an Alfatki, or a Dottor of the Mahometan Law, turned Christian, writes of him; further clears this Matter. * For he tells us from Authentick Testimonies of the Arab Writers, in which he was thoroughly versed, that this Abdollah Ebn Salem (whom he, or rather his Interpreter, corruptly calls Abdala Celen) was for ten Years together the Person by whose Hand all the pretended Revelations of the Impostor were first written; and therefore no doubt he was a principal Contriver in the forging of them. There is extant in the end of the Latin Alcoran, published by Biblianders a Tract translated out of Arabick into Latin by Hermannus Dalmata, which by way of Dialogue between Mahomet and this Abdollah, lays before us a great many of the Fooleries of the Mahometan Religion; which Tract helps us to correct the Name which is in Friar Richard's Tract very corruptly written, as being only a Translation at the third Hand. In For that Tract of Friar Richard's which we now have, is no other than a Translation from the Greek Copy of Demetrius Cydonius, who translated it into that Language, for the use of the Emperor Cantacuzenus, from the Original Latin which is now lost.

⁽s) Dialogus inter Mahometem & Abdollam. Confusione Secta Mahometana, c. 2.

Besides this Jew, the Impostor had also a Christian Monk for his Assistant; and the many particulars in his Alcoran relating to the Christian Religion, plainly prove him to have had fuch an helper. The ophanes, Zonaras, Cedrenus, Anastasius, and the Author of the Historia Miscella, tell us of him, without giving him any other Name than that of a Nestorian Monk. But the Author of the Disputation against a Mahometan, which is epitomized in Vincentius Bellovacensi's Speculum Historicum, and from thence printed at the end of Bibliander's Latin Altoran, (u) calls him Sergius; and from thence is it, that he hath been ever fince so often spoken of by that Name among the Western Writers. But in the East he is totally unknown by it, he being never. as much as I can find, made mention of by that Name by any of their Writers. For all there that speak of this Monk, call him Bahira; and Friar Richard *, who in the Year of our Lord 1210 went to Bagdad on purpose to search into the Mystery of Mahometism, by reading their Books, and on his return wrote that judicious Confutation of it. which I have afore-mentioned (x) tells us of this Bahira as an Affistant to Mahomet in the forging of his Imposture; and so doth also (y) Cantacuzenus, Bareholemaus Edessenus; and the other Greek Author of the Confutation of Mahomet, published by Le Moyne: But not one of them fays any thing of Sergius, so that it is plain (z) that Sergius and Bahira are only two different Names of the same Person. He was a Monk of Syria; of the Sect of the Nefto-The Mahometans will have it, that he firk took notice of Mahomet, while a Boy, after that Prophetick manner as is before related; but according to that Account he would have been too old to act his part in this Imposture so many Years af-The truth of the matter is, Mahomet did not fall acquainted with him till a long while after, when he was projecting his wicked Defign in his Head, in order to the better forming of which, being very defirous to acquaint himself with the Jewish and Christian Religions, he was very inquisitive in examining into them, as he met with those that could inform him. And in one of his lourneys into Syria, either at Bostra (a) as some say, or (b) at ferusalem as others, lighting on this Bahira, and receiving great fatisfaction from him in many of those Points, which he desir'd to be informed in, did thereon contract a particular Friendship with And therefore not long after, (c) this Monk for some great Crime being excommunicated, and expell'd his Monastery, sled to Mecca to him; and being there entertain'd in his House, became his Affistant in the framing of that Imposture, which he

⁽u) C. 13. * Cantacuzeni Orat. 1. contra Mahometem. (x) Cap. 6. & c. 13.

⁽y) Orat. 1. contra Mahometem. (z) Ecchelensis Hist.

Arab. Part 1. c. 6. (a) Abul Pharaghius. Abul Feda.

Al Kodai. Al Jannabi. (b) Georgius Monachus in Disputatione cum Abusalama. (c) Theophanes, Zonaras, Richardi Confutatio, c. 13. Fortalitium Fidei lib. 4. Consid. 1.

after-

afterwards vented, and continued with him ever after; till at length the Impostor having no farther occasion of him, to secure the Secret, * put him to death. If Sergius were the Name which he had in his Monastery, Babira was that which he afterwards assum'd in Arabia, and by which he hath ever fince been mentioned in those Eastern Parts, by all that there write or speak of him. The (e) word in the Arabick Language signifieth a Camel, which after some extraordinary merit, according to the usage of the ancient Arabs, had his Ears slit, and was turned forth from the rest of the Herd, at free Pasture, to work no more. And no doubt this Monk having told the Tale of his Expulsion from his Monastery so much to his Advantage, as to make it believed at Mecca to be drawn upon him by that which was reckoned there as meritorious, had from thence this Name given him, as fuiting that Notion which they had of his Condition among them.

As to his other Helpers, if he had any such, what is said of them is so uncertain, and that so little, as is not material here to relate. We may suppose from the very nature of the Design (it being to impose a Cheat upon Mankind) that he made as sew as possible conscious to it; and the two above mention'd being sufficient for his Purpose, it doth not appear likely that he admitted any more into the Secret of it. Neither indeed is there any more room in it for another to act. For his Religion being made up of three Parts, whereof one was borrowed from the Jews, another from the ^{*} Richardi Confutatio, c. 13. Confutatio Mahometis Gr. Edita per Le Moyne. (ε) Golli Lexicon. Arab. Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 330. Hortin. Hist. Orient. lib. 1. c. 7.

Christians, and the third from the Heathen Arabs, Abdollah furnished the first of them, Babira the second, and Mahomet himself the last; so that there was no need of any other help to compleat the Imposture.

I know there are many other Particulars go current of this Matter, both as to the coining of the Forgery, and also the manner of the first propagating of it; as that the Impostor (f) taught a Bull to bring him the Alcoran on his Horns, in a publick Assembly, as if it had this way been sent to him from God; that he bred up Pidgeons to come to his Ears, to make show thereby, as if the Holy Ghosk converfed with him; and many other Stories, which being without any foundation or likelihood of Truth, I pass them over as idle Fables, not to be credited; although I find some very great Men have been too easy to swallow them; as particularly (g) Scaliger, (h) Grotius, and (i) Sionita, have that of the Pidgeons. Such Tricks as these would have been eafily feen through by the Arabians, they being Men naturally of as fubtle and acute Parts as any in the World. And therefore Mahomet never fo much as offered at any thing of this nature among them; but disclaiming all Miracles, thereby avoided the necessity of hazarding his Design upon any fuch open Cheats, where it would be foliable to be totally blasted by a Discovery. The whole of this Imposture was a thing of extraordinary Craft, carried on with all the Cunning and Caution imaginable.

⁽f) In præfatione ad Disputationem Christiani. Purchas Pilgrimage, Book 3, cap. 3. Fortalit. Fid. lib. 4. Consid. 3.
(g) In notis ad Sphæram Manilii. (b) De veritate Christians Religionis, 1 ib. 6. c. 5.
(i) In Appendice ad Geographiam Nubiensem, c. 7.

ble. The framing of the Alcoran (wherein lay the main of the Cheat) was all contrived at home in as fecret a manner as possible, and nothing hazarded abroad, but the success of preaching it to the People. And in doing of this, no Art or Cunning was wanting to make it as effectual to the End design'd as possible: And therefore whatever Stories are told of this Matter, that are inconsistent with such a Management, we may assure our selves are nothing else but Fables soolishly invented by some zealous Christians to blast the Imposture, which needed no such means for its Consutation.

But to go on with the Series of our History: In the Eighth Year of his pretended Mission, his Party growing formidable at Mecca, the (k) City passed a Decree, whereby they forbad any more to join themselves unto him. But this availed nothing to his Hurt, as long as his Uncle Abu Taleb lived. But (1) he dying within two Years after, and the chief Government of the City, on his Death, falling into the Hands of Abu Sophian, of the House of Ommia. then one of his most violent Opposers, his Enemies laid hold of this Advantage to renew their Opposition against him, and prosecuted it with that fuccess, that they soon put a stop to the further progress of his Imposture at Mecca. Party, after he had now lost his Protector, and they became thus headed against him, soon grew to that Strength, and appear'd with that Violence on all Occasions to oppose his Designs, that for fear of them no more new Proselytes durst joyn themselves unto him; and many of those who had afore declared for him, having done it for no other end, but to joyn with a Party where they thought they might best make their Interest, as soon as they faw the Hopes which they had of his prevailing, to be again blasted by this Opposition, which they judged too strong for him to weather, again drew back and appear'd no more with him. And therefore Mahomet seeing his Hopes of carrying his Defign at Mecca thus in a manner totally crush'd, began to look abroad where else he might fix. That which he drove at, was to have gained fuch a Party there, as might be strong enough to overpower the rest, and subject the whole City to him; and then, after having possessed himself of such a Post, from thence to have armed his Disciples for the gaining him that Empire over the rest of the Arabs, which he projected. And to this purpose was it, that he so often inculcated it into them, that his Doctrine was to be propagated by the Sword, and that all that would receive the Faith which he preached, must fight for it. But now seeing no likelihood of accomplishing this at Mecca, he set his Thoughts on work how to gain some other Town, where to arm his Party for this Design. And therefore his Uncle Abbas living most an end at (m) Tayif, (another Town of Hagiaz, at fixty Miles distance from Mecca towards the East) and having a great Interest there (n) he took a Journey thither, under his Wing to propagate his Imposture in that Place, in order to the making of himself Master of it. But after a Month's stay, having not been able, with all his Endeavour to gain fo much as one Profelyte almong them, he again returned to Mecca to make the best of his Party there, and wait fuch farther Advantages as Time and Opportunity might offer him for the accomplishing of what he designed. And now Cadigha, his Wife, being * dead, after she had lived Two and twenty Years with him; to strengthen himself the more, he took Two other Wives in her stead, (p) Ayesha. the Daughter of Abu Beker; and Sewda, the Daughter of Zama; and a while after he added to them (a) Haphsa, the Daughter of Omar; whereby making himself Son in law to Three of the Principal Men of his Party, he did by that Alliance the more firmly tie them to his Interest. Ayesha was then (r) but fix Years old, and therefore he did not bed her till two Years after, when she was full eight Years old. For it is usual in those hot Countries. (s) as it is all India over, which is in the same Clime with Arabia, for Women to be ripe for Marriage at that Age, and also bear Children the Year following.

⁽¹⁾ Elmacin. lib. 1. c. 1. (1) Elmacin. lib. 1. c. 1.

⁽m) For which reason it hath been ever since, even to this Day, called Abbas Beladi, i. e. the Town of Abbas, Golii Notæ ad Alfraganum, p. 100.

(n) Elmacin. lib. 1.c. 1.

The Life of Mahomet. 41

In the twelfth Year of his pretended Mission, is placed the Mesra, that is, his famous Night-journey from Mecca to Jerusalem, and from thence to Heaven, of which he tells us in the 17th Chapter of his Alcoran. For the People calling on him for Miracles to prove his Mission, and he being able to work none, to salve the Matter, he invents this Story of his Journey to Heaven; which must be acknowledged to have Miracle enough in it, by all those who have Faith to believe it. And yet it being believ'd by all that profess the Mahometan Religion, as a main Article of their Faith, and as such fet down in all the Books of their Authentick Traditions, how abfurd foever it be, fince my Defign is to give as full an Account as I can of this Man's Imposture, it obligeth me to relate it. His Relation of it is as followeth:

(*) Elmacin. Abul Pharaghius. Abul Feda, &c.

⁽p) Elmacin. ib. (q) Gentii Notæ ad Musladinum Sadum, p. 568. (r) Joannes Andreas, c. 12. Sionita in Appendice ad Geographiam Nubiensem, c. 8. Guadagnol, Tract. 2. c. 10. Sect. 12. (1) Therenot's Travels, Part 3. lib. 1. c. 49. ing

(t) At . Night as he lay in his Bed with his best beloved Wife Ayesha, he heard a knocking at his Door, whereon arising, he found there the Angel Gabriel, with seventy pair of Wings expanded from his Sides, whiter than Snow, and clearer than Crystal, and the Beast Alborak standing by him, which they say is the Beast on which the Prophets used to ride, when they were carried from one Place to another, upon the Execution of any Divine Command. Mahomet describes it to be a Beast as white as Milk, and of a mixt Nature between an Ass and a Mule, and also of a Size between both, and of that extraordinary swiftness, that his passing from one Place to another, was as quick as that of Lightning; and from hence it is that he hath the Name of Alborak, that Word fignifying Lightning in the Arabick Tongue. As foon as Mahomet appear'd at the Door, the Angel Gabriel most kindly embracing him, did with a very sweet and pleasing Countenance salute him in the Name of God, and told him that he was fent to bring him unto God into Heaven, where he should see strange Mysteries,

⁽t) Rodericus Toletanus, c. 5. Joannes Andreas, c. 8. Richardi Confutatio Legis Saracenica. c. 1. & c. 7. Cantacuzeni Orat. 4. Guadagnol, Tract. 2. c. 2. Sect. 2. Bellonius, l. 3. c. 7. Bocharti Hierozoic. Part 2. Lib. 6. c. 13. Liber Agas. Zamachshari, & Bidawi in Commentariis ad c. 17. & c. 53. Alcorani, Fortalit. Fid. lib. 4. Confid. 4. which

The Life of Mahomet. 43

which were not lawful to be seen by any other Man, and then bid him get upon the Alborak. But the Beast, it seems, having long lain idle from the time of Christ till Mahomet (there having been no Prophet in all that Interval to employ him) was grown so resty and skittish, that he would not stand still for Mahomet to get up upon him, till at length he was forced to bribe him to it, by promifing him a Place in Paradife; whereon having quietly taken him on his Back, the Angel Gabriel leading the way with the Bridle of the Beast in his Hand, he carried him from Mecca to Jerusalem in the twinkling of an Eye. On his coming thither, all the Prophets and Saints departed, appeared at the Gate of the Temple to falute him, and from thence attending him into the chief Oratory, defired him to pray for them, and then departed. Whereupon Mahomet with the Angel Gabriel going out of the Temple, found there a Ladder of Light ready fixed for them, which they immediately ascended, leaving the Alborak there tied at a Rock till their return.

On their arrival at the First Heaven, the Angel Gabriel knocked at the Gate, and having informed the Porter who he was, and that he brought Mahomet the Friend of God with him by the Divine Command, the Gates were immediately opened, which he describes to be of a prodigious largeness. This first Heaven, he tells us, was all of pure Silver, and that he there saw the Stars hanging from it by Chains of Gold, each being of the bigness of Mount Noho, near Mecca in Arabia; and that in these Stars Angels kept watch and ward for the Guard of Heaven, to keep off the Devils from approaching near it, lest they should over-hear and know what was there done. On his first entring into this Heaven, he faith he met an old decrepit Man, and this was our first Father Adam, who immediately embraced him, giving God thanks for fo great a Son, and then recommended himself to his Prayers. As he entred further, he saw a multitude of Angels of all manner of Shapes; some in that of Men, others in that of Birds, and others in that of Beasts of all manner of forts. And among those who appeared in the feveral Shapes of Birds, he there faw a Cock of Colour as white as Snow, and of fo prodigious a bigness, that his Feet standing upon the first Heaven, his Head reached up to the fecond, which was at the distance of five hundred Years Journey from it, according to the rate as we usually travel here on Earth. But others among them, as they relate this Matter from their Prophet, hyperbolize much higher concerning it, telling us, that the Head of this Cock reacheth up through all the Seven Heavens, as far as the Throne of God, which is above seven times higher; and in the Description of him, fay, that his Wings are all over deck'd with Carbuncles and Pearls, and that he extends the one of them to the East, and the other to the West, at a distance proportionable to his heighth. Concerning all these, the Impostor tells us the Angel Gabriel inform'd him, that they were Angels which did from thence intercede with God for all Living Creatures on the Earth. . That those who interceded for Men. had there the Shape of Men; that those who interceded for Beafts, the Shape of Beafts; and those who interceded for Birds, the Shape of Birds, according to their feveral kinds. And that as to the Great Cock, that he was the chief Angel of the Cocks; that every Morning God singing an holy Hymn, this Cock constantly joined with him in it by his crowing, which is so loud, that all hear it that that are in Heaven and Earth, except Men and Fairies, and then all the other Cocks that are in Heaven and Earth crow also. But when the Day of ludgment draws near, then God shall command him to draw in his Wings, and crow no more, which shall be a sign, that that Day is at hand, to all that are in Heaven and Earth, excepting still Men and Fairies, who being afore deaf to his crowing, shall not then be sensible of his Silence from And this Cock the Mahometans look on to be in that great favour with God, that whereas it is a common faving among them, That there are three Voices which God always hears; they reckon the first the Voice of him that is constant in reading the Alcoran; the second, the Voice of him that early every Morning prayeth for the Pardon of his Sins; and the third, the Voice of this Cock when he croweth, which they fay is ever most acceptable unto him.

All this stuff of the Cock, Abdollah helped Mahomet to, out of the Talmudifts. For it is all borrowed from them, with some little Variation only, to make it look not totally the same. For in the Tract Bava Bathra of the Babylonish Talmud, we have a Story of such a prodigious Bird, called (u) Ziz, which standing with his Feet upon the Earth, reacheth up unto the Heavens with his Head, and with the spreading of his Wings darkneth the whole Orb of the Sun, and causeth a total Eclipse thereof. This Bird the Chaldee Paraphrast on the * Psalms says, is a Cock, which he describes of the same bigness, and tells us that he crows before the ⁽u) Buxtorfii Lexicon Rabbinicum in voce. ? ?. * Pfal. 50. v. 11. & Pfal. 80, y. 14.

Lord. And the Chaldee Paraphrast on (x) Job associated us of him, and of his crowing every Morning before the Lord, and that God giveth him Wisdom for this purpose. What is farther said of this Bird of the Talmudists, may be seen in Buxtors's Synogoga Judaica, cap. 50. and in Purchas's Pilgrimage,

lib. 2. cap. 20.

From this First Heaven, the Impostor tells us, he ascended up into the Second, which was at the distance of five hundred Years Journey above it, and this he makes to be the distance of every one of the Seven Heavens each above the other. Here the Gates being opened unto him, as in the First Heaven, at his entrance he met Noah, who rejoicing much at the fight of him, recommended himself to his Prayers. In this Heaven, which was all made of pure Gold, the Impostor tells us he saw twice as many Angels as in the former, and among them one of a prodigious greatness. For his Feet being placed on this Second Heaven, his Head reached to the Third.

From this Second Heaven he ascended up into the Third, which was made of Precious Scones; where at the Entrance he met Abraham, who also recommended himself to his Prayers. And there he saw a vast many more Angels than in the former Heaven, and among them another great one of so prodigious a size, that the distance between his two Eyes was as much as Seventy thousand Days Journey, according to our rate of travelling here on Earth. But here Mahomet was out in his Mathematicks; for the distance between a Man's Eyes being in proportion to his heighth but as one to see venty two, according to this rate, the heighth of this Angel must have been near fourteen thousand Years Journey, which is four times as much as the heighth of all his Seven Heavens together, and therefore it is impossible such an Angel could ever stand within any one of them. But notwithstanding this, here he placeth him, and in his description of him, tells us, that he had before him a large Table. in which he was continually writing in, and blotting out; and that having asked the Angel Gabriel of him, he was informed by him that this was the Angel of Death, who continually writes into the Table, which he had before him, the Names of all that are to be born, and there computes the Days of their Life, and as he finds they have compleated the number assigned them, again blots them out, and that whoever hath his Name thus blotted out by him, immediately dies.

⁽x) Ad cap. 3. v. 7. & ad cap! 38. v. 36. & ad cap. 39. v. 16.

From hence he ascended up into the Fourth Heaven, which was all of Emerald; where at the Entrance he met Joseph the Son of Jacob, who recommended himself to his Prayers. And in this Heaven he after saw a vastly larger number of Angels than in the former, and among them another great Angel, as high as from this Fourth Heaven to the Fifth, who was continually weeping, and making great lamentation and mourning; and this, the Angel Gabriel told him, was for the Sins of Men, and the destruction which they did thereby bring upon themselves.

From hence he ascended up into the Fifth Heaven, which was made of Adamant, where he found Mofes, who recommended himself to his Prayers; and there also he saw a much greater number of Angels than in the former Heaven.

From hence he ascended up into the Sixth Hear ven, which was all of Carbuncle, where he found John the Baptist, who recommended himself to his Prayers. And here he also saw the number of Angels much increased beyond what he had seen in any of the former Heavens.

From hence he ascended up into the Seventh Heaven, which was all made of Divine Light, and here he found Jesus Christ; where it is to be observed he alters his Stile. For he faith not, that Felm Christ recommended himself to his Prayers, but that he recommended himself to Jesus Christ, desiring him to pray for him; whereby he acknowledgeth him certainly to be the greater. But it was his usage through the whole Scene of his Imposture, thus to flatter the Christians on all Occasions. Here he saith: he found a much greater number of Angels than in all the other Heavens besides, and among them one Extraordinary Angel having seventy thousand Heads, and in every Head seventy thousand. Tongues, and every Tongue uttering seventy. thousand distinct Voices at the same time, with which he continued Day and Night incessantly praising God.

The Angel Gabriel having brought him thus far, told him, That it was not permitted him to go any farther, and therefore directed him to ascend up the rest of the way to the Throne of God by himself, which he saith he performed with great difficulty, passing through Waters and Snow, and many other such difficult Passages, till he came where he heard a Voice saying unto him, O Mahomet, salute thy Creator; from whence ascending higher, he came into a place, where he saw a vast Extension of Light of that exceeding Brightness, that his Eyes could not bear it, and this was the Habitation of the Almighty, where his Throne was placed, on the right right side of which, he says, God's Name and his own were written in these Arabic Words, La ellah ellallah Mohammed resul ollah, i. e. there is no God. but God, and Mahomet is his Prophet. Which is the Creed of the Mahometans; which Words he also he found written upon all the Gates of the Seven Heavens, which he passed through. ing approached to the Presence of God, as (y) near as within two Bow-shots, he tells us he saw him sitting on his Throne, with a covering of seventy thoufand Vails before his Face; That on his drawing thus near, in fign of his Favour, he put forth his Hand, and laid it upon him, which was of that exceeding Coldness, that it pierced to the very Marrow of his Back, and he could not bear it. That after this, God entring into a very familiar Converse with him, revealed unto him a great many hidden Mysteries, made him understand the whole of his Law, and gave him many things in charge concerning his instructing Men in the knowledge of it; and in conclusion, bestowed on him feveral Privileges above the rest of Mankind. that he should be the perfectest of all Creatures; that at the Day of Judgment he should be honoured and advanced above all the rest of Mankind; that he should be the Redeemer of all that believe in him a that he should have the knowledge of all Languages; and lastly, that the Spoils of all whom he should conquer in War, should belong to him alone. And then returning, he found the Angel Gabriel tarrying for him in the place where he left him; who conducting him back again through all the Seven Heavens the same way that he brought him, did set.

⁽y) Alcoran, c. 53.

him again upon the Alborack, which he left tied at fexusalem; and then taking the Bridle in his Hand, conducted him back to Mecca in the same manner as he brought him thence, and all this within the space of the tenth part of one Night.

On his relating this Extravagant Fiction to the People the next Morning after he pretended the thing happen'd, it was received by them as it deferved, with a general hoot; (a) some laughed at the ridiculousness of the Story, and others taking indignation at it, cryed out shame upon him for telling them fuch an abominable Lye, and by way of reproach, bid him ascend up to Heaven by daylight there immediately before them all, that they might see it with their Eyes, and then they would believe him. And even of his Disciples, a great many were so ashamed of him for this Story, that (b) they left him thereon; and more would have followed their Example, but that (c) Abu Beker came in to put a stop to the defection, by vouching the truth of all that Mahomet had related, and profelled his firm belief to the whole of it; for which reason he had ever after the Title (d) of Assadick, that is, the fust, because of the extraordinary Merit of his Faith in this particular. And whoever becomes a Mahometan, must have the same Faith also; this Story being as firmly believed by all of that Religion, as any thing in the Gospel is by us Christians. Only there has been this Question moved among them, whether it (e) were only a Vision of the Night, or a real Journey. Those that would salve the absurdity of it, would have it only be a Vision, and that most of the particulars of it are to be resolved into Figure and Allegon, but the major Vote hath carried it for a real Journey; and to this Sense it being now pinn'd down, there is no one among them that dares in the least to doubt thereof.

⁽a) Cantacuzen. Orat. 4. Richardi Confutatio Legis Saracenica, c. 14. Hott. Hist. Orient, lib. 2. c. 6. (b) Joannes Andreas, c. 8. Hott. ib. Friar Richard, and Cantacuzenus fay, they were a thousand that lest him on this occasion. (c) Hott. Hist. Orient, lib. 2. c. 6. (d) Elmacin. lib. 1. c. 2. dicit eum sic vocatum esse propter verificationem Mesra.

The Imposture was never in greater danger of being totally blasted, than by this ridiculous Fable, such a stumbling-block did it lay even before those of his own Party, and therefore he needed to interpose the utmost of his Art to support the Credit of it; for which purpose he not only got his Friend Abu Beker to be a Voucher to it; but also brings in God himself in two places of his Alcoran bearing witness thereto, that is, in the Chapter of the Children of Israel, and in the Chapter of the Star; in the last of which he makes God to swear by the Star to the truth of it; that Mahomer related nothing in this ·Story, but what he had feen; that he was admitted to approach him in the highest Heavens, within the length of two Bow-shots; and had seen the great Wonders of the Lord, and had many hidden Mysteries there revealed unto him; and that therefore Men ought not to dispute any more against him concerning it.

But how ridiculous soever the Story may appear, Mahomet had his Design therein, beyond barely telling such a miraculous Adventure of himself to the People. Hitherto he had only given them the Alterian, which was his written Law, and had owned himself no farther than barely the Messenger of God to deliver it unto them, telling them that it was brought to him by the Angel Gabriel; and that as he received it to he published it unto them, without offering army Comment, Explication, or additional Interpretation of his own concerning it; and therefore when gravelled with any objection from his Adversaries against it (as he often was while at Mecca, where he was continually teazed and perplexed with some or other of them) his usual refuge was in this Saying, That the Alcoran was (*) God's Book, and that He only could explain the meaning of it; and it was Wisdom in him at first not to assume any farther. But now learning from his Friend Abdollah, that the Fews besides the written Law dictated by God himself, had also another Law called the Oral Law, and given with it (as they pretend) to Moses himself while in the Mount, and from him delivered to the Elders of the People, and from them down to after Ages by Oral Tradition; and understanding also that this Law was in as great Authority with them, as the other,. and that it had its whole Foundation in the Sayings and Dictates which were pretended to be from Moles, and preserved by the Memories of those who conversed with him; he had a desire for the future to advance his Authority to the same pitch. and make all his Sayings and Dictates go for Oracles among his Muslemans, as well as those which were pretended to be from Moses, did among the Jews. And for this end chiefly was it that he intended this Story of his Journey to Heaven. For could

⁽e) Hottingeri Hift. Orient. lib. 2. c. 6.

^(*) Alcoran, c. 3. &c. Richardi Confutatio, c. 17. Cantacuzeni Orat. 1. feet. 3. & 5. Ecchelensis Eutych. vindicat. p. 383.

The Life of Mahomet. 53

he once make it believed among his Followers, that he had there such a Converse with God as Moses had with him in the Mount, and was there fully instructed by him in the knowledge of all Divine Truths. as this Story pretends he was, he thought he should therein have a sufficient Foundation to build this pretence upon, and might by a just consequence from it, claim the whole which he aimed at: and he was not mistaken herein. For how ridiculous foever the thing at first appeared, yet in the refult he carried his Point, and obtained all that by the Project, which he proposed to himself from it. For the whole of it at length going down with those who had swallowed the rest of his Imposture, from that time all his Sayings became looked on as Sacred Truths brought down from Heaven, and every word which at any time drop'd from fo enlightned a Person (as this Story supposeth him to be) as well as every Action which he did, any way relating to his Religion, were all carefully observed by them; which being after his death all (f) collected together from the Memoirs of those who conversed with him, make up those Volumes of Traditions from him, which they call the Sonnah, which are with the Mahometans the same in respect of the Alcoran, that the Oral Law among the Jews is in respect of the Written. And as among the Jews there are many Books, in which this Oral Law is recited, explained and digested under several Heads and Chapters by many different Authors among their Rabbies, who have employed their

E 3

⁽f) Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 298, & 299. Joannes Andreas, c. 3. Bellonius, lib. 3. c. 4. Hottingeri Bibliotheca Orientalis, c. 2. Ecchelensis Eutych. vindicat. c. 27. Gentii Notæ ad Musladinum Sadum, p. 578.

Pains and Studies in this matter; fo also are there the like number of Books among the Mahometans concerning their Sonnah, (g) in which all the Sayings and Doings of Mahomet, relating to his Religion, as also the Constitutions of the Seniors, (that is, of the first Caliphs that succeeded him, especially the four first) concerning the same, are collected, explained, and digested under several Heads or common Places, by the Compilers of them, which Books make up the fum of their Theology, as well Speculative as Practical; and in them indeed is contained the whole of their Religion, as now practised among them. And therefore so much of the Imposture which I now undertake to give an account of. being in these Traditions, and they all founded upon this Journey of Mahomet to Heaven, where he pretended to have been instructed in them by God himself; this sufficiently justifieth my being thus long in relating his fabulous Story of it.

But how fabulous and absurd soever this Story be, the Socinians, who have in so many things copied after this Impostor, have not stuck to borrow this also from him. For the many Texts of Scripture which tell us of our Saviour's coming to us from the Heavens above, manifestly proving his Existence there in his Divinity, before the assuming of his Humanity here on Earth (which they impiously deny), to solve the matter, they have by just such another Story as this of Mahomet, carried him to Heaven, a little before the taking of his Ministry upon him, there to be instructed by God himself in the Doctrines which he was to teach; and refer all that is said in Holy Scripture of his coming from Heaven, to this his Journey thither of their own feigning. Which shews how miserable a shift they are reduced to, for the support of that Impiety which they assert. For take but this from them, and it must all necessarily fall to the ground.

⁽g) Ebnol Athir, Ebnol Kahai, Pocock, ib.

After his publishing this Fiction, and the revolt of fo many of his Disciples, as happen'd thereon, his Adversaries grew in strength so fast upon him. that he could no longer protect those who adhered to him, as he had hitherto done; but some of them, to the number of about an hundred Persons, having made themselves more than ordinary obto the Government, by some practices against it, (b) were forced to fly from Mecca to Nagash King of Ethiopia, where Mahomet's Letters, which they carried with them, obtained their protection, though the Men of Mecca sent two of their principal Citizens after them in an Embassito that King, to demand them to be delivered unto And Mahomet, with the rest that tarried behind, found it very difficult for them to sublist any longer there. For after the departure of fo many of his faithfullest Adherents into this Exile. this farther diminution of his Number, made him still less able to withstand these Insults which his Adversaries were continually on all occasions making upon him. But what he loft at Mecca, he got at Medina, then called Tathreb (i) a City lying at the Northern End of Hagiuz, two hundred and seventy Miles distant from Mecca, which being inhabited, (k) the one part by Jews, and the other part by Heretical Christians, it seems these two disferent Parties not well agreeing in the same City, the Factions and Feuds that arose between them, drove one of the Parties to Mahomet; and on the Thirteenth Year (1) of his pretended Mission, there came to him from thence Seventy three Men, and two Women, who embraced his Imposture, and fwore Fealty unto him, whereon he chose Twelve out of them, whom he retained a-while with him at Mecca to instruct them in his New Religion, and then fent them back again to Yathreb, to be as his Twelve Apostles, there to propagate it in that Town; in which they laboured with that Success, that in a short time they drew over a great Party of the Inhabitants to embrace the Imposture; of which Mahomet receiving an account, resolved to retire, thither, as finding Mecca now grown too hot for him. For the chief Men of the City, finding that Mahomet's indefatigable Industry and Cunning still kept up his Party, do what they could to suppress it, resolved without farther delay to strike at the Root, and prevent the farther spreading of the Mischief (m) by cutting off him that was the chief Author of it. Of which he having received full and early Intelligence, and finding no other way to avoid the Blow but to fly from it, ordered all his Party, whom he could prevail with to accompany him in his Banishment (n), secretly in the

⁽b) Abul Feda. Ebnol Athir, Kamus, Pocockii Spec. Hift. Arab. p. 172. Ecchelensis Eutych. Vindicat. c. 27. Golii Notæ ad Alsaganum, p. 53. (i) Geographia Nubiensis Clim. 2. Part 5. Golii Notæ ad Alfraganum, p. 98.

⁽b) Sharestani Disputatio Christiani, c. 4. Joannes Andreas, c. 1. Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 137. (1) Elmaçin. Lib. 1. c. 1. (m) Alcoran, c. 8. Joannes Andreas, c. 1. Bidawi Comment, ad Alcorani c. 8. Abunazar. Hottingeri Historia Orientalis, lib. 2. c. 5, (n) Elmacin, ib. Abul Pharaghius, Abul Feda, &c.

The Life of Mahomet. 57

Evening to withdraw out of the City, and retire to Yathreb. And when he had seen them all gone, he and (o) Abu Beker followed after, leaving only Ali behind, who having set in order some Affairs that detained him, came to them on the third day after. As soon as his Flight was publickly known, Parties were sent out to pursue after him, and he difficultly escaped them (p) by hiding himself for some time in a Cave, till the heat of the pursuit was over.

On the (q) 12th Day of the Month, which the Arabs call the former Rabia, that is on the 24th of our September, he came to Tathreb, and was there received with great Acclamations by the Party which called him thither. But whether this Party were of the Jews, or the Christians, I find not said in any Author; only if we may conjecture from the great kindness which at this time he expressed towards the Christians, and the implacable hatred which he ever after bore the Jews, it will from hence appear, that the former were the Friends that invited him thither, and the latter the oppofite Party that were Enemies unto him. what he faith of each of them in the fifth Chapter of his Alcoran, which was one of the first which he published after his coming to Yathreb, may seem fully to clear the Matter. For his Words there are, Thou shalt find the Jews to be very great Enemies to the true Believers; and the Christians to have great Inclination and Amity towards them, for they have

⁽o) Elmacin. ib. Clenardi Epist. lib. 1. p. 52. (p) Alcoran, c. 9. Bidawi in Comment. ad illud Caput, & ad cap. 16. Hottingeri Hist: Orient. lib. 2. c. 5. (q) Elmacin. lib. 1. c. 1. Golii Notæ ad Alfraganum, p. 15. Ahmed Ebn Yufeph. Pocock. Spec, Hist. Arab. p. 174.

Priests and Religious that are humble, who have Eyes full of Tears when they hear mention of the Doctrine which God hath inspired into thee, because of their knowledge of the Truth, and say, Lord we believe in thy Law, write us in the number of them who profess thy Unity. Who shall hinder us from believing in God, and the Truth wherein we have been instructed? We desire with Passion, O Lord, to be in the number of the Just. By this we may see what a deplorable Decay the many Divisions and Distractions which then reigned in the Eastern Church, had there brought the Christian Religion into, when its Professors could so easily desert it, for that gross Imposture which an Illiterate Barbarian proposed unto them. And indeed it is no strange thing for Men, when once they have deferted the Orthodox Profession of the Christian Faith, to flee from one Error to another, till at length, by several Changes in Religion, they change the whole of it away, and give themselves up to total Impiety. For we see it daily practifed among us.

On Mahomet's first coming to (r) Tathreb, he lodged in the House of Chalid Abu Job, one of the chief Men of the Party that called him thither, till he had built himself an House of his own, which he immediately set about, and adjoining thereto also erected a Mosque at the same time for the exercise of his new-invented Religion; and it is recorded as an Instance of his Injustice, that he (s) violently disposses different actions of the Children of an Inserior Artificer a little before deceased, of the Ground on which it stood, and so sounded this first Fabrick for his Worship, with the like wick-edness as he did his Religion. And having thus settled himself in this Town, he continued there ever after, to the time of his Death. For which reason it thenceforth losing the Name of Yathreb, became called (t) Medinato'l nabi, i. e. The City of the Prophet, and simply Medina, by which Name it hath been ever fince called, even unto this Day.

⁽r) Elmacin, lib. 1. c. 1. Abul Feda, &c. tatto Christiani, c. 4.

⁽¹⁾ Dispu-

From this flight of Mahomet, the (u) Hegira, which is the Æra of the Mahometans, begins its Computation. It was first appointed by Omar the Third Emperor of the Saracens, on this (w) occasion. There happened a Contest before him about a Debt of Money: The Creditor had from his Debtor a Bill, wherein he acknowledged the Debt, and obliged himself to pay it on such a Day of such a Month. The Day and the Month being pass'd, the Creditor sues his Debtor before Omar for the Money. The Debtor acknowledged the Debt, but denied the Day of Payment to be yet come, alledging the Month in the Bill mentioned, to be that Month in the Year next ensuing; but the Creditor contended that it was that Month in the Year last past; and for want of a Date to the Bill. it being impossible to decide this Controversy, Omar called his Council together, to confider of a Method how to prevent this Difficulty for the future: where it was decreed. That all Bills and other instruments should ever after have inserted into them

⁽t) Geographia Nubienfis Clim. 2. part 5. Appen. ad eandem cap. 8. Golii Notæ ad Alfraganum, p. 98. Abul Feda, Alkamus, &c. (u) Alfraganus cap. 1. Golii Notæ ad eundem, p. 53. Elmacin. lib. c. 1. & c. 3. Eutychius. Abul Pharaghius, Abul Feda, &c. Pocockii Spec. Hift. Arab. p. 172, 173. (v) Ecchelenfis Hift. Arab. Part 1, c. 10.

the Date both of the Day of the Month, and also of the Year, in which they were figned. And as to the Year, he having consulted with Harmuzan, a Learned Persian then with him, by his Advice ordained all Computations to be made for the future from the Flight of Mahomet from Mecca to Medina. And for this reason this Era was called the Hegira, which in the Arabick Language signifieth a Flight. It takes its beginning from the fixteenth Day of July, in the Year of our Lord Six hundred twenty and two. And ever fince this Decree of Omar (which happen'd in the eighteenth Year of it) it hath constantly been used among the Mahometans, in the same manner as the Computation from the Incarnation of our Lord Christ is with us Christians. The Day that Mahomet left Mecca. was on (x) the first of the Former Rabia, and he came to Medina on the (y) twelfth of the same But the Hegira begins two Months before, from the first of Moharram. For that being the first Month of the Arabian Year, Omar would make no Alteration as to that, but anticipated the Computation fifty nine Days, that he might begin his Ara from the beginning of that Year in which this Flight of the Impostor happened, which gave Name thereto. Till the appointing of this Ara, it was usual with the Arabians to compute from the last great War they were engag'd in. And at Mecca the Era of the Elephant, and the Ara of the Impious War, being those which they computed by all the Time of Mahomet, I shall give an Account of them.

⁽x) Golii Notæ ad Alfraganum, p. 52, & 55. (y) Elmacin, lib. 1. c. 1.

The Æra of the Elephant had its Beginning from (z) a War which the Inhabitants of Mecca had with the Ethiopians. It happened in that very Year in which Mahomet was born, on this Occasion. About fifty Years before the Time of Mahomet; there reigned over the Homerites, an ancient Nation of the Arabs, lying to the South of Mecca, a certain King called (a) Du Namas, who having embraced the Jewish Religion, persecuted the Christian, which had been planted there for at least three hundred Years before, and did the utmost he was able to extirpate it out of his Dominions. For which purpose he made him a deep Ditch or Furnace in the Earth, and after having heated it with Fire, caused all those of the Christian Religion to be thrown thereinto, who would not renounce their Faith, and turn to Judaism. During which Persecution the (b) Arabian Writers tell a very memorable Story of a Christian Woman, who being brought to the Furnace with a Son of hers very young, whom she carried in her Arms, was at the fight of the Fire fo affrighted, she drew back, as if she would rather chuse to comply with the Persecutors, and renounce her Faith, than thus perish for it; at which the Child cried out, Fear not, Mother, to dye for your Religion, for then after this Fire you shall never feel any other. Whereon the Mother being again encouraged, went on and compleated her Martyrdom. This Persecution drove several of the Homerite Chrifians to fly into Ethiopia for safety; where making their Complaints to the King, who was a Christian,

⁽²⁾ Al Kodai, Golii Notæ ad Alfraganum, p. 34. Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 173, & 174. (a) Abul Feda, Al Masudi, Ecchelensis Hist. Arab. part 1. c. 10. Pocock. Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 62. (b) Al Masudi Ecchelensis, ib.

of the cruel Persecution of Du Nawas against them; prevailed with him to fend Aryat his Uncle with an Army of Seventy Thousand Men for their Relief: (c) who having overthrown Du Nawas in Battle, pursued him so hard that he forced him into the Sea, where he perished. Whereon the Kingdom of the Homerites fell into the Hands of the Ethiopians, and Aryat governed it twenty Years. After him succeeded Abraham Al Ashram, who having built a famous (d) Church at Sanaa, the chief City of the Homerites, abundance of Arabians reforted thither to the Christian Worship, so that the Temple of Mecca began to be neglected, and the Heathen Worship there, hitherto performed with so great Concourse from all Parts of Arabia, to grow into decay: At which the Men of Mecca were exceedingly disturbed. For they had the chief of their support from the great resort of Pilgrims who came thither every Year from all Parts of Arabia to worship their Heathen Deities, and perform their annual folemn Ceremonies unto them. And therefore to express their Indignation against this Church, which fo much threatened their main Interest with total Ruin, some of them went to Sanaa, and getting privately into the Church, did in a most contumelious manner defile it all over with their Ex-At which Abraham was so incensed. that to revenge the Affront, he swore the Destruction of the Temple of Mecca: And accordingly to effect it; marched thither with a great Army, and

⁽²⁾ Al Jannabi, Ahmed Ebn Yusef, Ecchelensis Hist. Arabi part. 2. c. r. Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 63. (d) Abul Feda, Al Jannabi, Ahmed Ebn Yusef, Zamachshari, Bidawi, & Jallalani in Commentariis ad cap. 105. Alcorani. Pococi Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 64. Golii Nota ad Alfraganum, p. 546 besieged

The Life of Mahomet. 63

besieged the City. But not being able to compass his End, (I suppose for want of Provision for his numerous Forces in fo defart and barren a Country) he was forced to march back again with Loss and Difgrace; and because he had several Elephants in his Army, for that Reason this was called, The War of the Elephant; and the Ara by which they reckoned from it, The Ara of the Elephant. And to this War it is that the 105th Chapter of the Alcoran, called the Chapter of the Elephant, doth relate; where Mahomet tells us, How the Lord treated them that came mounted upon Elephants to ruin the Temple of Mecca, and that he defeated their treacherous Design, and sent against them great Armies of Birds, which threw down Stones upon their Heads, and made them like Corn in the Field, which is destroyed and trodden down by the Beafts. Where (e) the Commentators of the Alcoran tell us, That to preserve the Temple of Mecca from the intended Destruction, God sent against the Ethiopians great Armies of Birds, each of which carried three Stones, the one in the Mouth, and the other two in the two Feet, which they threw down upon their Heads; and that those Stones, although not much bigger than Pease, were yet of that weight, that falling upon the Helmet, they pierced that and the Man through; and that on each of them was written the Name of him that was to be flain by it; and that the Army of the Ethiopians being thus destroyed, the Temple of Mecca was faved. For Mahomet having resolved to continue that Temple in its former Reputation, and make it the chief place of his new invented Worship, as it had been before of the Heathen, coined this Miracle among many others, on purpose to gain it the greater Veneration in the Minds of his deluded Followers, although there might be several then alive, who were able to give him the Lie thereto, it being but sifty four Years before the beginning of the Hegira, that this War happened. For it was the very Year (f) in which Mahomet was born. But perchance this Chapter came not forth in publick, till Othman's Edition of the Alcoran, which was many Years after, when all might be dead that could remember any thing of this War, and the Fable thereby out of danger of being contradicted by any of those who knew the contrary.

⁽e) Zamachshari, Bidawi, Jallalani, &c.

The £ra of the Impions War began from the twentieth Year of the £ra of the Elephant, and had its Name from a terrible War, which was then waged between (g) the Korashites and Kaisailan nites, in which Mahomet first (b) entred the School of War under his Uncle Abu Taleb, being then twenty Years old. It was called the Impions War, because it proceeded to that heat and sury, that they carried it on even in those Months, when it was reckon'd impious among them to wage War. For it was (i) an ancient Constitution through all Arabia, to hold four Months of the Year sacred, in which all War was to cease: And these were the Months of Moharram, Rajeb, Dulkaada, and Dul-

⁽f) Golii Notæ ad Alfraganum, p. 54. Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 64. (g) Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 174. Golii Notæ ad Alfraganum, p. 54. (b) Al Kodai, Al Kamus, &c. Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 174. in Margin. (i) Al Jauhari. Al Sharestani. Al Kamus, Cazwini, Golius in Notis ad Alfraganum, p. 4, 5, & 9. Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 174, & 176.

baga; The First, the Seventh, the Eleventh, and the Twelfth of the Year, in which it was observed with the greatest Religion among all their Tribes, to use no Act of Hostility against each other; but with how great Fury soever one Tribe might be engaged against another (as was usual among them) as foon as any of those Sacred Months began, they all immediately defifted. and taking off the heads from their Spears, and laying aside all other Weapons of War, had intercourse, and intermingled together, as if there had been perfect Peace and Friendship between them. without any Fear of each other; so that if a Man should meet on those Months him that had slain his Father, or his Brother, he durst not meddle with him, how violent soever his Hatred or Revenge might prompt him to it. And this was constantly observed among all the ancient Arabs, till broken in this War, which from hence was called the Impious War. And in this Impious War (k) Mahomet having first taken Arms, gave a Presage thereby to what impious purpose he would use them all his Life after.

But the Hegira being that, which all of the Mas hometan Religion have, ever fince the Constitution of Omar, computed by; the Subject Matter of the History which I now write, obligeth me henceforth to make use of this Ara through the remaining part of it. But because it computeth by Lunary Tears only, and not by Solary, it is requilite that I here inform the Reader of the nature of those Years, and the manner how the Hegira computeth

μĄ

⁽⁶⁾ Al Kodai, Al Kamus, Pocockii Specim. Hist. Arab. p. 174. Ħ

by them. Anciently the Arabs, although (1) they always used Lunary Years, yet by intercalating Seven Months in Nineteen Years, in the manner as do the Jews, reduced them to Solary Years; and consequently had their Months always fixed to the fame Season of the Year. But this growing out of use about the Time of Mahomet, their Year hath ever fince been strictly Lunary, confisting only of Three hundred, fifty four Days, eight Hours, and Forty eight Minutes, (m) which odd Hours and Minutes in thirty Years making Eleven Days exactly, they do intercalate a Day on the 2d, 5th, 7th, 10th, 13th, 15th, 18th, 21st, 24th, 26th, and 29th, Years of this Period. So that their Year, in those Years of this Period, consists of Three hundred fifty five Days, by reason of the intercalated Day, which they then add to the last Month of the Year. And this Year all that profess the Mahometan Religion have ever made use of; and there is a Passage in the Alcoran (n) whereby they are confined to it. For the Impostor there calls it an Impiety to prolong the Year, that is, by adding an Intercalary Month thereto. So that according to this Account, the Mahometan Year falling eleven Days short of the Solary; it hence comes to pass, that the beginning of the Year of the Hegira is unfixed and ambulatory (the next Year always beginning eleven Days sooner than the former) and therefore fometimes it happens in Summer, fometimes in Spring, fometimes in Winter, and fometimes in Autumn; and in thirty three Years compass goes through all the different Seasons of the Year, and comes about again to the same time of the Solary Year, although not exactly to the same Day. Which being like to create some Confusion to us who are used to the Solary Year; to prevent this, after the Year of the Hegira, I add the Day of the Month in the Year of our Lord in which it begins. The Months of the Arab Year are as follow; 1. Moharram. 2, Saphar. 3. Tho former Rabia. 4. The latter Rabia. 5. The former Jomada. 6. The later Jomada. 7. Rajeb. ban. G. Ramadan. 10. Shawall. 11. Dulkaada. 12. Dulhagha. The first hath thirty Days, and the fecond twenty nine, and so alternatively to the end of the Year; only in the intercalary Years. Dulhagha hath thirty Days, because of the Day added; but in all other Years only twenty nine.

^{(1)—}Al Jauhari, Ebnol Athir, Pocockii Specim. Hist. Arab. p. 177. (m) Golii Notæ ad Alfraganum, p. 11. Scaliger de Engendatione temporum, lib. 2. cap. de Anno Hegiræ. (n) Alcoran, c. 9.

The Life of Mahomet. 67

But besides this Ara, the Mahometans in Persia have another, which they reckon by in all Civil Matters, called the Ara of Yazdejerd. It computes by Solary Years of Three hundred sixty sive Days without any Intercalation, and is in use among the Astronomers all over the East. It hath its beginning ten Years after the Hegira, not from the Death of Yazdejerd (as all Chronologers hitherto following the Mistake of Scaliger, have erroneously asserted) but from his sirst Advancement to the Crown of Persia. The History of this Matter is thus. * Aster the Death of Chosroes, the Second of that Name (which happen'd An. Dom. 628.) in four Years time eight several Persons having successively possessed themselves of the Throne of Persia, and most of them by violent means, this created fuch Di-stractions and Confusions through all that Kingdom, by reason of the great Divisions, and several different Interests, which so many Revolutions in fo fhort a time had occasioned among them, that at length all Parties growing weary of fo destructive a State of their Affairs, came to an Agreement of settling again under a Prince of the Roval Family, and to this purpose made choice of Yazdejerd, a Grandson of Chosroes, who was a young Man of fifteen Years old; and fent into Arabia (where he was fled for his Safety) to Abu Beker, then newly chose Successor to Mahomet, to demand him for their King; and having accordingly obtain'd him, did, on the 16th Day of June, Anno Dom. 632. in the Eleventh Year of the Hegira, place him on the Throne of his Ancestors; which being so signal a Restoration of that Kingdom to its former Peace and Settlement, after fo great a disturbance of it, they made this the beginning of a new Era + among them, which from the name of the King, they called the Ara of Yazdejerd. And therefore it doth not begin from the Death of that Prince; for he lived nineteen Years after, and fought many Battles against the Saracens, during the Reign of Omar and Othman, Successors of Abu Beker, in defence of his Country, till at length he was slain by the Treachery of one of his own Captains, in the thirty first Year of the Hegira, Anno Dom. 651. nineteen Years after this Æra, denominated from him, first commenced.

Abul Pharaghius, p. 112. & p. 116. Eutychius, pare 2. p. 256. & p. 296. Elmaein, lib. 1. c. 2. & c. 4.

[†] Ulug. Beg. de Cognitione Epoch. c. 3. Where speaking of the Persian Epocha, he hath these Words, Principium hujus Epochæ suit dies Martis initio anni quo primum regnavit Yazde-jerdus silius Shahriari.

The Life of Mahomet. 69

menced, which all agree was in the Eleventh Year of the Hegira.

Heg. 1. July 16. A. D. 622.7 The first thing that A Mahomet did after his having settled himfelf at Medina, was to marry his Daughter Fatima to his Cousin Ali. She was the only Child then living, of fix which were born to him of Cadioba. his first Wife; and indeed the only one which he had, notwithstanding the multitude of his Wives, (p) that furvived him, whom he exceedingly loved? and was used to give great Commendations of her, reckoning her among the perfectest of Women: For he was (q) used to say, That among Men there were many perfect, but of Women he would allow only four to be fuch, and these were Asiah the Wife of Pharaoh; Mary the Mother of Christ: Cadigha his Wife, and Fatima his Daughter. From her all that pretend to be of the Race of Mahomet derive their descent.

And now the Impestor having obtain'd the End he had been long driving at, that is, a Town at his Command where to arm his Party, and head them with security; for the surther prosecution of his Design, he here enters on a new scene. Fitherto he had been preaching up his Imposture for thirteen Years together; for the remaining ten Years of his Life he takes the Sword and fights for it. He had long been teazed and perplexed at Mecca with Questions, and Objections, and Disputes about what he Preached, whereby being often gravel'd and non-plus'd, to the Laughter of his Additors, and his own Shame and Confusion, out of hatred to this way (r) he henceforth forbids all manner of disputing about his Religion; and that he might be fure to have no more of it, makes it for the future to be no less than Death for any one in the least to contradict or oppose any of the Doctrines which he had taught of The way that his Religion was to be propagated, he now tells his Difciples, was not by Disputing, but (s) by Fighting; and therefore commands them all to arm themand flav with the Sword all those that would not embrace it, unless they submitted to pay an Annual Tribute for the redemption of their Lives, And according to this his Injunction, even unto this Day, all who live under any Mahometan Government, and are not of their Religion, (t) pay an Annual Tax for a constant Mulco of their Infidelity (which in Turkey (u) is called the Carrage) and are fure to be punished with (w) Death, if in the least they contradict or oppose any Doctrine that is received among them to have been taught by Mahomet. And certainly there could not be a wifer way devised for upholding to absurd an Imposture, than by thus filencing, under to fevere a Penalty, all manner of Opposition and Disputes against it.

^{*} Elmacin, lib. 1. c. 1. Abul Feda, &c. (p) Abul Pharaghius, p. 103, (q) Abul Feda, Pocockii Specim. Hift, Arab. p. 183.

After the Impostor had sufficiently insused this Dostrine into his Disciples, he next proceeds to put it in practice; and having erected his Standard,

(t) Thevenot, part 1, lib. 1. c. 55. (u) Thevenot, part 1. lib. 1. c. 28. (w) Cantacuzen, Orat. 2. Sect. 5,

Theyenot, part 1. lib, 1, c. 28,

⁽r) Alcoran, c. 4. Cantacuzen. Orat. 1. Sect. 12. Joannes Andreas, c. 12. (s) Alcoran, c. 2, 3, 4, 9, &c. Joannes Andreas, c. 12. Disputatio Christiani, c. 8. Cantacuzeni Orat. 1. Apolog. 4. Richardi Confutatio, c. 19.

calls them all to come armed thereto; where having enrolled them all for the War (x) he gave his Standard to his Uncle Hamza, constituting him thereby his Standard bearer; and out of the special Confidence he had in him, fent him out on the first Expedition which was undertaken in his Caufe. For understanding that (y) the Caravan of Mecca was now on the Road in their return from Syria, he ordered out Hamza with a Party of Thirty Horse to way-lay and plunder them; and he having accordingly posted himself in a Wood in the Country of Yamama, by which they were to pass, they tarried their coming; but on their approach, finding them guarded with Three hundred Men, fent from Mecca to convey them safe home, he durst not set upon them, but fled and returned to Medina, without effecting any thing. And feveral other Expeditions, which were this Year undertaken of the same nature, had no better success.

Heg. 2. July 5. A. D. 623.] The next Year a very rich Caravan going from Mecca towards Syria, and carrying a great quantity both of Goods and Money, which belonged to the Merchants of Mecca, that traded into that Country, he went out with Three hundred and nineteen Men to intercept it. But (a) coming up with them at a Place called Beder, he found them guarded by a Convoy of a Thousand Men, under the Command of Abu Sophian, whereon a fierce Battle ensued between them; but Mahomet gaining the Victory, Abu Sophian made as good a Retreat as he could ⁽x) Elmacin, lib. 1. c. 1. (y) Elmacin, ib. Disputat. Christiani, c. 4. (a) Elmacin, lib. 1. c. 1. Abul Pharagius, p. 102. Alcoran, c. 3. & Commentatores in illud caput.

Alce

back again to Mecca, faving most of the Caravan with him, at which Mahomer's Men much (b) repined. However, great Spoils were gained by them in this Battle, which had like to have made a Quarrel among them about the Division. For the Army consisting of two Parties, the Men of Medina, who were called the Ansars, that is, Mahomer's Helpers; and the Men of Mecca, who were called the Mohagerins, that is, the Companions of his Flight; the * former would have had a larger Share than the latter. To salve this Controversy, Mahomet composed the Eighth Chapter of his Alcoran, wherein he adjudgeth the fifth part to himself, and the rest to be equally divided between them.

The Success of this Battle gave great encouragement to the Impostor, and his Party. He frequently brags of it in his Alcoran, and would have it believed that it two Miracles were wrought for his obtaining of it; the first, That God made his Enemies see his Army as double to what it was, which helped to dismay them; and the second, That he sent Troops of Angels to his assistance, which helped to overcome them. They were to the number of Three thousand (as he (e) himself tells us) but being invisible to every one's Eye but his alone, the credit of it stands upon no better Foundation, than the rest of his Imposture, his own single Testimany only.

Alcoran, c. 3. Bidawi. (e) Alcoran, c. 3.

⁽b) Alcoran, c. 3. Hottingeri Bibliotheca Orientalis, c. 2. ad Suratam Octavam Alcorani.

The Life of Mahomet. 73

This Year he altered the (f) Kebla, that is, the Place towards which they directed their Prayers. For it was usual among the People of the East, of all Religions, to observe one particular Point of the Heavens, towards which they all turned their Faces when they prayed. The Jews, in what part of the World soever they were, prayed with their Faces (g) towards Jerusalem, because there was their Temple; the Arabians towards (h) Mecca, because there was the Caaba, the chief place of their Heathen Worship; the Sabeans (i) towards the North-Star; and the Persian. Idolaters, who held Fire and Light to be their chief Gods, (k) towards the East. because from thence the Sun did arise, which they held to be the chief Fountain of both. Mahomet. from the beginning of his Imposture, had directed his Disciples to pray (1) with their Faces towards Jerusalem, which he was used to call the Holy City, and the City of the Prophets, and intended to have ordered his Pilgrimages thither, and to have made it the chief Place where all his Sect were to Worship. But now finding that his Followers still bore a superstitious Veneration to the Temple of Mecca, which had for many Ages before been the chief Place of the Idolatrous Worship of the Arabians, and that it would be a very prevalent Argument to reconcile his Fellow-Citizens to him, if he still preferved their Temple in its former Honour, he changed his former Law to ferve his present Purpose, and henceforth directed his Disciples to Pray with their Faces towards (m) Mecca, and ordained the Temple of that Place, which from its square Form was called the Caaba (that Word signifying a Square in the Arabic Tongue) to be the chief Place of Worship for all of his Religion, to which they were still to perform their Pilgrimages, as in former Times. And to this Change he was the more inclined, out of his Aversion to the Jews, against whom having, about this time contracted an irreconcilable Hatred, he liked not any longer to conform with them in this Rite. And that his Followers might be distinguished from them in this Particular, is the reason (n) which he himself gives for this Change. However, (a) many of his Disciples were much fcandaliz'd hereat, judging no Truth nor Stability in that Religion which was so often given to change; and feveral left him thereon.

⁽f) Abul Pharaghius, p. 102. Al Kodai, Abul Feda, Joannes Andreas, c. 6. (g) Daniel c. 6. v. 10. Buxtorfii Synagoga Judaica, c. 10. Maimonides in Halachoth Tephillah, c. 1. Sect. 3. (b) Abul Pharaghius, p. 102. (i) Abul Pharaghius, p. 102. (i) Abul Pharaghius, p. 184. (l) Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 148. (l) Abul Feda, Abul Pharaghius, p. 102. Joannes Andreas, f. 6. Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 175.

From this Time, the more to magnify the Temple of Mecca, and to give the greater Honour and Reputation thereto, have we all those Fabulous Stories invented, which the Impostor tells us concerning it. As that it was (p) first built in Heaven to be the Place where the Angels were to worship; and that Adam worshipped at it while in Paradise; but being cast down from thence (for they place Paradise in Heaven) he prayed God, that he might have such a Temple on Earth, towards which he might pray, and go round it in holy Worship unto him, in the same manner as the Angels went round that which he had feen in Heaven: That thereon God fent down the similitude of that Temple in Curtains of Light, and pitched it at Mecca. in the place where the Caaba now stands; which is, fay they, exactly under the Original, which is in Heaven: That there, after the Death of Adam. Seth built it with Stones and Clay; and that all the People of God there worshipped till the Flood, by which it being over-thrown, God commanded Abraham again to rebuild it, having shewn him the Form of the Fabrick in a Vision, and directed him to the Place by his vifible Shechinah refiding on it: That accordingly (a) Abraham and Ismael rebuilt it in the Place where it now stands: And that I/mael ever after, living at Mecca, there worshipped God with the true Worship; but his Posterity afterwards corrupted it with Idolatry, and prophaned this holy Temple with Idols, from which he was now to purge it, and confecrate it anew to the true Worship of God, to which it was primitively intended. And he did not only thus retain the Temple of Mecca, but also the Pilgrimages thither, and all the abfurd Rites which were performed at mem in the Times of Idolatry. For these being the Things which long use had created a great Veneration for in the Minds of the Arabians, by adopting them all into his new Religion, he made it go down the easier with them. And indeed this was the principal. piece of his Craft, so to frame his new Religion in every particular, as would best take with those to whom he proposed it.

⁽m) Alcoran, c. 2. Joannes Andreas, c. 2. & c. 6. (n) Alcoran, c. 2. (o) Joannes Andreas, c. 6. (p) Share-frani, Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 115. Sionitæ Appendix ad Geographiam Nubiensem, c. 7.

⁽q) Alcoran, c. 2, 3, & 22. Al Jannabi in vita Abrahami, Sharestani, Zamachshari, ad cap. 2. Alcorani. Sharisol Edriss. Liber Agar. Joannes Andreas, c. 1.

As to this Temple of Mecca, and what it was before Mahomet, all that is true of it, is this. It was an Heathen Temple in the same Veneration among the Arabs, that the Temple of Delphos was among the Greeks, whither all their (r) Tribes, for many Ages, came once a Year to perform their Idolatrous Ceremonies to their Gods; till at length Mahomet having forced them to exchange their Idolatry for another Religion altogether as bad, made this Temple also undergo the same change, by appointing it thenceforth to be the chief place for the performing of that salse Worship which he imposed, in the same manner as it was before of that which he abolished, and so it hath continued ever since.

This same Year he also appointed the Month of (s) Ramadan to be a Month of Fast. At his first coming to Medina, (t) finding the Jews observing the Celebration of their great Fast of the Expiation on the Tenth of their first Month, which is Tisri, he asked what it meant; And being told it was a Fast appointed by Moses, he replied, that he had more to do with Moses than they; and therefore ordained the Tenth Day of Mobarram, the First Month of the Arab Year, to be a Solemn Fast with his Musslemans in imitation hereof, which by a Name also borrowed from the Jews, he called Assuran, which is the same with the Hebrow Assor, that is, the Tenth, it being the (u) Tenth Day of the Month Tisri, on which this Fast of the Expiation was kept among them. And he did also at first adopt other of their Fasts into his Religion, hoping by these means to win them over unto him. But finding them still to oppose him all they could. and on all Occasions to perplex him and his Followers with Questions and Difficulties about his Religion, which he could not find Answers for, and on the account hereof to disparage and deride him and his Imposture, he contracted that Aversion and Hatred against them, that he resolved to differ from them (w) in this too, as well as in the particular last mention'd; and therefore abolishing the faid Fasts, which he had taken from them, in imitation of the Christian way, with whom about this time (it seems) he was very desirous to ingratiate himself, he appointed the whole Month of Ramadan to be as it were his Lent, or a continued time of solemn Fasting. And this Year the Month of Ramadan beginning in the Month of March, it did now exactly fall in with the time of the Christian But the reason which he himself gives for his appointing of it, was, because (x) on this Month, as he pretends, the Alcoran first came down from Heaven to him; that is, that Chapter of it which he first published. Before, it was a Month usually (y) dedicated to Jollity and good Chear among the Arabs, and while they intercalated the Year, always fell in the heat of Summer; and therefore it was called Ramadan, (z) because of the Ramado'l Har, i. e. the vehemency of the heat, which then happen'd.

⁽r) Sharestani, Golii Notæ ad Alfraganum, p. 8, & 9. Makrisi. Pocockii Spec, Hist. Arab. p. 177, & 311. (s) Abul Pharaghius, p. 102. Al Kodai. (t) Al Kazwini, Pocockii Specim. Hist. Arab. p. 309. (u) Leviticus, c. 16. v. 29. Misna in Tract. Toma, & Maimonides in Tract. Tom Kippur.

⁽w) Ebnol Athir. (x) Alcoran, c. 2. (y) Ebn Ahmed, Al Makrizi, Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 175. (z) Al Jauhari, Ebnol Athir, Golii Notæ ad Alfraganum, p. 7. Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 176.

The rest of this Year (a) he spent in Predatory Excursions upon his Neighbours, robbing, plundering and destroying all those that lived near Medina, who would not come in and embrace his Religion.

Heg. 3. June 24. A. D. 624.7 The next Year he made War (b) upon those Tribes of the Arabs. which were of the fewish Religion near him; and having taken their Castles, and reduced them under his Power, fold them all for Slaves, and divided their Goods among his Followers. He being exceed. ingly exasperated against Caab, one of their Rabbies, this War was principally undertaken for his fake, that he might take him (c) and put him to Death; but not being able to light on him in any of those Places which he had taken, he fent out Parties to fearch after him, ordering them to kill him whereever they should find him. The Reason of his (d) bitter Hatred against him was this. Caab was a very eminent Poet among the Arabians, and having a Brother called Bejair, that had turned Mahometan, he made a very Satyrical Poem upon him for this Change, wherein he so terribly galled the Impostor, that he could not bear it, but resolved to revenge the Affront with his Destruction, if ever he could get him into his Hands. For some time Caab escaped all the Snares which he laid for him; but after his Power had increased so far, that the greater part of Arabia had submitted to him, he found he could be no longer fafe, but by making his Peace with him; and therefore to purchase it, came in unto him, and professed himself a Mahometan also. Hereon Mahomet bad him repeat that Poem which had so much offended him, which he did, putting the Name of Abu Beker in every Verse. where formerly was the Name of Mahomet; but this not doing, Mahomet would not give him his Pardon, although at that time he did not take any Advantage of his voluntary coming in unto him. Whereon putting his Wits to work, he had recourse to this farther Device for the obtaining of his Security from him. For being informed that Mahomet had lately gotten a new Mistress, whom he exceedingly doated upon, and much regretted her Absence from him, while then abroad upon the Wars; the crafty Jew struck in with this Passion for the mollifying of him, and composed an excellent Poem in her Commendation, which having repeated before him, he so took the Heart of the old Lecher thereby, that he not only pardon'd him, but also received him into the Number of his particular Favourites, and made him one of his chief Confidents ever after. And as a Mark of his Favour, then bestowed on him the Cloak which he wore; which being kept by him out of an affected Vene ration to the Impostor, as an holy Relick, was afterwards bought by Moawias, when he came to the Empire, for Thirty thousand pieces of Gold, and was made the Robe which he and all his Successors of the House of Omnia constantly wore on all Solemn Occasions. And it is said of this Caab, that he afterwards became so intimate with the Impostor, that he took him into his greatest Secrets, even to that of the Imposture it self, in composing the Alcoran, for which his great Skill in the Arabick Language, and all other Learning then in use among them, exceedingly qualify'd him.

⁽a) Elmacin. Abul Pharaghius. (b) Elmacin. 1.1.c. 1. (c) Elmacin. ib. (d) Ecchelensis Hist. Arab. part 1. c. 1. & Eutych. Vindicat. p. 303, & 304.

The Life of M Ahomet. 79

Towards the end of this Year happened the Battle of Ohud, which had like to have proved fatal to the Impostor. For (e) Abu Sophian, to revenge the last Year's Affront, marched against him with an Army of Three thousand Foot and Two hundred Hovse; and having seized the Mountain of Ohud, (f) which was only four Miles distant from Medina, he so distressed that Place from thence, that Mahomet was forced to hazard Battle to diflodge him from that Post, although he could make no more than a Thousand Men to lead out against However, in the first Conflict he had the better, but at last being overborn by the Number of the Enemy, he loft many of his Men, and among them, Hamza his Uncle, who bore the Standard, and was himself grievously wounded in several places, and had been flain, but that Tilha, one of his Companions, and Nephew to Abu Beker, came in to his rescue, in which Action (g) he received a Wound in his Hand, which deprived him of the use of some of his Fingers ever after.

To falve the Objections which were raised against him on this Defeat, he was much put to it. Some (b) argued against him, How he that was a Prophet of God, and so much in his Favour as he pretended, could be overthrown in Battle by the Insidels? And others murmured as much for the Loss of their Friends and Relations who were slain in the Battle. To satisfy the former, he laid the Cause of the Overthrow on the Sins of some that sollowed him; and said, that for this Reason God suffered them to he

⁽e) Elmacin. lib. 1. c. 1. Abul Pharaghius, p. 102. (f) Geographia Nubiensis, Clim. 2. part 5. (g) Disputatio Christiani, c. 5: with which compare Abul Pharaghius, p. 117. For there it is faid Tilha had a tame Hand. (b) Alc. c. 3:

be overthrown, that so the Good might be distinguish'd from the Bad, and those who were true Believers might on this Occasion be discerned from those who were not. And to still the Complaints and Clamours of the latter, he invented his Do-Etrine of Fate and Destiny, telling them that those who were slain in the Battle, though they had tarried at home in their Houses, must have died notwithstanding when they did, the time of every Man's Life being predestinated and determined by God, beyond which no caution is able in the least to prolong it; that the Destiny of all is stated to an Hour, which cannot be altered; and therefore those who were slain in the Battle, died no sooner than they must otherwise have done; but in that they died fighting for the Faith, they gained the Advantage of the Crown of Martyrdom, and the Rewards which were due thereto in Paradifes where he told them they were alive with God in everlasting Bliss, which was of greater advantage than all the Treasures of the World could in this Life have been unto them: That they were there rejoicing very much, that they had laid down their Life so happily, as by thus fighting in the Cause of God; and his Law, and were expressing among themselves exceeding Gladness, that those who ran to hinder them from going to the Battle, met them not. Both which Doctrines he found so well to serve his turn, that he propagated them on all Occasions after. And they have been the darling (i) Notions of all this Sett ever fince, especially in their Wars, where certainly nothing can be more conducive to make them fight valiantly, than a settled Opinion, That whatever Dangers they expose themselves to, they cannot die either sooner or later than is otherwise unalterably predetermined that they must; and that in case this predetermined time be come, in dying fighting for their Religion, they shall obtain that Happiness, as to become Marryrs thereby, and immediately enter into Paradise for the Reward hereof.

[&]quot;(i) Ricaut's History of the Present State of the Ottoman Empire, Book 2; c. 8.

Heg. 4. June 13. A. D. 625.7 In the Fourth Year of the Hegira he waged War (k) with the Nadorites, a Tribe of the Jewish Arabs in his Neighbourhood, whom he pressed so hard, that he forced them to leave their Cuffles; part of them retiring to Chaibar, a City belonging to those of their Religion; and part flying into Those latter that fled into Syria, Mundir Omar, with a Party of the Men of Medina. pursued after, and having overtaken them near the Borders of that Country, put them all to the Sword, excepting only one Man that escaped. With fuch Cruelty did those Barbarians first fet up to fight for that Imposture they had been deluded into. This same Year he fought the second Battle of Beder, and had many other Skirmishes with those who refused to submit to him, in which he had fometimes prosperous, and sometimes dubious Success.

But while his Army was Abroad on these Expeditions, some of his Principal Men engaging at Play and Drink, in the heat of their Cups sell a quartelling, which raised such a Disturbance among the rest of his Men, that they had like to have sallen

⁽⁴⁾ Elmacin, I. 1. c. 1. Abul Pharaghius, p. 102.

The Life of Mahomet. 83

all together by the Ears, to the confounding of him and all his Designs; and therefore for the preventing the like Milchief for the future, (1) he forbad the use of Wine, and all Games of Chance ever after. And to make his Prohibition the more influential, he backs it with a (m) Fable of Two Angels, called Arut and Marut, who he tells us were in times past sent down from Heaven to administer Justice, and teach Men Righteousness in the Province of Babylon; that while they were there, a certain Woman coming to them for lustice, invited them home to Dinner, and set Wine before them, which God had forbidden them to drink; but being tempted by the Pleasantness of the Liquor to transgress the Divine Command, they became so drunk, that they tempted the Women to Lewdness; who promised to consent, on condition that the one of them should first carry her to Heaven, and the other bring her back again. But the Woman being got to Heaven would not come back again, but declared to God the whole Matter. Whereupon, for Reward of her Chastity, she was made the Morning-Star. And the Angels having this Option given them, whether they would be punished for their Wickedness, either now, or hereafter, chose the former: whereupon they were hung up by the Feet by an Iron Chain in a certain Pit near Babylon, where they are to continue suffering the Punishment of their Trans gression till the Day of Judgment. And that for this Reason God forbad the use of Wine to all his Servants ever after. But (n) Busbequius, and out of him (o) Ricaut give the Reason of his forbidding the use of Wine from another Occasion; which they thus relate; Mahomet making a Journey to a Friend of his at Noon entered into his House, where there was a Marriage Feast; and sitting down with the Guests, he observed them to be very merry and jovial, kissing and embracing one another, which was attributed to the Cheerfulness of their Spirits raised by the Wine, so that he blessed it as a sacred Thing in being thus an Instrument of much Love among Men. But returning to the same House the next Day, he beheld another Face of Things, as Gore-blood on the Ground, an Hand cut off, an Arm, Foot, and other Limbs dismembred, which he was told was the Effect of the Brawls and Fighting, occasioned by the Wine, which made them mad, and inflamed them into a Fury, thus to destroy one another. Whereon he changed his Mind, and turned his former. Blessing into a Curse, and forbad it ever after to all his Disciples. But he himself seems totally to refer the Reason of the Prohibition, to the Quarrel which Wine and Play at Games of Chance had caused among them. For in the 5th Chapter of the Alcoran, where he gives his Law concerning this Matter, his Words are, The Devil desires to sow Diffension and Hatred among you, thro' Wine and Games of Chance, to divert you from remembring God, and praying unto him. Abandon Wine and Games of Chance. Be obedient to God, and the Prophet his Apostle, and take beed to your selves. The Truth of the Matter is, the Arabians (p) were given to drink Wine to great Excess, when they could come by it; and being of an hot Temper, as living most of them within the Torrid Zone, were liable to be inflamed by it into the highest Disorders; and this Mahomet having had sufficient Experience of, particularly in the dangerous Instance I have mentioned, did, in respect of his Arabians, prudently enough provide against the like Mischief for the Future, by thus taking away the Cause from whence it did flow.

⁽¹⁾ Al Kodai, Pocockii Specim. Hist. Arab. p. 175. Alcoran, c. 5. Fortalit. Fid. lib. 4. Consid. 5. (m) Alcoran, cap. 2. Zamachshari & Bidawi, aliique Commentatores ad illud caput. Dialogus Mahometis cum Abdollah, Richardi Consutatio Legis Saracenica, c. 4. Cantacuzen. Orat. 2. Sect. 15. Bellonius, l. 3. c. 6. Guadagnol. Tract. 2. c. 4. e Libro Agar.

⁽n) Epist. 3. (o) History of the Present State of the Ottoman Empire, Book 2. c. 25.

Heg. 5. June 2. A. D. 627. The next Year was the War of the Ditch, where Mahomet was in great Danger of being totally ruined. For the Men of Mecca having entred into Confederacy with several of the Tribes of the Jewish Arabians, to whom he had declared himself a mortal Enemy (q) marched against him under the Command of Joseph, the Brother of Abu Sophian, with an Army of Ten thoufand Men. Mahomet march'd forth to meet them; but being terrified with their Number, by the Advice of Abdollah Ebn Salem, the Persian Tew above mention'd (whom Elmacinus calls Salman) fortified himself with a deep Ditch, within which Intrenchment the Enemy belieged him many Days, which time the crafty Impostor employed to corrupt over to his Interest their leading Men. In which Attempt having succeeded with some of them, he did, by their Means, fow fuch Diffensions among the rest, as soon extricated him from all this Danger he was fallen into, which happened on this Occa-There was then in the Enemies Camp, (r)

⁽p) Ecchelensis Hist. Arab. Part. 1. c. 5. Richardi-Confutatio, c. 8. (q) Elmacin, l. 1. c. 1. Abul Pharaghius, p. 102. (r) Ecchelensis, Hist. Arab. p. 1. c. 3. Abul Pharaghius, p. 102.

Amrus Ebn Abdud, an eminent Korashite, and Uncle to Ali, who having the Reputation of being the best Horseman in Arabia, to shew his Manhood while the two Armies lay thus idle against each other, rode up to Mahomet's Trenches, and challeng'd any of his Army to fight with him in a fingle Combat. Ali, although his Nephew, accepts the Challenge; and having slain Amrus, and also another that came to his Assistance, those whom Mahomet's Instruments had wrought into a Dissension from the rest, took this Opportunity (s) to defert the Camp, and march home. Whose Example the rest in this Consternation following, the whole Army broke up, and separated. And so this War, from which so much was expected, ended in nothing but the loss of fix Men on Mahomer's fide, and three on the other.

But tho' the Enemy could make no use of the Advantage they had, yet (t) Mahomet knew how to make the best of that which they gave him by this Retreat. And therefore immediately marching after the Cozaites, one of the Jewish Tribes consederated against him, besieged them in their Fortresses, and forced them to surrender at Mercy to Sand Ebn Saad, one of his chief Commanders. But he being fore of a Wound he had received at the War of the Ditch, in revenge thereof caused all the Men, and among them Hahib Ebn Atab their chief Commander, to be put to the Sword, and the Women and Children to be sold for Slaves, and all their Goods to be given for a Prey unto his Soldiers; and as soon as this was executed, died

(t) Elmacin, 1. 1. c. 1.

⁽s) Abul Pharaghius, p. 102. Elmacin, l. 1. c. 1.

himself of the Wound, which he had thus cruelly

revenged.

Heg. 6. May 23. A. D. 627.] In the fixth Year he subdued (u) the Lahianites, the Mustalachites, and several other Tribes of the Arabs. The Mustalachites were of the Posterity of the Chozaites, whom Cosa expelled out of Mecca. (w) Mahomet having overthrown them in Battle, slew most of the Men, according to his bloody manner, and took their Wives and Children Captives, among whom finding Juweira, the Daughter of Hareth, a Woman of excellent Beauty, (x) he fell in Love with her, and took her to him to Wise, and for her sake released all of her Kindred that were found among the Captives.

And now the Impostor, after so many Advantages obtained in his Wars, being much encreased in Strength (y) marched his Army against Mecca. and at Hadibia, a Place near that City, on the Road from thence to Jodda, a Battle was fought between them, the Consequence of which was. that neither side gaining any Advantage over the other, they there agreed on a Truce for ten Years: The Conditions of which were, That all within Mecca, who were for Mahomet, might have liberty to join themselves to him; and on the other side, Those with Mahomet, who had a mind to leave him, and return to their Houses in Mecca, might also have the same Liberty. But for the future. if any of the Citizens of Mecca should go over to Mahomet without the Confent of the Governor of the City, he should be bound on demand to render them unto him. And that if Mahomet, or any of his Party, had a Mind to come into the City, they might have Liberty so to do at any time during the Truce, provided they came unarmed in a peaceable way, and tarried not above three Days at a time.

 G_4

⁽u) Abul Pharaghius, p. 102. Elmacin. l. 1. c. 1, (v) Abul Feda, Pocockii Specim, Hist. Arab. p. 42.

⁽x) Elmacin. l. 1. c. 1. (y) Elmacin. ib.

By this Truce Mahomet being very much confirmed in his Power, took on him (z) then reforth the Authority of a King, and was inaugurated by the chief Men of his Army, under a Tree near Medina, which immediately (it feems, curfed by the Authority given so wicked an Impostor under it) wither'd away and perish'd, which the Mahometans themselves relate, but make another Interpretation of it.

On Mahomet's having thus made Truce with the Men of Mecca, and thereby obtained free Access for any of his Party to come into that City, he thenceforth ordained them to make their (a) Pilgrimages thither; which have ever ince with fo much Religion been observed by all of his Sect, once. every Year. This was an ancient Rite of the Heathen Arabi, it having been a constant Usage (b) among them for many Ages foregoing to come once a Year to the Temple of Mecca, there to worshin their Heathen Denies. "The time of this their Pilgrimage (c) was in the Month of Dulhagha; and on the tenth Day of that Month was their great Festival, in which the chiefest Solemnities of their Pilorimage were performed, and therefore it was called. And al Cabir, i. e. the great Feast; and also, because these Solemnities did chiefly consist in offering up Sacrifices and Oblations, Ayd al Corban, that is, the Feast of Oblation; and the whole Solemnity, Al Hagha, i. e. the Solemn Festival, in the same Sense as the Hebrew Word Chag, from which it is derived, fignifieth any of the three Solemn Festivals. on which the Jews were thrice every Year to appear before the Lord at the Temple of Ferusalem. And from hence the Month in which this Festival falls, is called among them Dulhagha, which is as much as to fay, The Month of the Solemn Festival. And that all might have free Liberty safely to come to this Festival from all Parts of Arabia, and again fafely return, was the reason that not only this Month, but also the preceding and following were held Sacred among them, in which it was not lawful to use any Act of Hostility against any Man, as I have afore shewn. And therefore this Solemn Pilgrimage to Mecca having been a Religious Usage which all the Tribes of the Arabs had long been devoted to, and was had in great Veneration among them; Mahomet thought not fit to ruffle them with any Innovation in this Matter, but adopting it into his Religion, retained it just in the same Manner as he found it practifed among them, with all the ridiculous Rites appendant thereto; and fo it is observed even unto this Day by all of that Religion; as one of the Fundamental Duties of it. For the Crafty Impostor taught them concerning it (as he did of all the other Heathen Rites of the Arabs, which he found necessary to retain) that it was a Command from God to Abraham and Ifmael, annually to observe this Pilgrimage to Mecca; and that it was given unto them on their rebuilding the Cauba: and that at first it was only used to the Honour of God, in the coming of all the Arabs thither once every Year, there to worship together before him in one Holy Assembly, in the same manner as the Tews were after commanded thrice every Year to worship before him in their three Solemn Festivals at Terusalem: But that in process of Time it became perverted to Idolatry, from which he was now commanded again to restore it to its primitive Use. And in the making of this Establishment, he had no small respect to his Native City, that he might preserve to it the same benefit of this Pilgrimage. which it had before so long enjoyed. And in thus providing for the Interest of that People in the ve-Ty Religion which he was a framing, he thought he might the easier prevail to draw them over unto it. And in this he was not mistaken. For had he totally abolished this Pilgrimage, it being the greatest Honour and Benefit which that Place enjoyed, and by which, indeed, it did mostly subsist; their Interest would have engaged them to that vigorous Opposition against him, that in all likelihood he would never have become Master of that City, and for want thereof have miscarried in the whole De-

⁽a) Elmacin. ib. (a) Al Kodai. Pocockii Specim. Hift. Arab. p. 175. (b) Vide supra ad Annum Hegiræ secundum. (c) Sharestani. Makrizi Golii Notæ ad Alfraganum, p. 8, & 2. Pocockii Spec. Hift. Arab. p. 177.

Heg. 7. May 11. A. D. 628,] And now being thus established in the Sovereignty, which he had been so long driving at, he took to him all the Insgnia belonging thereto; but so that still he retained the Sacred Character of Chief Pontiss of his Religion, as well as the Royal, which he had now invested himself with, and transmitted them both together to all his Successors, who by the Title of Caliples reigned after him; so that they were in the same manner as the Jewish Princes of the Race of the Maccabees, Kings and Chief Priests of their People at the same time. Their Pontifical Authority chiefly consisted in giving the Interpretation of the Mahametan Law, in ordering all Matters of Religion, and

and also in officiating in the Duties of it themselves, as well in Praying as Preaching in their Publick Mosaues, as on all more Solemn Occasions they were used to do. And at length this was all the Authority the Caliphs were left possessed of, they being totally stript of all the rest, first by the Governors of the Provinces (d) (who about the Year of the Hegira 925. assumed the Regal Authority to themselves, and made themselves Kings each in their particular Government) and after by others, who rose up on this Distraction of the Empire to usurp upon them, till at last they left them nothing else but the Name and Shadow of what they had afore been. though those Printes still paid some deserence to the Calipb, as to a Sacred Person (in the same manner as is now paid to the Pope of Rome by the Princes of his Communion) and suffered him to be prayed for through all the Mosques of their Dominions, and his Name to be inserted in the Publick Offices, even before their own, as if they had still been no more than his Lieutenants in the Government, as in former times; yet as to all things relating to the Government of their particular States, they disowned all manner of Obedience unto him, and often deposed him, and put another in his stead, as they thought would best suit with their Interest; which was usually done, according as this Prince or that Prince made themselves Masters of Bagdat, the City where the Caliph resided, till at length the Tartars came in, and in that Deluge of Destruction, with which they did over-run all the East, put a total End to their (e) very Name and Being, as well as their Authority. Ever fince that time, most Me hometan Princes have a particular Officer appointed in their respective Dominions, who sustains this Sacred Authority, formerly invested in the Caliphs, who in Turkey is called the Mufti, and in Persia the Sadre; but they being under the Power of the Princes that appoint them, are most an end made use of for no other purpose, but as Tools of State to serve their Interest, and make the Law speak what at any time they shall judge most agreeable to it, how wicked and unjust soever it be. 3

(e) Abul Pharaghius, p. 332.

⁽d) Elmacin. lib. 3. cap. 1. Abul Pharaghius, &c.

As foon as Mahomet had finished his Mosque at Medina, he always, if in the Place, officiated in it himself, both in Praying, and also in Preaching to the People; for which he had no other Convenience at first, than a piece of a Beam, or the stump of a Palm-Tree driven into the Ground, on the top of which he leaned when he did officiate. being now invested with the Supreme Authority, he thought this too mean an Accommodation for his Dignity; and therefore, by the Advice of one of his Wives, caused a Pulpit to be built for him, which had two Steps up into it, and a Seat with in to hit on; and this the Impostor ever after made use of, leaving his Beam. And those, who, writing of Mahomet's Miracles, tell us, among others, That a Beam grouned at him, (f) mean this Beam, which they fay groaned at Mahomet's leaving of it. thereby expressing its grief for being thus deserted. Othman Ebn Affan, when he came to be Caliph, hung his Pulpit with Tapestry, and Moamias advanced it higher, adding fix Steps more to it. For being (g) so exceeding Fat that he could not stand while he officiated, as all his Predecessors had done, he was forced to sit when he preached to the People; and therefore that he might be the better heard, he raised the Pulpit to this heighth, and so it now remains in that Mosque at Medina even to this Day.

⁽f) Al Gazali, Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 188.

This Year he led forth his Army (b) against Chaibar, a City inhabited by Arabs of the Jewish Religion, who being overthrown by him in Battle, he besieged their City, and took it by Storm. here those who are the Magnifiers of Ali, tell this Miracle of him, That in the Assault, Sampson-like. he plucked up one of the Gates of the City (which was of that weight, faith Abul Feda, that eight other Men could not move it) and held it before him for a Shield to defend himself against the Besieged, till the City was taken. On Mahomet's entring the Town, he took up his Quarters in the House of Horeth, one of the principal Inhabitants of the Place, whose Daughter (i) Zainah, making ready a Shoulder of Mutton for his Supper, poisoned it. And here those who are for ascribing Miracles to Mahomet, tell us that the Shoulder of Mutton spoke to him, and discovered that it was poisoned; but it feems, if it did so, it was too late to do him any good. For Basher, one of his Companions, falling on too greedily to eat of it, fell down dead on the And although Mahomet had not immediately the same Fate, because not liking the Taste, ⁽g) Elmacin. lib. 1. c. 7. Eutychius, Tom. 2. p. 360. Abul Pharaghius, p. 124. (b) Abul Pharaghius, p. 102. Elmacin. l. 1. c. 1. (i) Abul Feda, Al Kodai, Al Jannabi, Disputatio Christiani, c. 8. Richardi Consutatio, c. 13. Posock. Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 189, 190.

he spit out again what he had taken into his Mouth, yet he let down enough to do his Business. For he was never well after this Supper, and at three Years end died of it. The Maid being asked why she did this, answered, that she had a mind to make trial whether he were a Prophet, or no. For were he a Prophet, said she, he could certainly know that the Meat was poisoned; and therefore would receive no harm from it; but if he were not a Prophet, she thought she should do the World good Service, in ridding it of so wicked a Tyrant.

After this (k) he reduced under his Subjection Beder, Watiha, and Selalima, which were also Towns belonging to the Jewish Arabs, who rendered to him on Articles; and these were, That they should continue in their former Habitations, paying so Tribute one half of the Income of their Date Treu every Year; but to be at his discretion to expet them when he should think sit. Under the protection of which agreement they still retain'd their former Possessions, and dwelt in them without any disturbance, till the Reign of Omar, who pretending that Mahomet had given charge in his last Sickness not to permit two Religions in Arabia, drove them all out.

Heg. 8. April 30. A. D. 629.] The Impostor, by those many Acquisitions having now increased his Strength to an Army of Ten thousand Men, resolved to make himself Master of Mecca; and therefore pretending they had broken the Truce, (1) marched suddenly upon them before they were aware of his Design; and therefore being totally unprovided in that Surprize to put themselves into a Posture of Defence against him, they found themselves necessitated to yield to him. Whereon Abu Sophian taking with him Al Abbas, one of the Uncles of the Impostor (who, although of his Religion. had, it seems, tarried still at Mecca) went out unto him, and by turning Mahometan, saved his Life; and the City, without any Opposition, was rendered to him at Discretion. On his Entry into it, having put to Death such as had been most violent against him, all the rest, without any further Opposition, submitted unto him, and embraced his Religion. And therefore having thus made himfelf absolute Master of the place, he immediately fet himself to purge the Caaba of its Idols, and consecrate that Temple a-new to his Religion, as having resolved still to continue it in its pristine Honour, by making it the chief place of Worship for all of his Sect. There (m) were a multitude of Idols within the Temple, and as many without, standing round its Area, all which Mahomet caused to be pulled down and destroyed, and the Place to be totally cleared of them. The chief among those Idols. were those of Abraham and Ismael within the Temple, and that of Hoball without. The rest were of Angels and Prophets, and others of their principal Saints departed, whom they worshipped only as Mediators, in the same manner as the Romanists now do their Saints, and the Images which they erect unto them. For the Arabians always held. that there was (n) but one only God, the Creator and Governor of all Things, whom they called Allah Taal,

⁽k) Elmacin. lib. 1. c. 1. (1) Abul Pharaghius, p. 103-

⁽m) Pocockii Spec. Hift. Arab. p. 95, 96, 97, 98. (n) Po-cockii Spec. Hift. Arab. p. 107, & 108.

i. e. the Supreme God, and God of Gods, and Lord of Lords, whom they durst never represent by any Image. But being (as they held) so great and high as not to be approached to by Men while here on Earth, but through the Mediation of Advocates of Intercessors, interposing for them unto him in Heaven; that Angels and Holy Men beatisted might perform this Office for them, was the reason that they set up their Images, and built them Temples, and directed their Worship and Devotions unto them. And in this did consist the whole of the Arabian Idolatry, which Mahomet, now by destroying these Idols, put a total End unto.

As foon as it was heard among the neighbouring Arabs, that Mahomet had made himself Master of Mecca, the (o) Hawazins, the Thakifians, and feveral other Tribes, immediately gathered together under the Command of Melec Ebn Auf, to fall upon him before he should increase his Power and further. Hereupon Mahomet, appointing Gayat Ebn Asad to be Governor of Mecca, marched out against them with Twelve thousand Men. Valley of Honaina, which lieth between Mesca and Tayif, both Armies met, and in the first Encounter Mahomet (p) was beaten, tho' much superior to the Enemy in Number, and driven back to the Walls of Mesca, (q) which he ascribes to the overconfidence of his Men in their Numbers; which causing them to neglect their Enemy, did thereby give them this Advantage over them. But the Impostor (r) having gathered up his scatter'd Forces, and rallied them again into a Body, acted more

⁽o) Elmacin. lib. 1. c. 1. (p) Zamachihari. and Bidawion the 9th Chapter of the Alcoran. (q) Alcoran, chap-

e. (r) Bidawi & Zamachshari, ib.

cautiously in the second Conslict; and then (s) as he faith, by the help of invisible Troops of Angels (which are reckon'd by some Commentators on the Alcoran, to be Eight Thousand, and by others to be Sixteen thousand) gave his Enemies such a total Defeat, (t) that he took from them their Baggage, with their Wives and Children, and all their Substance, which consisted mostly of great Flocks of Sheep, and Herds of Cattle. For these being of the Nomad Arabs, it was their Custom to carry Wives and Children, and all that they had with them, where-ever they mov'd. After this Battle, these People sent Ambassadors unto him to pray the Restoration of their Wives and Children; to whom Mahomet gave this Option, to chuse which they would have again restored unto them, either their Wives and Children, or their Goods: Whereon they having chosen their Wives and Children, Mahomet divided all their Goods, which he had taken from them, among his Soldiers. Only Melec Ebn Auf, their General, now he faw his Power was fuch as no more to be refifted, came in and embraced his Religion, and thereon had all his Goods again restored unto him.

The remaining part of the Year (u) was spent in demolishing the Heathen Temples, and destroying their Idols in all Places through Arabia, where his Power reached. To which purpose, several of his Commanders being sent out with Parties, Saad destroyed the Idol of Menah; Chalid, that of Al Uzza, and the Temple of Bossa built thereto, and others the rest of them. So that this Year proved very fatal to the Idols of the Arabs, they being most of them now destroyed, and the former Worshippers of them forced to submit to Mahomet, and embrace his Imposture.

⁽¹⁾ Alcoran, c. 9. (1) Elmacin, lib. 1, c. 1, (u) Potockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 91, & 92,

Heg. 9. April 20. A. D. 630.7 And now having brought most Parts of Arabia under his Power, the ensuing Year (w) he turned his Arms towards Syria, and possessed himself of Tabuc, a Town belonging to the Greek Empire, and from thence falling on the Princes of Dauman and Eyla, forced them to become Tributaries unto him, and then returned to Medina in the Month Rajeb. While he was abfent on this Expedition, the Tayifians, whom he had begun to beliege the former Year, being much pressed by some of his Lieutenants, whom he had committed the profecution of that War unto, were forced to submit and embrace his Imposture, which they had afore been so averse unto; of which he having received an account on his return, he fent thither Abu Sophian to difarm them of all their Weapons and Instruments of War, and appointed Othman Ebn Abulas to be their Governor. this was the last Year in which he went to the War.

Heg. 10. April 9. A. D. 631.] And now the Power of the Impostor being much increased, the Fame of it so terrified the rest of the Arabs, which had not yet felt his Arms, (x) that they all came in and submitted to him, and embraced his Imposture. So that this Year his Empire and his Religion became established together through all Arabia, and he sent his Lieutenants into all Parts of it to govern in his ^() Abul Pharaghius, p. 103. Almacinus, lib. 1. c. 1. () Elmacin, lib. 1. c. 1. Abul Feda.

The Life of Mahomet. 99

Name, who destroying the Idol Temples, and all other the Remains of the Arabian Idolatry, whereever they came, set up his new invented Religion in its stead, and forced all Men, by the Power of the Sword, to conform thereto.

The greatest part of this Year being spent in ordering and settling these Matters, (y) towards the end of it Mahomet took a Journey in Pilgrimage to Mecca, and entered there on the Tenth Day of Dulhagha, which is the great Day of that Solemnity, where a great Concourse of People resorted to him from all parts of Arabia, whom he instructed in his Law, and then returned again to Medina. This Pilgrimage of his is by his Followers called the Pilgrimage of Valedition, because it was the last which he made.

But although he was arrived to this heighth, yet he wanted not Opposers, who gave him great disturbance in this his new-acquired Empire. For several others seeing how he had advanced himself to be a great King, by pretending to be a Prophet, thought to do so too. (z) Among whom the chief was Mosailema, who set himself up with this Pretence in the Country of Yamama, and gathering a great Company after him, preached to them that he was Associate with Mahomet in the Prophetick Office, and sent with the same Commission to reduce them from Idolatry to the true Worship of God, and in order thereto he also published his Ascoran among them. For which reason the Mahometans call him the Lying Mosailema, and speak of him always with Detestation. However, he increased to a very considerable Power, leading a great Army after him. (a) And at the same time Aswad started up in Hamyar; or the Country of the Homerites, with the same pretence, and seized on Sanaa, Nasra, and Tayif. And after him Teliba, and others thought to have played the same Game, but could not hit on the same Success, being all in their turns subdued and brought to nothing. But this Work Mahomet not being able to undertake himself, was forced to leave it to his Successor.

⁽y) Elmacin. lib. 1. c. 1. Abul Feda, Abul Pharaghius, p. 103. (z) Abul Pharaghius, p. 103. Elmacin. lib. 1. & 2. Disputatio Christiani, cap. 17.

Heg. 11. March 28. A. D. 632.7 For after his return (b) to Medina from his late Pilgrimage, he began daily to decline, through the force of that Poison which he had taken three Years before at Caibar, which still working in him, at length brought him fo low, as forced him on the 28th Day of Saphar (the second Month of their Year) to take his Bed, and on the twelfth Day of the following Month he died, after having been fick thirteen Days. The beginning of his Sickness was a flow Fever, which at length made him delirous; whereon (c) he called for a Pen, Ink, and Paper, telling them that he would dictate a Book to them, which should keep them from erring after his Death. But Omar would not admit this, faying the Alcoran sufficeth, and that the Prophet, through the greatness of his Malady, knew not what he faid. But others who were present, were of another Mind, and expressed a great desire that the Book might be wrote, which their Prophet spoke to them of; whereon a Contention arose between them, some being of Omar's mind, and some of the contrary; at which Mahomet taking offence, bid them all be gone, telling them, That it did not become them thus to contend in his Presence. So the Book was not wrote; the loss of which was asterwards lamented by some of his Followers, as a great Calamity to their Cause.

⁽a) Elmacin. lib. 1. c. 1, &c. (b) Abul Pharaghius, p. 103. Elmacin. lib. 1. c. 1. Eutychius, Tom. 2. p. 251. Abul Feda, Al Jannabi, Al Kodai, Sharestani, &c. (c) Bochari, Sharestani, Al Jannabi, Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 178, 179.

During his Sickness, (d) he much complained of the Bit which he had taken at Caibar, telling those that came to visit him, That he had felt the Torments of it in his Body ever since; that at times it brought on him very dolorous Pains, and that then it was going to break his very Heart-Strings. And when, among others, there came to see him the Mother of Bashar, who died on the spot of that Poison, (e) He cried out, O Mother of Bashar, the Veins of my Heart are now breaking of the Bit which I eat with your Son at Chaibar. So it seems, notwithstanding the Intimacy he pretended with the Angel Gabriel, and the continual Revelations which he brag'd that he received from him, he could not be preserved from thus perishing by the Snares of a silly Girl.

On his Death, there was great Confusion among his Followers. Many of them (f) would not believe that he could die. For (said they) how can he die, since he is to be a Witness to God for us? It cannot be so, he is not dead, but is only taken away for a Season, and will return again, as did Jesus. And therefore they went to the Door of the House where the dead Corps lay, crying out, Do not bury bim, for the Apostle of God is not dead. And Omar being of the same Mind, drew his Sword, and swore, That if any one should say that Mahomet was dead, he would immediately cut them to pieces. For (faid he) the Apostie of God is not dead, but only gone for a Season; as Moses the Son of Amram was gone from the People of Israel for forty Days, and then returned to them For the composing of this Disorder, Abu Beker came in, crying out unto them, Do you wor-ship Mahomet, or the God of Mahomet? If you worship the God of Mahomet, he is Immortal, and liverh for ever; but as to Mahomet, he certainly is dead. And then from feveral Passages in the Alcoran, he proved that he must die as well as other Men. Which having satisfied Omar and his Party, they then all took it for granted that Mahomet was dead, and no more to return to Life again till the general Refurrection of all Mankind. What goes To current among us, as if the Mahometans expected Mahomet again to return to them here on Earth. is totally an Error. There is no fuch Doctrine smong them, nor are there any of them that ever fancied fuch a Thing, since the time that Omar was convinced of his Mistake herein.

H 3

⁽d) Abul Feda, Ebnol Athir, Ebn Phares, Al Jannabi. (e) Al Jannabi, Pocockii Spec. Hift. Arab. p. 190. (f) Abul Feda, Sharestani, Al Jannabi, Pocock. Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 179.

But this Diforder was no fooner appeas'd, (g) but another arose to a much greater heat about his Burial. The Mohagerins, that is, those who accompanied him in his Flight from Mecca, would have him carried thither, to be buried in the Place where he was born. The Ansars, that is, those of Medina, who joined with him, would have him buried there where he died. And there were others who had a fancy to have him carried to Ferusalem, and there buried among the Sepulchres of the Prophets: for that, faid they, was the City of the Prophets. And while each Party strove to have their own way complied with, the Contest grew fo high, that they had like to have all gone together by the Ears; but that the Wildom of Abu Beker composed this Matter also. For he coming in, told them, That he had often heard from the Prophet himself, that Prophets were to be buried in the place where they died. And then without more ado, commanded the Bed whereon he law to be plucked out, and a Grave to be immediately dug under it, to which all consented, and there they buried him forthwith in the Place where he died, which was in the Chamber of Ayesha, his best beloved Wife, at Medina; and there he lyeth to this Day, without Iron Coffin or Loadstones to hang him in the Air, as the Stories which commonly go about of him among Christians fabulously relate. There was, indeed, (h) one Dinocrates, a Famous Architect, that had a Device, by building the Dome of the Temple of Arsinoe at Alexandria of Loadftone, to make her Image all of Iron, hang in the middle of it, as if it were in the Air; but there was no such Attempt ever made as to Mahomet's Carkass. For that being buried in the manner as I have related, hath lain in the same Place, without being moved or disturbed ever since, only they have built over it (i) a small Chapel, which joineth to one of the Corners of the chief Mosque of that City, which was the first that was ever erected to that Impious Superstition, Mahomet himself being the first Founder of it, as hath been afore related. Here such Pilgrims as think sit, on their return from Mecca, call in to pay their Devotions. But there is no Obligation from their Law for it. The Pilgrimage which that enjoins being to be performed to the Caaba at Mecca, and not to the Tomb of the Impostor at Medina, as some have erroneously related.

⁽g) Abul Pharaghius, p. 103. Ahmed Ebn Yusef, Abul Fedg, Sharestani, Posockii Specim. Hist. Arab. p. 180.

⁽b) Plinius, 1. 34. c. 14.

And thus ended the Life of this wicked Impostor (k) being full Sixty three Years old on the Day in which he died, that is, according to the Arabian Account, which make only Sixty one of our Years. For twenty three Years he had taken upon him to be a Prophet, of which he lived Thirteen at Mecca, and Ten at Medina. During which Time, from very mean beginnings, he arose by the Impulse of his Ambition, and the Sagaciousness of his Wit to that heighth, as to make one of the greatest Revolutions that ever happened in the World, which immediately gave Birth to an Empire, which in Eighty Years time extended its Dominions over more Kingdoms and Countries, than ever the Roman could in Eight hundred. And altho' it continued in its Strength not much above Three hundred Years, yet out of its Ashes have sprung up many other Kingdoms and Empires, of which there are Three at this Day, the largest and most Potent upon the Face of the Earth; I mean the Empire of Turkey, the Empire of Persia, and the Empire of the Mogul in India; which God hath permitted of his All-wise Providence still to continue for a Scourge unto us Christians, who, having received so holy and so excellent a Religion through his Mercy to us in Jesus Christ our Lord, will not yet conform our selves to live worthy of it.

⁽i) Appendix ad Geographiam Nubiensem, c. 8. Thevenot, Part 1. Book 2. c. 21. (k) Eutychius, Tom. 2. p. 251. Elmacin. l. 1. c. 1. Abul Pharaghius, p. 103. Abul Feda, Al Jannabi, Al Kodai, &c.

He (1) was, as to his Person, of a proper Stature, and comely Aspect, and affected much to be thought to resemble Abraham. He had a very piercing and sagacious Wit. And for the accomplishing of the Design which he undertook, was thoroughly versed in all the Arts whereby to insinuate into the Favour of Men, and wheedle them over to serve his Purposes, to which he chiefly ow-ed the success of his Undertaking.

For the first Part of his Life (m) he led a very wicked and licentious Course, much delighting in Rapine, Plunder, and Blood-shed, according to the Usage of the Arabs, who mostly follow'd this kind of Life, being almost continually in Arms one Tribe against another, to plunder and take from each other all they could. However, the Mahometans would have us believe that he was a Saint from the Fourth Year of his Age. For then, say (n) they, the Angel Gabriel took him from among his Fellows, while at play with them, and carrying him aside, cut open his Breast, and took out his

⁽¹⁾ Elmacin, l. 1. c. 1. Abunazar, Abul Feda, Al Kodai, Schikardi Tarich, p. 32. (m) Bartholomæus Edessenus, Disputatio Christiani, &c. (n) Liber de Generatione & nutritura Mahometis, Joannes Andreas, c. 1. Rellonius, l. 3. c. 1. Guadagnol. p. 169. e libro Agar. Ecchelensis, Hist. Arab. part. 1. c. 23.

Heart, and wrung out of it that black Drop of Blood, in which, fay they, was contained the Former peccari, so that he had none of it ever after.

And yet in the Forty eighth Chapter of his Alcoram, he brings in God giving him a large Charter of Pardon for all his Sins past and to come.

His two predominant Passions were Ambition and Lust. The Course which he took to gain Empite, abundantly shews the former; and the multitude of Women which he had to do with, proves the latter. And indeed these two run through the whole Frame of his Religion, there being scarce a Chapter in his Alcoran, which doth not lay down some Law of War and Bloodshed for the promoting of the one; or else give some Liberty for the use of Women here, or some Promise for the enjoyment of them hereafter, to the gratifying of the other Vear of his Age) I do not find that he took any other Wife. For the being the rife and foundation of his Forgunes, it feems he durft not displease her; by bringing in another Wife upon her. But the was no fooner dead, but he multiplied them to a great (a) Number, besides several Concubines which he had. They that say the sewest, allow him to have married (p) Fisteen; but others rection them to have been (q) One and Twenty, of which sive died before him, Six he repudiated, and Ten were alive at his Death. But the Tenth, with whom he contracted but a little before his Sickness, was never brought home to his House. The Names of the other Nine were Ayesha, the Daughter of Abu Beker; Haphsa, the Daughter of Omar; Zewda, the Daughter of Zama; Zainab, the Daughter of Hashetb; Jeweira, the Daughter of Hareth; Sephiah, the Daughter of Hai; Em Selema, Em Haliba, and Maimuna.

⁽⁰⁾ Appendix ad Geographiam Nubiensem, c. 8. Joannes Andreas c. 7. Bellonius, l. 3, &c. (p) Abul Feda, M Kodai, Ahmed Ehn Yusef. (q) Vide Gentium in Notis ad Mustadinum Sadum, p. 568.

Ayesha, the Daughter of Abu Boker, was his best beloved Wife. He married her very young, as hath been before related; and although she was a very wanton Woman, and (r) given to hold Amorous Intrigues with other Men, and on that account Mahomet was moved to put her away; yet his Love to her was fuch, that he could not part with her. But to falve her Reputation, and his own in keeping her, the Twenty fourth Chapter of the Alcoran was compos'd, and brought forth as fent from God to declare her innocent; wherein he tells his Musslemans, That this Charge against her was an Imposture, and an impudent Lye, and forbids them any more to speak of it, threatning a severe Curse, both in this Life and that which is to come, against all those who should accuse of immodesty, Women Chaste, Innocent and Faithful. Mahomet marrying her Young, took care to have her bred up (s) in all the Learning then going in Arabia, especially in the Elegancy of their Language, and the Knowledge of their Antiquities, and she became one of the most Accomplished Ladies of her time in that Country. She was a(t) bittter Enemy to Ali, he being the Person that di-

⁽r) Disputatio Christiani, c. 6. Commentatores in Alcorani c. 24.
(s) Appendix ad Geographiam Nubiensem, c. 8.
(t) Disputatio Christiani, c. 6.
Elmacin, l. 1. c. 4. Abul Pharaghius, Abul Feda, &c. scovered

scovered her Incontinency to Mahomet, and therefore imployed all the Interest she had on every Vacancy that after happened, to hinder him from being chosen Caliph, altho', as Son-in-law to the Impostor, he had the fairest Pretence thereto; and when at last, after having been thrice put by, he attain'd that Dignity, she appear'd in Arms against him; and although the prevail'd hot that way, yet the proved his ruin, by caufing that Defection from him, which at length was the undoing of him and She (u) liv'd Forty eight Years afall his House. ter the Death of Mahomet, and was in great Reputation with her Sect, being called by them the Prophetess, and the Mother of the Faithful. And in most Points of Difficulty concerning their Law, they had recourse to her, to know what had been the Sense of the Impostor while alive, in the Particular doubted of; and whatfoever Answer she gave, went for an (w) Authentick Tradition among them ever after. For all their Traditions which compose their Sonnals, are pretended to be derived either from her, or fome of Mahomet's ten Companions; that is, thok ten who first came in unto him. But her Testimony to a Tradition is reckon'd the most Authentick; and next her, that of Abdorrahman Ebn Auf. (x) being of all others the most familiarly convenfant with the Impostor all the time that Scene of De-Justion was acting by him, and a Person of extraordinary Memory; he was most confided in for the giving of an exact account of all his Savings and -Doings relating to his Religion; and there are reckoned no fewer than 5340 Traditions among them, which are built upon his Authority only. Abdorrahman is also called Abu Hareira, that is, the Father of a Cat, which Name Mahomet gave him for the fondness he had for a Cat, which he was used most an end to carry with him in his Bosom, where-ever he went. For it is usual in the Arabick Tanque, when a Man is remarkable for any one particular thing, thus to express it, by calling him the Father of it. (y) And so Chalid, who was Mahomet's Host when he first came to Medina, was for his remarkable Patience call'd Abu Job, that is, the Father of Job, or of the Patience of Job. And this is that Job, (z) who dying at the Siege of Constantinople, when besieg'd by the Saracens, was there buried under the Walls of the City, and hath his Tomb there to be seen even to this Day, (a) where all the Grand Signiors go forth to be inaugurated, when they first take upon them the Regal Authority.

⁽x) For the died the 18th Year of the Hegira, Elmacin, 1, 1.
(v) Joannes Andreas, c. 3.
(x) Gentius in Notis ad Musladinum Sadum, p. 578.

Haphsa, the Daughter of Omar, was next to (b) Ayesha, most in favour with him, and her he intrusted with the keeping of the Chest of his Apostuship, wherein were laid up all the Original Papers of his pretended Revelations, out of which the Alcoran was composed, as hath been already said; and the Original Copy of that Book, (c) Abu Beker, after the finishing of it, delivered also unto her, to be kept in the same Chest; which proves ⁽y) Bochartus in Hierozoico, part 1. c. 1. (z) Elmacin, l. 1. c. 7. (a) Ricaut's History of the Present State of the Ottoman Empire, Book 1. chap. 2. Smith's Brief Description of Constantinople. (b) Joannes Andreas, c. 7. (c) Abul Feda, Hottingeri Bibliotheca Orientalis, c. 2. Pocokii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 362.

I To The Life of MAHOMET.

the mistake of Joannes Andreas (d) in assigning the keeping of this Chest to Ayesha. For it is not likely that Abu Beker would have dispossessed his own Daughter of this Office, which was so honourable among them, had she been first entrusted with it by the Impostor. Haphsa was much the elder Woman, and for that reason probably preserved to this Trust. For when she died, which was towards the latter end of the Reign of Othman, she was Sixty Years (e) old, and therefore must have been at the Death of the Impostor, at least Forty Years old, when Ayesha was not full Twenty.

Zewda was in least Favour with him of any of his Wives, (f) and he intended to have put her away; but she earnestly desir'd him that she might shill have the Reputation and Hononr of being his Wise, promising him, if he would grant her this, she would be content no more to lie with him, but to give her turn always to Ayesha; which Condition he willingly accepted of, out of that great Love which he had for Ayesha, and so permitted her to continue in his House as long as he lived.

Zainab was first the Wife of Zeyd, his enfranchis'd Slave, who being a Woman of great Beauty, (g) the old Lecher fell-desperately in love with her.

⁽d) De Confusione Sectæ Mahometanæ, c. 2. (e) Gentius in Notis ad Musladinum Sadum, p. 568. (f) Gentius in Notis ad Musladinum Sadum, p. 568. (g) Al Jannabi, Abul Feda, Al Kodai, Pocockii Specim. Hist. Arab. p. 182. Richardi Confutatio, c. 3. Disputatio Christiani, c. 6. Ecchelensis Hist. Arab. Part. 1. c. 5. Confutatio Mahometis, Edita per Le Moyne. Joannes Andreas, c. 6. Guadagnol, Tract. 2. c. 5. Sect. 3. & c. 10. Sect. 1. Zamachshari, Bidawi & alii Commentatores, ad cap. 33. Alcorani, Liber Almawakeph. Fortalit. Fid. lib. 4. Consid. 2.

But for fear of the Scandal which his taking her might give, he did all he could to suppress his Flame, 'till at length, being able to relift no longer, he did break the matter to her, and caused Zeyd to put her away, that he might take her to Which he being forced to submit to, this gave great Offence to all his Followers, that her who called himself a Prophet, and an Apostle of God, fent to teach Men his Law, should for the gratifying of his Lust, do so scandalous a thing. But to falve the Matter, out comes the Thirty third Chapter of the Alcoran, called the Chapter of Herefies, where God is brought in declaring, That he had married Zainab to Mahomet, and given him free liberty to enjoy her according to his Desire; and also rebuking him, that knowing God had given him this thing, he should abstain so long from her, out of the regard he had to the People, as if he feared them more than God. However, this could not clear him so, but that many of his Followers are hard put to it, to excuse him from the Scandal of this Fact, even unto this Day; and there are some of them who make no doubt to charge him with Sin on the account hereof. Zainab hereon becoming the Wife of Mahomet, lived with him to the time of his Death, always glorying and vaunting her felf above his other Wives, that (h) whereas they were married to Mahomet by their Parents and Kinsfolk, she was married to him by God himfelf, who dwells above the Seven Heavens.

How he married Jeweira, hath been already related. (i) Saphia was a Jewish Woman, and descend.

⁽b) Ecchelensis Hist. Arab. p. 1. c. 5. (i) Disputatio

ed of the Race of the Priests, on which account she was used to brag, That she had Aaron for her Father, Moses for her Uncle, and Mahomet for her Husband. Of the rest of his Wives I find not any thing faid.

Besides these, he had a Concubine whom he much loved. She was (k) an Egyptian Woman, and a Christian of the Facobite Sect. The Governor of Egypt having occasion to treat with him about some Matters, and being informed of his Brutish Passion, to gratify him herein, and thereby the better incline him to his purpose, sent him this Maid for a Present, she being then only Fisteen Years old: He immediately fell in love with her. But how fecret foever he manag'd the Amours for fear of his Wives, Ayesha and Haphsa found it out. and catch'd them together in the Fact. Whereon they reproach'd him bitterly for it, that he, who called himself a Prophet sent from God to teach Men Righteousness, should do such a thing; at which being much confounded, he swore a solemn Oath That in case they would conceal the Matter, and not fay any thing of it to raise a Scandal against him among his Musslemans, he would never have to do with her more. On which Oath they were content to pass the Matter over, and say nothing of it. But Mahomet's Lust being of greater force with him than his Oath, he could not long hold; but was catch'd again with her by his Jealous Wives. Whereon they flew out into a desperate

⁽b) Abul Pharaghius, p. 103. Joannes Andreas, c. 8. Bellonius, l. 3. c. 8. Richardi Confutatio, c. 12. Cantacuzeni, Orat. 2. Sect. 8. Guadagnol Tract. 2. c. 10. Sect. 2. Commentatores in c. 66. Alcorani, Fortalitium Fidei, lib. 46 Confid. 2.

Rage against him, and after having loaded him with a multitude of Reproaches, both for his Perjury as well as Adultery, went from him to their Fathers Houses; which raising a great Noise, and many being offended with him for it, to smooth the Matter again, he had recourse to his old Art; and out comes a New Revelation to justify him in it, the Sixty fixth Chapter of the Alcoran, called the Chapter of Probibition, wherein he brings in God allowing Mahomet, and all his Muslemans, to lie with their Maids when they will, notwithstanding their Wives. The first Words of that Chapter are, O Prophet, why dost thou forbid what God hath allowed thee, that thou may'st please thy Wives? God hath granted unto you to lie with your Maid-Sera Which Law being published, it gave such content to his licentious Followers, that no more Words were made of this Matter; but all gladly laid hold of the Liberty which he had granted: and ever fince it hath been an establish'd Law among all that Selt, beside their Wives (m) to keep as many Women-Slaves for their Lust, as they shall think fit to buy; and the Children of the one are as legitimate as the Children of the other. the Grand Signior, who never Matries, hath all his Women under this latter Notion, that is, as his Slaves, and he keeps none but fuch in his Seraglio; only after they have born him a Son, he fometimes gives them the Name of Sultana, which is Queen. Ayesha and Haphsa, finding the Matter to go thus. and that Mahomet had in the same Chapter threat-

ned

⁽m) Ricaut's History of the Present State of the Ottoman Empire, Book 2. Chap. 21. Thevenor. part 1. lib. 1. c. 14. Belkonlus, lib. 3. c. 8. & c. 10. Clenardi Epistolæ, p. 29, 30, 50, & 664

ned them with Divorce, unless they submitted and were obedient; they sent their Fathers to him to make their Peace, and again returned to his House, and totally submitted, for the suture, to his Will in all things; and from that time he lay with his Maid Mary as often as he pleased, without their any further Contradiction or Controul, and had a Son by her, who was called Abraham. But after the Death of the Impostor, no account was had of her or her Son, but both were sent away into Egypt, and no mention made of either ever after among them. I suppose Ayesha, out of the hatred which she bore her, procured of her Father, who succeeded the Impostor in the Government, to have her thus disposed of.

One of the main Arguments (n) which the Followers of Mahomet make use of to excuse his having so many Wives, is, that he might beget young Prophets; but notwithstanding this, he left no young Prophet nor Prophetess neither behind him of all his Wives. Of (o) six Children, which he had all by Cadigha his sirst Wise, and none by any of the others, they all died before him, excepting only Fatima the Wise of Ali, and she survived him only

fixty Days.

As the gratifying of his Ambition and his Lust, was the main end of his Imposture, so they both continually appear through the whole Contexture of it. At first his Ambition had the Predominancy in him; but when that began to be somewhat satisfied by the Power he had attained to, his Lust grew upon him with his Age, and at length he seem'd totally disloyed into it. And there are ⁽n) Ahmed Ebn Zin.

⁽o) Abul Pharaghius, p. 103. ftrange

strange things said of him this way; (p) as that he had in Venery the strength of forty other Men, and that he knew all his Wives, when he had Eleven of them, one after another in an (q) Hour's time. Whatever Laws he gave to restrain the Lust of other Men, he took care always to except himself, resolving, it seems, to take his sull swing herein without Let or Controul, according as the violent bent of his brutish Appetite this way should lead him. For,

1. He (r) would not allow any other to have above four Wives, but to himself (s) he reserved a liberty to marry without restraint, as many as he should think fit, and he had Ten together at the same time when he died.

2. He obliged all others, who have two, three or four Wives, to use them all equally alike, both as to their Cloathing, Diet, and the Duties of the Marriage-bed. And in case any Wife thinks herfelf unequally used in any of those particulars, and that the Husband doth not as largely dispense to her of them, as to his other Wives, it is allowed through all Mahometan Countries, that she make her Complaint to the Judge, and the Law will give her redress herein, and force the Husband to do her Justice. But Mahomet reserved liberty to himself to do as he should see fit as to this; and therefore when some of his Wives were aggrieved, because he shewed more favour to the other, and particularly to Ayesha, than to them, and made Com-

⁽p) Fortalir. Fid. lib. 4. Confid. 2. Guadagnol. Tract. 2. cap. 7. fect. 1. Richardi Confucatio, c. 8. Difputafio Christiani, c. 6. (q) Joannes Andreas, è libro Afmali, cap. 7. Guadagnol ex eodem libro, Tract. 2. cap. 7. fect. 1. (r) Alcoran, c. 33. Joannes Andreas, c. 7. Guadagnol, Tract. 2. c. 10. fect. 3. Alcoran, c. 4. 12 Elainte plaints against him on this account; to still their Clamours, he brings in God in the Thirty third Chapter of his Alcoran, giving him full Liberty to deal with his Wives as he should think fit, to go in to which he pleased, and abstain from which he and commanding them to be content herewith, and also to be well pleased with whatever else he should do in reference to them, accepting as a Favour from him what soever he should give them, and take Exceptions at nothing which he should be pleafed to order concerning them.

3. In the Fourth Chapter of his Alcoran, which is called the Chapter of Women, he forbids his Musslemans to marry with their Mothers, their Mothersin-law, the Wives of their Fathers, their Daughters, the Sifters of their Fathers, the Sifter of their Mothers, the Daughters of their Brothers, the Daughters of their Sifters, their Nurses, their Foster-listers, the Mothers of their Wives, the Sifters of their Wives, the Daughters of their Wives by other Husbands, the Daughters of Women whom they have known, and the Wives of their Sons, and the married Wives of other Men. And yet in the Thirty third Chapter he brings in God exempting him from this Law, and giving him an especial Privilege to take to Wife the Daughters of his Brother, or the Daughters of his Sifter, and to go in to any other Woman whatfoever of the Believers, that shall be willing to pro-Ritute her felf unto him. But he there takes care to appropriate this Liberty fo peculiarly to himfelf alone, that he excludes all others whatfoever from For it seems the Old Lecher seared his Lust should not be sufficiently provided for, if any thing less than the whole Sex were allowed him for the gratifying of it; and therefore would endure no restraint or limitation upon himself herein, how strictly Aricly soever he lays it upon others. In the above mention'd Law he forbids the marrying of the Wives of other Men; and abundant Reason there is for it. that no Man shall be allow'd adulterously to take to Wife her that is at the same time the Wife of another; and yet he transgressed it in marrying the Wife of his Servant Zeyd. But to allay the Scandal and Offence which was taken at it, and to fecure others from fearing the like Injury and Violence from him, he was content after that to lay a restraint upon himself to do so no more; and therefore brings in God, telling him in the same thirty third Chapter of his Alcoran, That it shall not be lawful for him for the future to take another Man's Wife, how much foever he may be taken with her Beauty.

As he was thus brutishly enslaved to the love of Women, so was he as excessively jealous of those whom he had taken to Wife. And therefore to deter them from what he feared (u) he threatens them with double the punishment of other Wives. both here and hereafter, in case they should be false unto him. And when some of his Followers made too frequent refort to his House; and there entred into discourse with some of his Wives, this gave him that Offence, that to prevent it for the future, out come, as from God, those Verses of the Alcoran (w) wherein he tells them, that they should not enter into the House of the Propher without permission; and that if invited to dine with him, they should depart as soon as Dinner was over, and not enter into discourse with his Wives; that although the Prophet be ashamed to bid them be gone, yet God is not ashamed to tell them the Truth. And in the same Chapter he forbids his Wives to speak to any Man, unless with their Faces vailed. And this his Jealousy proceeded so far, as to go beyond the Grave. For he could not bear that any one else should have to do with his Wives, though after his Death; and therefore (x) strictly forbids all his Followers ever to go in to any of them as long as they should live. although all other Women when repudiated, or become Widows, had liberty to marry again, all his Wives were excluded from it. And therefore all those whom he left at his Death (y) lived Widows ever after, although some of them were very young; as particularly Ayesha, who was not then full twenty Years old, and lived above eight and forty Years after, which was in that hot Country looked upon as a very hard restraint put upon them.

⁽u) Alcoran, c. 33.

⁽w) Alcoran, c. 33.

In all these Instances I have mentioned, it appears how much he made his Imposture serve his Lust. And indeed, almost the whole of his Alcoran was (z) in like manner framed to answer some Purpose or other of his, according as occasion required. If any new Thing were to be put on foot, any Objection against him or his Religion to be answered, any Dissional thin or his Religion to be answered, any Dissional to be some among his People to be quieted, any Offence to be removed, or any thing else done for the Interest of his Designs, his constant recourse was to the Angel Gabriel for a new Revelation; and out came some Addition to his Alcoran to serve his turn herein.

(2) Richardi Confutatio, c. 12.

⁽x) Alcoran, c. 33. (y) Joannes Andreas, c. 7.

So that the most of it was made on such like Occasions, to influence his Party to what he intended. And all his Commentators thus far acknowledge it. that they are on every Chapter very particular in affigning for what Causes and for whose Sakes it was fent down from Heaven unto them. by it came to pass that abundance of Contradictions got into this Book. For as the Interest and the Design of the Impostor varied, so was he forced to make his pretended Revelations to vary also; which is a thing so well known to those of his Sect, that they all acknowledge it; and therefore where the Contradictions are fuch, as they cannot falve them, there they will have one of the contradicting places to be revoked. And they reckon in the whole Alcoran, (a) above an hundred and fifty Verses which are thus revoked; which is the best shift they can make to falve the Contradictions and Inconfistencies of it. But thereby they do exceedingly betray the Unsteadiness and Inconstancy of him that was the Author of it.

In the beginning of his Imposture, he seemed more inclined to the Jews than to the Christians; and in the first forming of his new-invented Religion, sollowed the Pattern of theirs more than any other. But after his coming to Medina, he took that disgust against them, that he became their bitter and most irreconcilable Enemy ever after, and used them with greater Cruelty in his Wars, than any other he had to deal with.

But to the Christians he ever carried himself with as much favour as could be expected from such a

I 4

⁽a) Joannes Andreas, c. 2. Guadagnol, Tract. 2. cap. 7. fect. 3.

Barbarian; and where-ever they fell under his Power, they had always good Terms from him. His general Rule, and which he laid as a strict Obligation upon all his Followers, was to fight for the Propagation of his Religion. And (b) there were only two Conditions on which he granted Peace to any he had to do with; and these were either to come into his Religion, or Submit to be Tributaries unto him. They that did the former, were admitted into the same Privileges and Freedoms with the rest of his Followers: But the latter had only the benefit of his Protection, as to their Goods and Persons, and free Exercise of their Religion, without any other Privilege or Advantage what soever, for which every Man paid an Annual Tribute. But those who would not come in, and make Peace with him on one of these two Conditions, were by his Law to be put to the And this Law, in every one of its Particulars, is still observed in all Mahometan Countries. even to this Day. At first few submitted to him. but such as he forced by Conquest; but when his Power grew to be formidable, then Multitudes. both of Christians and other Religions, flock'd to him for his Protection, and became his Tributaries. And there hath in this last Age been publish'd, first by Sionita at Paris, and after by Fabricians at Rostoch, a Writing in Arabick, which bears the Title of an Ancient Capitulation of the Christians of the East with this Impostor, which is said to have been laid up in the Monastery of Mount Carmel in Palestine, and from thence brought into France, and reposited in the French King's Library. But (6) Groting rejects it as a Forgery; and good reason he had so to do. For it bears date in the fourth Year of the Hegira, when Mahomet was not yet in a condition to speak in that Language which he is made to do in that Writing; nor was his Power then fo formidable, as to move any to pray his Protection. he having not long before been overthrown and beaten at the Battle of Ohud; and at the time this Instrument bears date (which was the fourth Month of that Year) not fully recovered from that Blow; but in the lowest Circumstances he had at any time been fince the taking the Sword for the propagating of his Imposture; and there is another particular in it, which manifestly discovers the Forgery: It makes Moamins, the Son of Abu Sophian, to be the Secretary to the Impostor, who drew the Instrument; whereas it is certain, that Moawins, with his Father Abu Sophian, was then in Arms against him; and it was not till the taking of Mecca, which was Four Years after, that they came in unto him, and to fave their Lives embraced the Imposture. This Instrument is to be read in English, in the History of the Prosent State of the Ottoman Empire, Book 2. Chap. 2.

⁽⁴⁾ Algoran, c. 4. c. 9, &c. Disputatio Christiani, c. 8. Righardi Consutatio, c. 1, 6, 7, & 10, Cantacuztni, Orat. 1. Sect. 11.

However, this is certain, that the Christians had better Terms from him, than any other of his Tributaries, and they enjoy them even to this Day; there being no Mahometan Country where their Religion is not esteemed the best next their own, and the Prosessor of it accordingly respected by them before the Jews, Heathens, or any other fort of Men that differ from them.

^{- (}c) In Epist. ad Gallos.

As the Imposer allowed the Old and New Testarment, so would be fain prove his Mission from both. The Texts, which are made use of for this purpose by those who defend his Cause, are these solutions:

Deuteronomy, c. 33. v. 2. It is faid, The Lord came from Sinai, and rose up from Seir unto them; he shirned forth from Mount Pharan, and he came with ten thousand of Saints; from his right Hand went a fiert Law for them. By which Words they will have (d) meant the coming down of the Law to Moses on Mount Sinai; of the Gospel to Jesus at Jerusalem, and of the Alcoran to Mahomet at Mecca. For, fay they. Seir are the Mountains of Jerusalem where Jesus appeared, and Pharan the Mountains of Mecca where Mahomet appeared. But they are here much out in their Geography; for Pharan (e) is a City of Arabia Petraa, near the Red-Sea, towards the bottom of that Gulph not far from the Confines of Egypt and Palestine, above five hundred Miles distant from Mecca. It was formerly (f) an Epi-Scopal See under the Patriarch of Jerusalem, and famous for Theodorus (g) once Bishop of it, who was the first that in his Writings published to the World the Opinion of the Monothelites. It is at this Day called (h) Fara. From hence the Defarts lying from this City to the Borders of Palestine, are called the Defarts or Wilderness of Pharan; and the ⁽d) Sharekani Sahodinus, Pocockii Spec. Hist. Arab. p. 185. (e) Ptolemy. (f) Geographia Sacra Caroli à Sancto Paulo, p. 317. (g) Acta Concilii Laterani fub Martino Papa. (b) Carolus à Sancto Paulo ubi supra. Geographia Nubiensis, Clim. 3. Part 5.

Mountains lying in it, the Mountains of Pharan, in Holy Scripture, near which Moses first began to repeat, and more clearly explain the Law to the Children of Israel before his Death; and to that refers

the Text above-mentioned.

Psal. 50. v. 2. We have it, Out of Sion, the Perfection of Beauty, God hath shined. Which the Syriac Version reads thus, Out of Sion God hath shewed a Gloriom Crown. From whence some Arabick Translations having expressed the two last Words by Eclilan Mahmudan, i. e. an Honourable Crown; by Mahmudan, they understand the Name of Mahomes, and so read the Verse thus, Out of Sion hath God shewed the Crown of Mahomet.

Isaiah, C. 21. V. 7. We read, and he saw a Chariot of with a couple of Horsemen, a Chariot of Asses, and a Chariot of Camels. But the old Latin Version hath it, Et vidit currum duorum Equitum, Ascensorem Asini, & Ascensorem Cameli: i.e. And he saw a Chariot of two Horsemen, a Rider upon an Ass, and a Rider upon a Camel. Where by the Rider upon an Ass, they understand Jesus Christ, because he did so ride to Jerusalem; and by the Rider on the Camel, Mahomet, because he was of the Arabians, who used to ride upon Camels.

Joh. 16. v. 7. Our Saviour tells his Disciples, If I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you. By the Comforter, the Mahometans will have their Prophet Mahomet to be here meant; and therefore among other Titles which they give him in their Language, one is Paraclet, (i) which is the Greek Word here used in this Text for the Comforter, made Arabick They also say, That the very Name of Mahomet, both here and in other Places of the Golpel, was exprefly mentioned, but that the Christians out of Malice have blotted it out, and corrupted those Holy Writings; and that at Paris there is a (k) Copy of these Gospels without these Corruptions. in which the Coming of Mahomet is foretold in feveral Places, with his Name expressy mentioned in them. And some such thing they had need to say, to justify the impudent Lye of this Impostor, who in the Sixty first Chapter of his Alcoran, entitled, The Chapter of Battle, hath these Words, Remember that lefus the Son of Mary said to the Children of IGsael, I am the Messenger of God, he hath sent me to confirm the Old Testament, and to declare unto you, That there had come a Prophet after me, whose Name that be Mahomet.

⁽i) Al Jannabi, Pocockii Specim. Hift. Arab. p. 185.

There needs no Answer to consute these Glosses. The Absurdity of them is sufficiently exposed, by barely relating them. And since they could find nothing else in all the Books of the Old and New Testament to wrest to their purpose, but these Texts above mentioned, which are to every Man's apprehending so exceedingly wide of it; these thew at how wast a distance the true Word of God is from this Issuinus Imposture, and how much it is in all its parts contrary thereto.

And thus far I have laid together as exactly and marticularly as I could, out of the best Authors that treat of this Impostor, all that is credibly related of him, and those Methods which he took for the framing and propagating that Impious Forgery, which he hath imposed upon so large a part of Mankind as have been deluded thereinto. And what is my Design in the present publishing hereof, is shewn in the ensuing Treatise.

⁽b) Pocockii Specim, Hift, Arab. p. 186.

DISCOURSE

For the Vindicating of

CHRISTIANITY

FROM THE

Charge of Imposture.

OFFER'D,

By way of LETTER,

To the Consideration of the DEISTS of the Present Age.

By Humphrey Prideaux, D. D. Dean of NORWICH.

The Eighth Edition, Corrected.

LONDON:

Printed in the Year MDCCXXII.

LETTER TOTHE DEISTS, &c.

Gentlemen,

F I am not mistaken, the Reason you give for your Renouncing that Religion ye were Baptized into, and is the Religion of the Country in which ye were born, is, That the Gospel of Jesus Christ is an Imposture: An Assertion that I tremble to repeat. But whether that Gospel be right, or ye are in the right that deny it, will appear from the Consideration of the Nature of an Imposture, and from the Life of that most infamous Impostor (whom we, as well as you, acknowledge to be such) which I have before given you the exact Picture of. And if you can find any one Lineament of it, any one Line of all its filthy Features in the whole Gospel of Jesus-Christ, I durst say (so sure I am of the contrary) that for the sake hereof I will give you all you contend for, and yield you up the whole Cause. And therefore that we may throughly examine the Matter, I will lay down, in the first Place, What an Imposture is; 2dly, What are inseparable Marks and Characters of it; And 3dly, That none of these Marks can belong to the Gospel of Jesus Christ. And when I have done this, I hope I shall convince all such of you, who have not totally abandon'd your selves to your Insidelity, That the Gospel of Jesus Christ is that Sacred Truth of God, which you are all bound to believe.

An Imposture, taking the Word in the full Latitude of its Signification, may denote any Lye or Cheat, whereby one Man imposeth upon another. But it is most frequently used to express such Chems as are impos'd on us by those who come with false Characters of themselves, pretending to be what they are not, in order to delude and deceive. And when this Character, which is thus fallly assum'd, is no less than a pretended Embassy from Heaven, and under the Credit of it a New Religion is deliverid to the World as coming from God, which is nothing else but a Forgery, invented by the first Propagators of it, to impose a Cheat upon Mankind, it amounts to be an Imposture in that Sense, in which you would have the Gospel of Jesus Christ to be fuch. And in this Sense it is to be understood in the Controversy between us; so that the whole Question which we are to examine into, is, Whether the Christian Religion be a Truth really given unto us by Divine Revelation from God our Creator, or else a meer Human Invention, contrived by the first Propagators of it, to impose a Cheat upon Mankind. And when I have fully disproy'd the latter part of this Question, That the Christian Religion cannot be such an Invention contrived to cheat and impose upon us, that will sufficiently prove the former, that it must be that Divine Truth, which all we that are Christians sirmly believe it to be.

That it is possible such a Cheat may be imposed upon Men, cannot be deny'd. It is sufficiently prov'd in the foregoing History, which is a very Full Instance of it; and I have laid it before you for this very Purpose, that you may therein see clearly delineated and display'd in all its pr per Colours, the whole Nature of the Thing, which you charge our Halv Religion with. All that I contend for is. That if Christianity be such an Imposture as we all acknowledge the Religion of Mahomet to be, it must be just such another thing as that is, with all the same Marks, Characters and Properties of an Imposture belonging thereto; and that if none of those Marks, Characters, or Properties can be discovered in it, it must be a clear Eviction of the whole Charge, and manifestly prove, That our Holy Religion cannot be that Thing which you would have it be. For our only way of knowing Things, is by their Marks and Properties; and it is by them only that we can discover what the Nature of them is. It is only by the Marks and Properties of a Man, that we know a Man from another Living Creature, for we cannot fee the Effences of Things. And so it must be only by the Marks and Properties of an Imposture, that we can know an Imposture from that which is a real Truth. when attested unto us. And as where we find none of the Marks and Properties of a Man, we affuredly know that cannot be a Man, how much foever any one may tell us that it is: So where we find none of the Marks and Properties of an Im-K 2 posture posture, we may assuredly know that cannot be an Imposture, how much soever you, or any other like you, may affert it so to be.

Now the Marks and Characters which I look on to be inseparable from every such Imposture, are these following: 1. That it must always have for its end some carnal Interest. 2. That it can have none but wicked Men for the Authors of it. That both these must necessarily appear in the very Contexture of the Imposture it felf. 4. That it can never be fo fram'd, but that it must contain fome palpable Falsities, which will discover the Falsity of all the rest. 5. That where-ever it is first propagated, it must be done by Craft and Fraud. 6. That when entrusted with many Confpirators, it can never be long conceal'd. And, 7. That it can never be establish'd, unless back'd with Force and Violence. That all these must belong to every Imposture, and all particularly did so to Mahometism; and that none of them can be charged upon Christianity, is what I shall now proceed to shew you: Of each of them in their Order.

SECT. I.

I. That every Imposture must have for its end some carnal Interest, is a thing so plain and evident, that I suppose it will not need much Proof. For to impose a Cheat upon Mankind, and in a Matter of that great Importance, as all that have any Religion, hold that to be, is a thing of that Difficulty to compass, and of that Danger to attempt, that it cannot be conceived, why any one should put himself upon such a Design, that doth not propose some very valuable Advantage to himself in the Success. To cheat one Man is not always so easy a Matter, nor is it without its Mischiefs chiefs and Inconveniencies in the Discovery. But to enterprize a Cheat upon all Mankind, and in a thing of that importance, as the introducing of a new Religion, and the abolishing of the Old one, (to which so many both by Custom and Education will be always zealously affected, be it what it will) must be an Undertaking of the greatest Difficultu and Hazard imaginable. For whoever engageth himself in such a Plot of Imposture, must unavoidably meet with many strong Oppositions to struggle with in the Management of it, which will continually put his Thoughts upon the Rack, to find out Devices to furmount them, and his Body to incessant Pains and Labour to bring them into Execution; and for the effecting hereof, he must have fome Confidents to affift him, some to help forward the Defign, whom he must trust with the Secret of it, and the more he hath of such, the more he hazards all to a Discovery. And all this while his Mind will be fill'd with anxious Cares, and his Thoughts distracted with many uneasy and affrighting Apprehensions (as is usual with Men on wicked Designs) about the Success, and every Failure will expose him to that terrible Revenge from those he attempts to delude, as fuch a Villany, whenever detected, most justly deserves. This was Mahomet's Case all the while he was propagating his Imposture at Mecca, and so it must be of every other fuch Impostor also. And when a Man puts himself upon all this, the Nature of the Thing manifestly leads us to conclude, he must propose something to himself hereby, which may make him amends for all in the refult. For when so much is put to hazard, Men do not use to do it for nothing. There must always be some great Interest in the Bottom of such a Design, something that the Undertaker Кз values at a more than ordinary Rate, to make him engage in so exceeding difficult and dangerous an Enterprize. For where-ever the Venture is great; it must be taken for granted there is an End proposed, which in the Estimation of the Venturer, is equivalent thereto. What it was that put Mahomet on his Imposture, the foregoing History of his Life sufficiently shews; it was his Ambition and his To have the Sovereignty over his Country, to gratify his Ambition; and as many Women as he pleased to satiate his Lust, was what he aim'd at; and to gain himself a Party for the compassing of this, was the grand Design of that new Religion which he invented, and the whole end and Reason of his imposing it on those he deluded thereinto. And whoever purfues the like Method, must certainly have fome such End in it; it being totally incredible that any one should take upon him the Trouble, Fatigue, and Danger of carrying on such a Cheat only for cheating sake. But here we challenge all the Enemies of that holy Religion which we profess, to find out any thing like this in the Gospel of Jesus Christ, any thing that savours of worldly Interest, either in him the first Founder of our Faith, or in any of his holy Apostles, who were the first Propagators of it. Vaninus, one of the most zealous Champions of Impiety that ever appear'd against the Christian Cause (for he dy'd a Martyr for it) hath attempted this: But after the most accurate and diligent Search which so keen an Adverfary could make, he was forc'd to give up the and plainly acknowledge, that in the whole Series of the History and Actions of our Saviour, he could not find any thing that he could charge with secular Interest or Design to blast him or his Religion with. And if you will renew the fame fame Attempt, the you extend the Enquiry much farther, even to his Apostles, and all the rest of his Disciples, who first preached this holy Religion to the World, and take in to your Assistance all the Enemies of it; after the strictest Scrutiny that you can make, you will never have any better Success herein.

For had our Saviour's Design been to seduce the People for his own Interest, he must have taken the same Course that other Seducers do. have flatter'd them in their Humours, and form'd his Doctrines to their Fancies; courted those that were in greatest Authority and Esteem with them, and made it his Business mostly to preach against and decry those who were least in their Fayour, and study'd and practis'd all other such Arts of Popularity, whereby he might best infinuate into their good liking, and gain that Interest with them, as might be sufficient to serve his Purpose, and obtain the End propos'd. These were the Methods whereby Mahomet first propagated his Imposture. and these are they which all others must take. whose Purpose it is to deceive the People. Saviour in every particular acted contrary hereto; which fufficiently proves that he had no fuch Design to compass. For he freely preached against whatever he found blamable in the People, spared not their beloved Errors, or fram'd his Doctrines to indulge them in any one evil Practice, how predominant soever amongst them, and was so far from courting those in the greatest Authority and Efteem with them, that he was most sharp and birter against them above all others, whom they most Idoliz'd, I mean the Scribes and Pharisees: For he, on all Occasions, detected their Hypocrisies, and laid K 4 open open their evil Practices, and in the feverest Manner rebuk'd and condemn'd them for their Iniquity therein, even to the preferring and justifying before them the wicked Publicans, who for their Exactions and Oppressions upon the People in their gathering the publick Taxes, were held among them the most hated of Men, and the worst of Sin-And therefore, tho' his Miracles often drew their Admiration and their Applause on the one hand, his Doctrines and his Preachings as fast alienated them from him on the other; so that those very same Men, who, for the sake of the former, follow'd him often in Multitudes, and were ready to acknowledge him to be the Messias, were as violently fet against him at other Times, for the sake of the latter, and at last crucified him on the account thereof. And is it possible to conceive that he who took all those Courses so contrary to the Humour of the People, without regarding how much they tended to exasperate them against him, should have any Interest or Design of his own to ferve himself of them?

When our Saviour took upon him to be the Meffias that was promis'd, had he done it only as an Impostor, to promote a Secular Interest and Design of his own, he would certainly have assum'd that Character according to those Notions in which the Jews expected him. For in this Case the Expectation of the People must have been the grand Motive to the Imposture, and their looking for such a Messias to come, the main inducing Reason of his putting himself thereon; and therefore to be sure, had he been an Impostor, he would have offer'd himself to them no otherwise than just such a Messias as their Notions of him would have him to be; and there are two special Reasons which in this Case would have determin'd him hereto. 1. Because those Notions offer'd to him the highest secular Interest that could be attained unto: And, 2. Because the suiting of his Pretensions exactly according to them, would have been the readiest and most likely way for him to carry the Interest, whatever it was, which you may suppose him to have aim'd at.

And, first, the Notions which the Jews had of the Messias, offer'd him the highest secular Interest that could be attain'd unto; and therefore to be fure, when he took upon him to be that Messias, had he done it only as an Impestor, for a secular Interest, he would have laid hold of that Interest offer'd, and under the Character which he assum'd. most certainly have claimed all that which according to those Notions the Messian was to have. For this was nothing less than a most glorious secular Kingdom; the Expectations of the Jews being then concerning this Matter the same, as they have ever fince continued amongst them; that the Mefsias * was to be a secular Prince, who was to deliver them from their Enemies, and restore the Kingdom of David at Jerusalem, and there reign in great Glory and Splendor over the whole House of And what greater or more defirable Interest can this World afford, than such a State of Advancement? And what is there that is more

^{*} The Messias shall come and restore the Kingdom of the House of David to the antient State of its sormer Dominion, and shall rebuild the Temple, and gather together the dispersed of Israel; and then shall be re-established the Legal Rites and Constitutions, as in sormer Times; and Sacrifices shall be offered, and the Sabbatical Tears and Jubilees observed, according to every Precept delivered in the Law. Maimonides in Yad Hachazekah in Tract. de Regibus & Bellis corum, sap. 11. sect. 1.

valu'd and esteem'd in the Opinion of all Mankind, than the Attainment thereof? And at that Time when our Saviour first appear'd on his Mission, there was the most favourable Juncture that could offer it felf, for his setting up for all this: For then the People of the Jews being fallen under the Yoke of the Roman Government, and also grown very impatient under it, entertain'd a general Expectation of the speedy Coming of the Messias, under that Character of a Temporal Prince, which they had conceited of him, to deliver them from this Bondage. and by conquering those who subjected them thereto, again restore the Kingdom of Israel. And these Hopes had then taken Possession of their Minds, and they were all so full of them, that every one flood in a manner ready and prepar'd to join with him, whosoever should take upon him to be the Person, as sufficiently appeareth not only from + the Scriptures, but also from the History which (*) Folephons

(*) Josephus not only makes mention of Theudas, and Judas of Galilee, and the Egyptian, of whom we have an account in Scripture, Antiq. lib. 20. c. 2, & 6. but also of several others, who on the same Pretences found the Multitude ready to join themselves unto them, Antiq. lib. 20. c. 6, & 7. & de Bello Judaico, 1. 7. c. 31. As did also Barchosbas in the Reign of Adri-

[†] Mark 15. v. 43. Luke 2. v. 38, &c. 24, v. 31. Als 1. v. 6. From all which Places compared together, it appears that there was among the Jews, in the Time of our Saviour, a general Expectation of the speedy Coming of the Melfias, and that their Notion was of a Temporal Deliverance and a Temporal Restoration of the Kingdom of Israel to be effected by him. And this Expectation was it which made the Multitude so ready to join themselves to Theudas, and after to Judas of Galiles, of whom mention is made Als 5. v. 36, 37. and after that to an Egyptian Jew, Als 21. v. 38. on their pretending to be the Persons from whom this Deliverance was expected.

Josephus wrote of those Times. And therefore had our Saviour, by taking upon him to be the Meffian, aim'd only, as an Impostor, at a secular Interest; What Reason can be given, why he should not with the Name of the Messias, have also claimed this grand Interest of a Kingdom, which, according to the Opinion of all those who expected a Messian belong'd thereto? Or why he should not in so favourable a Juncture, as was then offer'd for it, have possessed himself thereof? But he was so far from doing either of these, that he wav'd both, and not only omitted this Opportunity of possessing himself of this Kingdom, but also renounc'd and disclaim'd the whole thereof. For instead of laying any Pretence to it, he set himself to consute those very Notions which gave it unto him, and to convince the People that they were mistaken in them, and thereby overthrew all that which offered unto him the highest Secular Interest which the Men of this World use to aim at. And not only so, but advanc'd in the stead of those Errors, such Doctrines concerning the Messias as were not only without all an the Roman Emperor. And what Maimonides delivers of the Doctrine of the Jews concerning this Matter, might give any Man an Handle to offer at it. For, faith he, the Megias is not to be known by Signs or Wonders (for he is to work none) but only by Conquest. And therefore his Words are; I shere arifeth a King of the House of David who is studious of the Law, and diligent in observing the Precepts of it, as was David his Father; that is, not only of the Law, which is written, but of the Ordl also, and inclineth all Israel to walk therein, and repairs the Breaches, and sights the Battles of the Lord, this Person may be presum'd to be the Messas. But if he prospers in what he undertakes, and subdues all the neighbouring Nations round about him, and re-builds the Sanduary in its former Place, and gathers together the dispersed of Israel, then he is for certain the Messas. Maimonides in Yad Hachazekah Tract. de Regibus & Bellis corum, c. 11. sect. 4.

manner of Worldly Interest in them, but all levell'd directly opposite thereto. For he taught them, that the Kingdom of the Messias was not a Temporal, but a Spiritual Kingdom; that he was not to be a Judge and a Ruler over them in the Secular Affairs of this World, and the Pomp and Glory thereof, but to govern and direct their Hearts within by the Power of his Holy Spirit, in order to conform them to that Law of Righteousness. which might fit them to reign with him in the Kingdom of Everlasting Glory hereafter. therefore when the Jews, being convinc'd by his wonderful Works that he was the Messias, would have taken him by Force and made him their King. he withdrew from among them to disappoint the Design. And when interrogated by Pilate, he told him his Kingdom was not of this World. And had he aim'd at any fuch Thing, he would never have taught fuch Doctrines of himself, which so directly overthrew all that which gave him the most favourable Advantage of attaining thereto. he offer'd at more of this World's Interest, than the Notions of the Jews invested him with (if it were possible more could be had than those gave their Messias) or if he had join'd thereto the Enjoyment of carnal Pleasure, as Mahomet did, there might then have been some ground of charging him of differing from those Notions for the serving of his own Interest; but when the Change was on the quite contrary hand, and instead of being that reigning and glorious Messias, amidst the highest Pomp and Splendor of this World, as the Jews would have had him to be, he declar'd himself only for fuch a Kingdom as had nothing of this World in it, and whose greatest Perfection lay in its greatest Opposition thereto; he that will say that there was

was any thing of this World in his thus stripping himself of all the Pomp and Glory of it, or that there could be any Design of Interest for himself. where all manner of Self-Interest is thus renounced, must reconcile Contradictions, and make the Nature of one Extreme to consist in the other, which is most directly opposite thereto. Had he, when he took upon him to be the Messias, done it only for a Worldly Interest, this great Interest of Reigning so obviously offer'd it self unto him under that Character, that it cannot be conceiv'd how he should ever have avoided it. The Power. and Glory, and Riches of a Kingdom, are too great Baits of Allurement to the worldly-minded Man, ever to be refus'd by fuch a one, after he had assum'd that Character, which, in the generally receiv'd Notion of it, invested him with them. Or can it be imagin'd, fince these are the only Things which could make that Character at all defirable to an Impostor, why any Man should run the great Hazard and Trouble of being such in the assuming of it. but for the fake of them? All those false Christs. who have been real Impostors, and have in several Ages started up to delude the World with this Pretence, have ever with the Name of the Messias, claim'd also this Kingdom, which the Jews ascribed thereto, and that, in every fuch Scene of Deceit which hath open'd in the World, hath always appear'd to have been the Bait, which allur'd those Wretches to act that Part therein. And had our Saviour been fuch a one as they, he must certainly have taken the same Course. For to do otherwise. would have been to do the Wickedness without the Temptation, and to run the Hazard without that which was to reward the Success. ving been so far herefrom, that he did not only renounce nounce this Kingdom, but all manner of other worldly Interest whatever; this plainly shews he could have no Design upon this World by that Mission which he undertook, or had any other Reafon for his entring on it as the Mellias, but that he was really that Person, whom God, by his Holy Prophets, had so often promis'd, and at length, in the Fulness of Time, accordingly sent to bring Life and Salvation unto us.

2. Had our Saviour, when he took upon him to be the Messias, done it only as an Impostor, for a Secular Interest, he would have assum'd that Character according to those Notions in which the Jews expected him, because this would have been the readiest and most likely way for him to carry that Interest, whatever you may suppose it to be. For the eager Expectations of that People being then for fuch a reigning Mellias, as they had drawn a Pi-Chure of in their own Fancies, his only way to have gotten them to own and receive him for the Meffas, was for him exactly to have humour'd them herein, and proposed himself to them just such a one as they would have had him to be. And had his Intent been only to feduce them under that Character, in order to serve himself of them for a Secular Interest, this Method is that which is so obviously necessary in such a Case, that it could not have been avoided. For to do otherwise would evidently have been to put the Matter in a most certain Method totally to miscarry, and make the whole Defign impracticable. To come to them as their Messias, under a Character totally differing from that in which they expected him, would be sufficient to make them, for that very Reason, never to receive him. Altho' Humility, and the debaing of a Man's felf, may, in other Cafes, be a Means 90, 😦

Means to court Popularity, and procure the Rayour of the People, it could never have ferv'd in this: nor would our Saviour's taking upon him the Character of the Mellias, fo valtly lower as to this World, than the general Opinion then gave it unto him, have been of any stead to him in order thereto; but quite the contrary. For the Jews had then fram'd their Notions of the Mellias they expected, for their own Sakes rather than his: fuitable to those Worldly Interests they were most in love with, and those Notions went current through the whole Nation, as the true and exact Description of him, by which he was to be known at his coming. And therefore for any one to propose himself to them, as the Messias, under a Character totally disagreeing herefrom, would have been the readiest way for him to be told, that he was not therefore the Man; and this, instead of being a Means to seduce them to him, become such a Reason for their rejecting him, as no Art of Imposture would ever have been able to master. this, indeed, prov'd the main Cause, that, notwithstanding our Saviour's Miracles, the Tems, who daily faw them, were still harden'd in their Aversion against him; and it continues with them to this Day the grand Stumbling-block of Infidelity, which they cannot get over. For they look for a Messias, that was to subdue their Enemies, and deliver them from the Slavery of the Romans, and by the Establishment of a Temporal Kingdom over them, advance the State of their Nation to the highest Prosperity, and their Law to the highest Perfection of Observance, which both were capa-But he proposed himself unto them as a Messias, who had nothing to do with this World, or any of the Interests of it; and instead of the Temporal Temporal Kingdom they expected, claim'd only a Spiritual; and instead of the outward Rites and Ceremonies of the Mosaical Law, which were all fulfill'd and done away in him, taught them only to worship God in Spirit and in Truth. And what could more displease and alienate from him, Men fo eager upon this World, and the Glory and Riches of it, than thus, instead of Conquest over Enemies, Extent of Power, and a most flourishing State of Profecity, which they dreamt of, to preach to them of Mortification, Repentance, Selfdenial, and those other Christian Virtues, in the Increase of which the true Prosperity of Christ's Kingdom only consists; and instead of their Temple, and the outward Pomp and Splendor of the Worship there perform'd, which they so much valu'd themselves upon, and so zealously affected, thus to propose to them the worshipping of God without all this, only in that Spiritual Manner, which, under the numerous Rites of the Mosaical Law, they had not been accustomed to have any great Regard unto? For this was to baulk them of the Hopes they most delighted in, and put a Baffle upon them in those eager Expectations and most earnest Desires, which their Hearts had long dwelt upon. And how ill they were able to brook this, will appear by this Instance in the Go-

* John 6. fpel *, That those very same Men, who, on the seeing of his Miracles.

were so firmly convinc'd of his being the Messian, that they would forthwith have taken him by force, and declar'd him their King; the next day after, on his preaching to them of Spiritual Things, and offering thereby to withdraw their Minds from the perishable Things of this World, to fix them on those which endure to everlasting Life, murmar'd against against him, and would no more endure him. For their Hearts were after a Messias that should Found them a Temporal Kingdom, and make them great and glorious, and powerful therein; and to fet up a Spiritual Kingdom instead hereof, was not only to deprive himself of the Grandeur of the other, but them also of the Portion which they expected therein. And no one certainly that intended a Worldly Interest by such an Undertaking, would ever have projected it in such a Method as this. which was so totally inconsistent with it. For this would be to renounce in the very Act the End which he proposed, and make the Attainment of it impracticable by the very means whereby he pursu'd it; it would be to wave the highest in this World, to pursue after another, which no one can imagine what, and thereby totally alienate those from him, by whom alone he could hope in fuch a Defigh as this to attain any at all. therefore had a worldly End and a worldly Interest been all that our Saviour aim'd at, in his taking upon him to be the Messias, whom the Jews expected, he would never fo much contrary to that Interest, and so much contrary to that most obvious means of carrying on such a Design, have assum'd that Character in a manner so much differing from that under which they expected him: Or could he by fuch a Method of Procedure ever have made any thing of the Attempt among them, had he not on his side the Power of God, as well as his Mission, to make him successful therein?

Had his Business only been to deceive the People for the advancing of some secular Interest of his own, he would never have attempted it in so unlikely a way of succeeding, as that of abolishing the Mosaical Law, to which the whole Nation of the Jews were then to zealously addicted, that they could not bear the least Word which might seem to derogate either from the Excellency which they conceiv'd of it, or that Opinion which they then had, and still retain, that it was to be immutably observ'd by them to the end of the World. Case of Mahomet with his Men of Mesca was quite otherwise, he found no such Zeal in them for their old Religion to struggle with; they themselves were then grown so weary of it, that the Generality of them had in a manner totally exchanged it for no Religion at all, at the Time that Mahomet first began to propagate his Imposture among them; they having then for the most part given themselves up to the Opinions of the Zendikees, who in the same manner as the Epicureans among the Greeks, and too many now a-days among us, acknowledg'd the Being of a God, but denying his Providence, the Immortality of the Soul, and a Future State, did at the same Time deny all manner of Necessity of paying any Worship unto him. And no Wonder then, if such Men, who plac'd their All in this World, were easily brought over to a Seet, whose chief Aim was at worldly Prosperity and worldly Pleasure in the Religion which they profess'd. This Mahomet was well enough aware of, before he started his new Religion among them; and it feems to have been the greatest Encouragement which embolden'd him to venture on that Attempt. However, fince they still retain'd the outward Form of their Religion after they had deserted the Substance of it, he found even from hence that Opposition to his Design, that to make it go down, he was forc'd to retain all those Rites and Ceremonies in his new Religion, which they had been afore us'd to in their old; and in order hereto, he chose to make som e some dangerous Alterations in his first Establishments, as particularly in that of the Kebla, rather than ruffle his Arabians by abolishing what he found them through long Usage and Custom any way addicted to. For his Business being to deceive the People, his Care was to offer at nothing which might be difficult to go down with them; and fo must it be of every other Deceiver who takes upon him to act the like Part. But in every particular it was quite otherwise with our Saviour, and those whom he first preached his Gospel unto. Jews having undergone several terrible Scourges from the Hand of God for the Neglect of that Law which he had given them, were from their former too much Difregard of it, then grown into the contrary Extreme of being with exceeding Superstition and Bigotry too much devoted to it. They then look'd on it with the same Veneration as they still do, to be an immutable Law never to be alter'd, That the Messias himself at his coming should not make the least Change therein, but that the Glory of his Kingdom should chiefly consist in the Perfection of its Observance, and the exact Performance of the Worship it prescrib'd; and for any one to advance any Doctrine contrary hereto, was reckon'd no less than * Blasphemy among them. And there- * Atts 6. v. 13.

L

fore had our Saviour only confulted

Flesh and Blood in the Mission which he undertook, had he had no other Design therein than a secular Interest and a worldly End, he would never have oppos'd himself against the violent Current of such predominant Opinions, as he found then reigning among them whom he first preach'd his Gospel unto, or ever durst have offer'd at the Abolition of that Law which they were so violently bigotted unto.

L Z Had

Had he come to deceive them as a Seducer, the very Nature of the thing must necessarily have directed him to a quite contrary Method, that is, to footh and collogue with them whom he came to impose upon; to have contradicted no Opinion they were violent for, nor oppos'd any Doctrine which they were zealously affected to, but to have study'd their Humours and learn'd their Notions, and fo fram'd and fuited all his Doctrines according thereto, as might best take to draw them over to the End design'd. To have done otherwife would have been to fet Priest and People against him, as an Enemy to their Religion, and a Blasphemer of their Law. And as our Saviour found it so in the Result, so it must have been obvious to any one in his Case to have foreseen it from the Beginning. And therefore fince notwithstanding this, he took this Method, fo contrary to the whole End and Design of one that intends a Cheat upon the People; and without having any Regard to that Zeal with which the Jews were then so violently bigotted to their Law, or that Rage of Refentment which they were ready to express against whatfoever in the least should derogate from it, did boldly preach unto them such Doctrines as totally disannull'd it; this manifestly proves he could have no Interest of his own to serve upon them in this Undertaking, nor that he had any other Reason for his Entring on it, but that he was fent of God fo to do.

The grand and fundamental Doctrine of the Religion which Jesus Christ lest his Church, was that of his Death and Passion, whereby he made Atonement for our Sins, and deliver'd us from the Punishment which was due unto us for them. By this means only he propos'd to save us, that is, from

Sin,

Sin, the Devil, and Eternal Death; and by this Conflict only did he undertake to subdue these our Enemies for us, and on that Conquest to found us a Kingdom, which should make us Holy and Righteous here, and for ever Blessed with him in Glorv hereafter. This was the whole End and Purpose of our Saviour's Mission; this he frequently foretold to his Disciples, and on this was founded the whole Religion which he taught them. And can any one say he could have a Design of secular Interest for himself in such a Religion as this, which could have no Being but by his dying for it, or any Reason for its Establishment among Men, till he had laid down his Life for the compleating of it? To fay there was any thing of worldly Interest in this, would be to charge it on his Cross, and place it in that bitter and ignominious Death which he underwent thereon. Men sometimes put their Lives to great Hazard for the Interests of this World, but for a Man purposely to design Death for fuch an End, and part with this World in fuch a manner as Christ did, for the sake of any thing that this World hath, is a thing which was never yet heard of, and is in it felf so contrary to the most obvious Dictates both of Reason and Nature. that no one can be so absurd as to imagine it possible for any Man so to do.

But that which I know you will fay in this Cafe, is, That it was not Christ himself, but his Disciples after his Death that made this a Part of his Religion; That he intended no such thing in the Undertaking he enter'd on, that it should end in his Death, and be compleated by his Crucifixion; but that this happening unto him, those who kept up his Party, and propagated his Religion after him, soisted this thereinto, to salve the Ignominy

 L_3

of his Death, and serve themselves of it, for the better carrying on of their Designs thereby. And if so, then the Imposture must be shifted from him to his Disciples. And in this Case the same Enquiry must still be made, What Advantage could they propose to themselves here-from? For if Christ's having no Self-design or worldly Interest in the Religion which he taught, be of any Force to acquit him of being guilty of Imposture therein (as it must with every Man of unprejudiced Reason) it must also be of force to acquit them of the same Charge who propagated it after him. And what worldly Interest is it which they could possibly have in this Matter? If you say Empire, how improbable is it, that a few poor Fishermen, without any manner of Foundation either of Power, Riches, or Interest with others, for the carrying on of such a Design, should ever frame in their Thoughts the least Imagination tending thereto, especially at that Time when the Roman Empire, being in its utmost Heighth and Vigour, had the major part of the then known World united under its Command, to crush the greatest Attempts of this Nature, which might be made against it? If Riches and Honour be alledg'd as their End, I must desire you to tell me how this could be a Means to gain them? or whether any one of them ever attained to either thereby? If we examine into the Accounts which we have of their Lives and Actions, we shall find them journeying about the World from Place to Place in great Poverty, and under all the Difficulties and Pressures of it, to discharge that Apostleship which was committed unto them, and in every Place where they came, to be loaded with Contempt, Oppression, and Persecution for the sake of that Religion which they taught. Had Riches and Honour

Honour been the End propos'd for all this, certainly after having experienc'd, by the ill Success, how improper Means they had taken in order thereto, some of them would have desisted from the Enterprize, and no longer have purfu'd a Defign which could not answer its End. But you cannot bring us an Instance of any one of them that did this. No, they still went on in the Work which they had undertaken, and without being wearied by the Poverty they labour'd under, or in the least discouraged by that Contempt, Scorn, and Persecution which they every where met with, all constantly persever'd to preach that Gospel which they had receiv'd, even to their Lives end; and not only fo, but most of them laid down their Lives for the fake thereof; which they would never have done, if they had not for their Ministry a much higher Reason than all the Honour and Riches of this World could ever amount unto. All that can be faid of any worldly Interest for them in their preaching up that Religion which they propagated. is, That they were thereby made Heads of the Party which they drew over thereto. But alas. what Advantage could this be unto them to be thus made Heads of a contemn'd, oppress'd, and persecuted Party of Men, who were every where fought out for Bonds, Imprisonments and Death? To head fuch a Party, what is it but to expose a Man's felf to the greater Danger, and fet himself up to receive the first Strokes of every Persecution which was levell'd against it? For in this Case, those who head the Party are most fought after, and the Ringleaders of it are ever made the first and the most fignal Examples of every Severity which is defign'd for its Oppression. And this was all that the Apofiles got by heading that Party which they converted to the Christian Religion; and what of worldly Interest could be found therein? If the heading of a Party be of any Advantage to a Man, it must be then only when it brings him Honour, or Power, or Riches, or some other worldly Enjoyment. But to head such a Party as the first Christians were, could bring none of these therewith; but, on the contrary, Poverty, Contempt, Oppressions, and Persecutions, were all the Fruits, as to this World, which the Apostles of our Saviour reaped thereby. And certainly on these Terms to head a Party, could never have been the Reason to make them enter on that Undertaking; or if it had, they could never under such Discouragements have long continued therein.

L 4

SECT. II.

II. And thus far having examin'd the first Mark of Imposture, and, I hope, sufficiently shown it cannot belong to that Holy Religion which we profess: I shall now proceed to the second; that is, that it must always have wicked Men for the Authors of it. For thus to impose upon Mankind a false Religion, is the worst of Cheats, and the highest Injustice which can be done either to God or Man; to God, because it robs him of the Worship of his Creatures. either by diverting it to a false Object, or by directing it to him in such a false Way, as cannot be accepted of before him. And to Man, because it deprives him of his God, by putting him upon fuch a false Religion as must necessarily alienate both his Mercy and his Favour from him. And to do this is such a consummate Piece of Iniquity, that it is impossible any one can arrive thereto, without haying first corrupted himself to a great degree in all Things else. For such an one must have cast off all Fear of God, as well as all Regard of Man, before he could ever offer at so great a Wickedness against both. And when a Man is come to this. to be fure he will stick at nothing whereby his Lusts may be gratify'd, or any carnal interest serv'd, which he fets his Heart upon, but will make the Corruptions of his Mind appear in all the Actions of his life, and be thoroughly wicked in every thing where his own Interest, or his own Designs. do not put a Restraint upon him. And that Mahomet was such a one, the History of his Life, which I have laid before you, sufficiently shews. But who ever yet charged * Jesus Christ, or his Holy Apostles with any thing like this? Not Celfus, not Porphyry, nor Julian, or any other of the Heathens, or the Jews, who were the bitterest Enemies of Christianity, and the greatest Opposers of it. And to be fure could they have found any fuch Accusation against any of them, they would never have spar'd to have made the utmost Use of it they could, for the blasting of that Religion which they taught. For it is a popular Argument, which would have ferv'd their Purpose among the People more than any other they could have offer'd unto them. And we fee with what Success the various Sects among us serve themselves of it every Day, no Argument being more prevalent amongst the unthinking Multitude, for the beating down the Reputation of any Profession of Religion, than the ripping up of the Faults of those that teach it. To examine into all the Labyrinths and abstruce Speculations of Reason and Argument, which may be brought for or against any Religion, is an operose Business, which all have not Capacities for, and few care to attend to. But of Good and Evil every Man is a Indge: and where they find the Teachers of any Religion to be wicked and naught, it is an Inference which they are all apt too precipitately to run into, that the Religion must be naught also; and without any further examining into it, condemn it so to be. And I find there is nothing which you your felves are more greedy to lay hold of, for an Argument against our holy Christian Retigion, than the Faults which you observe in some of our Ministers, whose Business it is to promote it. And therefore if the Faults of the present Teachers of Christianity be apt thus to afford so popular and prevalent an Argument against it, how much more would the Faults of the first Founders and Propagators of it have done so, had there been any such to object against them? And had there been any fuch, fo keen and fearching Adversaries would never have suffer'd the Discovery to have escap'd them, or ever fail'd to have objected it for the ferving of their turn to the ntmost they were able; and it can be owing to nothing but their most unblamable Innocency, that they have been secur'd herefrom. To say that they could not have that Knowledge of their Lives and Actions, as was fufficient for them to difcern their Faults, and observe their Miscarriages, will not folve the Matter. Though Mahomet acted his Imsofture to many hundred Miles within the remoter Purts of Arabia, among a People who, by vast Defarts, were in a manner cut off from the Converse of the rest of Mankind, where very few or none of any other Nation ever came to foy out his Actions. or observe his Doings, and where he had none else to be Witnesses of them, but those only who all embrac'd his Forgery, and became zealously addiched to it; yet all this could not ferve to conceal his Faults, or hide his monstrous Wickednesses from being observ'd and recorded against him. The foregoing History gives you a large Catalogue of them, and they are vouched by the Authority of some of the most authentick Writers of his own Sect. But Christianity had not its Birth in such an obscure Hole, nor did the first Founder of it, or those who propagated it after him, make their first Appearance among such rude and illiterate Barbarians as that Impostor did, but on one of the openest Stages in the World, at Jerusalem, and in the Land of Juden; and not in an Age when, as formerly, that Nation separated it felf from all others, and had no Converse with any but themselves, but when they had scatter'd themselves abroad, and mingled with all other Nations, and also were forced to admit all other Nations to mingle with them, by being made a Province of the Roman Empire, which brought not only Soldiers and Merchants of other Nations among them, but also open'd the Gate to all others, as they should think fit to come and refide among them. And the Temple at Jerusalem being that where all of the Jewish Religion worshipped; this constantly brought this ther from all Nations those who profess'd it, which made a very great Refort thither from all Parts of the World, especially at their great Festivals. And therefore just after our Saviour's Sufferings at the Time of Pentecost next following, we are told that there

^{*} All that the bitterest Enemies of Christianity have ever objected against our Saviour, save a fabulous Story of his Birth, amounts to no more than this, That he was a Magician, which was an Invention fram'd only to salve his working of Mirades, which they could not deny in such a manner, as to make them give no Reputation or Authority to the Dockrines which he taught.

there were then at Jerusalem, * Parthians, Medes. and Elamites, and the Dwellers of Mesopotamia, Cappadocia, Pontus, Asia, Phrygia, Pamphylia, Egypt, Libya, and Cyrene, with the Strangers of Rome, Cretes and Arabians. So that to be fure nothing could be hid or conceal'd, which was done on so open a Stage of the World, and in the Sight of so many Nations as were then present upon it; nor is it possible, if those who then first deliver'd the Christian Religion to the World, had been such wicked Persons as Mahomet was, and all other Impofors must be, it could ever have escap'd their Observation. And if it had at Ferusalem, there were other Occasions enough given for a fuller Discovery afterwards. For the Holy Apostles after our Saviour's Death, did not confine themselves to Jerusatem, and the Land of Judaa only, but dispers'd themselves throughout the whole Earth, and at Rome, at Athens, and in many other celebrated Cities appear'd openly, teaching the Religion which they had received, and forming Churches of those whom they had converted thereto, and thereby exposing their Lives and Actions publickly to the View of the whole World, made all Mankind in a manner witness of what they did. And Christia. vity was not fuch an acceptable thing to the World, as to move the Men of it to be so candid and goodnatur'd to the first Authors of it, as to conceal their Faults, and hide their Wickednesses, had there been any fuch in them. No, it was that which was against the Lusts and Pleasures, and the other evil Courses of this World, more than any other Religion which was ever taught therein; and this put the World as much against it, and all that adher'd thereto; and therefore we find them to be a Party of Men not only every where spoken against, but also every where hated, opposed, and persecuted to the utmost. And when so general an Odium was risen against them, and both Jews and Gentiles conspir'd together therein, to be fure there were not wanting abundance that made it their Business to pry into their Actions, and examine their Practices with all that Spight, Unfairness, and ill Interpretation of Things, as is usual in such Cases. And could they by all this Search, Inquiry, and strictest Observation, have found any thing to charge upon Christ or his Apostles, which might cast a Blot upon the Religion which they taught, to be fure we should have heard enough of it. For those who propagated their Odium against this holy Religion to the next succeeding Ages, to that excessive Degree, in which the Primitive Christians experienc'd it in those terrible Persecutions which they underwent for three hundred Years together, would certainly have propagated therewith all the Accusations they were able, against those who were the first Founders and Teachers of it. And to be fure, when (*) Celsus, Porphyry, and Julian.

^{*} Acts 2. v. 9, 10, 11.

St.

^(*) The main Things which celsus and Julian objected in their Books against the Christian Religion, are preserved in the Answers which Origen wrote to the former, and St. Cyril of Alexandria to the latter; but the Books themselves are perish'd, as are also those of Porphyry written by him in fisteen Tomes on the same Argument; for they being full of virulent Blasphemies, Theodosius the Emperor, by a Law, caused them every where to be burnt and destroy'd; but a great many Remains and Fragments of them are still preserv'd in the Works of Eusebius, and something also of them in

Julian, and other bitter Opposers of Christianity, as well Jews as Heathers, took Pen in hand to write against it, we should have been told enough of it. But nothing of this appearing in any of their Writings, or any of the least Memorial of it being to be found in any Record whatsoever against them; this manifestly proves that they are, even in the Judgment of their bitterest Enemies, totally free of this Charge, and consequently, being just and righteous Persons, (and of Christ and St. James one of his Apostles, (†) Josephus, though a Jew, particularly attests, that they were so) they could never be guilty of so great a Wickedness both against God

St. Hierom. in Prafatione ad lib. 1. Comment. in Epist. ad Galatass Celsus lived in the second, Porphyry in the third, and Julian in the fourth Century after Christ.

^(†) His Words of our Saviour are, that he was a wife Man, (a Title not given in those Days but to fuch as were also good) and that he was a Worker of Miracles, and a Teacher of Truth, lib. 18. c. 4. And of James he hath these Words, These things (i. e. the Destruction of Jerusalem, and the Calamities that attended it) fell by may of just Vengeance upon the Jews for James the Juft, who was the Brother of Jefus called Christ, because the Jews had murther'd bim, being a most righteous Man. It must be acknowledg'd that this Passage is not now extant in Tostphus, but it is quoted by Eufebius in the Second Book of his Ecclesiastical History, c. 23. and also by Origen in his Second Book against Celfus, which would never have been done by them, had it not been extant in the Copies of his Works which were then in use, however it came to be omitted fince. For to have falfly alledg'd fuch a Testimony to the Enemies of Christianity, especially to one so acute and sharp as Celsus was, would have given them too great an Advantage against it. But what is still extant in Josephus, amounts to the same thing; for speaking of his being put to Death by Annas the High-Priest, Antiq. lib. 20. c. 8. he fays, that all good Men were offended at it; which sussiciently expresseth him to be a good Man also. For why else should they be so concern'd for him?

and Man, as to have impos'd a Cheat upon us in that Religion which they deliver'd unto us.

SECT. III.

III. And if they had been such wicked Persons as thus to have imposed upon us a false Religion for their own Interest, both their Wickedness and the Interest which they drove at, must necessarily have appear'd in the very Contexture of the Religion it self; and the Books of the New Testament, in which it is contain'd, would have as evidently prov'd both these against them, as the Alcoran doth against Mahomet, every Chapter of which yieldeth us manifest Proofs both of the wicked Assections of the Man, and the Self-ends which he drove at for the gratifying of them.

For, first, when a Man proposeth an End of Self-Interest, and invents a new Religion, and writes a new Law on purpose for the obtaining of it. it's impossible but that this end must appear in the Means, and the Imposture, which was invented of purpose to promote it, must discover what it is. For in this Case the new Roligion and the new Law must be calculated for this End, and be all form'd and contriv'd in order thereto, otherwise it can have no Efficiency for the obtaining of it, nor at all answer the purpose of the Inventor for the compassing of what he propos'd; and if it be thus calculated, order'd and contriv'd for such an End. that End cannot but be feen and discover'd in those For the End and Means prove each other: that is, as the Nature of the End propos'd shows us what Means must be maid use for the obtaining of it; so doth the Nature of the Means which we use, discover what is the End which they drive at. And as far as the Means have a Tendency to the End.

End, so much must they have of that End in them? and it is not possible for him that useth the one, long to conceal the other. And therefore nothing is more obvious and common among us, than by the Courses which a Man takes, to discern the End which he would have. As Mahomet invented his new Religion to promote his own Ends: so the Alcoran, in which it is contain'd, sufficiently proves it, there being scarce a Leaf in that Book which doth not lay down some Particulars, which tend to the gratifying either of the Ambition or the Lust of that Monster who contriv'd it. And had the first Founder of our holy Christian Religion, or they who were the first Propagators of it, any such End therein, the Books of the New Testament, in which it is written, would have as palpably shown it. But here we challenge all the Enemies of our Faith to use their utmost Skill to make any such Discovery in them. They have already gone through the strict Scrutiny of many Ages, as well as of all manner of Adversaries, and none have ever yet been able to tax them herewith. For instead of being calculated for the Interest of this World, their whole Defign is to withdraw our Hearts from it. and fix them upon the Interest of that which is to come. And therefore the Doctrines which they inculcate, are those of Mortification, Repentance, and Self-denial, which speak not unto us of Fighting, Bloodshed, and Conquest, as the Alcoran doth, for the advancing of a Temporal Kingdom; but that renouncing all the Pomps and Vanities, and Luits of this present World, we live soberly, righteously, and godly in the Presence of him that made us; and instead of pursuing after the perishable Things of this Life, we fet our Hearts only on those Heavenly Riches, which will make us great and glorious and bleffed for ever hereafter. For as the Kingdom of Christ is not of this World, fo neither do those Books, in which are written the Laws of this Kingdom, favour any thing thereof-The Mammon of this World, and the Righteoufness which they prescribe us, are declar'd in them to be totally inconsistent. The Old Testament indeed, as being under the Dispensation of carnal Ordinances, which were the Shadows only of those Things after to come under the Gospel, treated with Men suitably thereto. And therefore we find much of this World, both by way of Promife as well as Threat, to be propos'd therein. is quite otherwise with the New: For in that Revelation, being given to the perfecting of Righteousness, all things were advanced thereby from Earth to Heaven, and from Flesh to Spirit. therefore as the whole End of it is to make Men Spiritual, so are we directed thereby to look only to spiritual and heavenly Blessings for the Reward hereof. Had our Saviour propos'd Victory, or Riches, or Carnal Pleasures to his Followers, as Mahomet did, then indeed his Law would have fufficiently savour'd of this World, to make Men suspect that he aim'd at nothing else thereby. But he was so far herefrom, that instead of this, the whole Tenour of his Doctrine runs the quite contrary way, we being told of nothing else through the whole New Testament, but of Tribulations, Afflictions, and Persecutions, which shall attend all fuch, as to this World, who faithfully set their Hearts to become his Disciples; and the Experience of all Ages fince hath fufficiently verify dthe Prediction. And indeed the very Religion which he hath taught us, is of that Holiness, that according to the Course of this wicked World it naturally rally leads us thereinto. And how then can it be faid, that any thing of worldly Interest can be contained either in this Religion, or those holy Books in which it is written?

I cannot deny, that there are some Men so crafty and cunning in pursuing their Interest, that it shall not easily be discerned in the Means, what it is which they drive at for their End. But how great a compass soever such may fetch about to the Point which they aim at, or in what bye and fecret Paths soever they make towards it; yet if the Means which they make use of, have any tendency thither, they can never be fo totally blended, but there will always appear in them enough of the End to make the Discovery to any accurate Observer; and at length when the Plot grows ripe for. Execution, and the Defigner begins to offer at the putting himself in possession of what he proposed (as all fuch Designs must at last) the whole Scene must then be laid open, and every one will be able to see thereinto. And therefore if you will have it that the Holy Apostles and Evangelists, who were the first Penners of the New Testament, were such cunning and crafty Men, as to be able thus artfully to conceal their Designs in those Books, which you suppose they wrote of purpose to promote them (which cannot reasonably be imagin'd of Men of their Education and Condition in the World, they being all, except St. Paul and St. Luke, of the meanest Occupations among the People, and totally unlearned) yet if they contriv'd those Books with any tendency towards those Designs (and it cannot be conceiv'd how otherwise they could help forward to the obtaining of them) it is impossible they could thus have pass'd thorough so many Ages, and all the strict Examinations of Heathens, Tems,

Jews, Atheifts, and all other Adversaries, who have fo strenuously endeavour'd to overthrow their Authority, and no Discovery be made hereof. For supposing at first, under the Mask of renouncing the World, they might a while conceal their Designs for the Interest of it (which is the utmost you can say in this Case) yet this could not last long: For if this were all they design'd by teaching that holy Religion, and writing those Books in which it is contain'd, fome time or other they must have put those Designs in Execution, otherwife they would have been in vain laid; fometime or other they must have endeavour'd by them to obtain what they aim'd at, otherwise the whole Projection of them would have been to no purpose; and if they ever did so (as to be fure they would. had this been their End) then, as it happens in all other Stratagems of the like nature, with how much Artifice soever they might conceal what they intended in the Contrivance, all at last must have come out in the Execution; and when they began to put themselves in possession of the End they aim'd at, or at least made any Offer towards it. the whole Cheat must then have been unmask'd. and every one would have been able to see into the depth thereof. But when did our Saviour, or any of his holy Apostles, by virtue of any of those Doctrines deliver'd down unto us in the Books of the New Testament, ever put themselves in possession of any fuch worldly Interest? Or when did they ever make the least offer in order thereto? Have any of the ancient Enemies of our Holy Religion (and it had bitter ones enough from the very beginning) ever recorded any fuch against them? Or have any other ever fince from any good Authority, or any Authority at all, ever been able to tax them here-M 2 with?

with? Or is it possible their Names could have remain'd untainted of this Charge amidst so many Adversaries, who have now for near seventeen hunred Years stood up in every Age to oppose that holy Religion which they have deliver'd unto us. had they in the least been guilty hereof? Nay, hath it been so much as ever said of them, that they practis'd as to this World, any otherwise than they taught, or ever dealt with the Interests of it in any other manner, than totally to renounce them? Or had they at all any other Portion in this Life, than that of Perfecution, Affliction, and Tribulation, as it is foretold in those Holy Books that they should? And what then can be a greater Madness, than to suppose that Men should lay such a deep Design, as that of inventing a new Religion. and undergo all that vast trouble and danger. which they did, to impose it on the World for the fake of a worldly Interest, and yet never put themfelves in Possession of that Interest, or ever make the least Offer towards it?

If you fay, That the whole End of the Religion was only to gain the Party, and that the Steps to the Interest were to be made afterwards; I still go on to ask, Who can tell us, after the Party was gain'd, of any such Steps that were ever made, or of any the least Offer tending thereto? Were not the first Christians for many Ages after the first founding of our Faith, what they ought still to be, Men that us'd this World as if they us'd it not, who liv'd in it without being of it, and did truly what they vow'd in their Baptism, renounce all the Pomps and Vanities, and Lusts thereof, faithfully to observe that Holy Law which they had receiv'd? And in this they persever'd so stedsally, that even their very Enemies admir'd the Righteousness of their their Lives, and * bore witness thereto, and the cruelest Persecutors could never beat them therefrom, but they still went on in the Observance of their Holy Religion without having any other Design therein, than to practise that Righteousness which it taught, and for three hundred Years together stood firm thereto against all those terrible Storms of Persecution which were raised against them, till at length by the Holiness of their Lives. and the Constancy of their Sufferings, they made a Conquest over their very Persecutors, and brought over the World unto them. And are not our Principles still the same, and also, (thanks be to God, notwithstanding the Corruptions of the present Age) the Practice of many thousands still among us, who I doubt not will be as ready to undergo the same Sufferings those Primitive Christians did, whenever God shall try them for that holy Religion which they profess, as they now are to observe the Righteousness thereof. But supposing this had been all otherwise, and the Mammon of this World. and not the Righteousness of God, were really the End for which our Religion was design'd; yet to renounce the World to gain a Party, and after-wards make use of this Party to gain the World,

M 3

Plinii Epist. lib. 10. Ep. 97. Hanc suisse summam vel culpe sux vel erroris, quod essent sulti stato die ante lucem convenive, Carmenque Christo quasi Deo dicere secum innicem, seque sacramento non in scelw aliquod obstringere, sed ne furta, ne latrocinia, ne adulteria committerent, ne sidem fallerent, ne depositum appellati abnegarent. In like manner they were also vindicated by Serenius Granianus, Proconsul of Asia, in his Epistle to the Emperor Adrian. Euseb. Hist. Ecclesast. lib. 4. c. 8, & 9. By Antoninus Pius in his Epistle to the Commons of Asia. Justin Martyr, Apol. 2. and even by the Heathen Oracles themselves. Euseb. in vita Constantini, lib. 2. c. 50, & 51.

is a Project so unfeasible, that the former part of it must necessarily have overthrown the latter, whenever it had been attempted. For when Men had been drawn over to a Party under the specious Pretence of renouncing the World, and been instructed and firmly fix'd in this Principle, to make those very same Men afterwards to serve their turn for the gaining of a worldly Interest, would be to make their Doctrine and their Practice fo monstrously to interfere, as must necessarily have broken all into pieces, and destroy'd the whole Design. Certainly, had they any fuch Design, they would never have thus possess'd their Disciples with such Principles against it by the Religion which they taught them; and in that they did fo, I think nothing can be a more evident Demonstration, that they could never intend any fuch End thereby. Mahomet knew well enough, this was not a way to carry what he defign'd, and therefore openly own'd in his Religion, what he aim'd at thereby, and made his Law to fpeak for that Empire and Luft, which he defir'd to enjoy; and so when he had made his Religion to obtain, he gain'd by virtue thereof the whole which he projected by it, and became possess'd of the Empire of all Arabia for the gratifying of his Ambition, and as many Women as he pleas'd for the fatisfying of his Luft, which were the two Ends which he drove at in the whole Imposture. And had Jesus Christ and his Apostles had any fuch Design in the Religion which they taught, they must in the same manner have made their Religion speak for it, or else it could never have ferved their purpose for the obtaining of it. And if their Religion had ever offer'd any such thing, it must necessarily have appear'd in the Books in which it is written. And

And adly, If they had been fo wicked, as thus to impose upon the World a false Religion for the promoting of their own Interest, as that Interest must have appear'd in the Contexture of the Religion it felf, and in those Books in which it was written. so also must their Wickedness. For Words and Writings being the outward Expressions of our inward Conceptions, there is that Connection between them, that although the former may often disguise the latter, they can never so totally conconceal them, but every accurate Observer may still be able through the one to penetrate into the other, and by what a Man utters, whether in Speech or Writing, see what he is at the bottom, do what he can to prevent it. There are indeed some that act the Hypocrite so cunningly, as to dissemble the greatest Wickedness under Words, Writings, and Actions too, that speak the quite contrary. But this always is fuch a Force upon their Inclinations, and so violent a Bar upon their inward Passions and Desires, that nature will frequently break through in spight of all Art, and even speak out the Truth amidst the highest Pretences to the contrary. And there is no Hypocrite, how cunningly foever he may act his Part, but must this way very often betray himself. For Wickedness being always uppermost in such a Man's Thoughts, and ever pressing forward to break forth into Expression, it will frequently have its Vent in what that Man speaks, and in what he writes, do what he can to the contrary; the Care, Caution, and Cunning of no Man in this Case being sufficient totally to prevent it. Furthermore, there is no Man thus wicked, that can have that Knowledge of Righteousness, as thoroughly to act it under the Mask, with that exactness as he who M 4

is

is truly Righteous, lives and speaks it in reality. His want of Experience in the Practice, must in this Case lead him into a great many Mistakes and Blunders in the Imitation. And this is a thing which generally happens to all that act a Part, but never more than in matters of Religion, in which are many Particulars so peculiar to the Righteous, as none are able to reach them, but those only who are really such. And supposing there were any that could, yet there will ever be that difference between what is natural, and what is artificial; and between that which is true, real, and sincere, and that which is false, counterfeit, and hypocritical, that nothing is more easie than for any one that will attend it, to discern the one from the other. And therefore were Jesus Christ and his Apostles such Persons as this Charge of Imposture must suppose them to be, it's impossible but that the Doctrines which they taught, and the Books which they wrote, must make the Discovery, and the New Testament would, as a standing Record against them in this Case, afford a multitude of Instances to convict them hereof. That the Alcoran doth fo as to Mahamet, nothing is more evident; a Strain of Rapine, Bloodshed and Lust running through the whole Book, which plainly proves the Author of it to be altogether such a Man as the Charge of Imposture must necessarily suppose him to And were the first Founder of our Holy Religion, or the Writers of those Books in which its Doctrines are contained, such Men as he, both their Doctrines and their Books would as evidently prove it against them. But here I must again challenge you, and all other the Adversaries of our Holy Religion, to shew us any one Particular in it, that can give the least Foundation to such a Charge, any any one Word in all the Books of the New Testament, that can afford the least Umbrage or Pretence thereto. Let what is written in them be try'd by that which is the Touchstone of all Religions, I mean that Religion of Nature and Reason, which God hath written in the Hearts of every one of us from the first Creation; and if it varies from it in any one Particular, if it prescribes any one thing which may in the minutest Circumstance thereof be contrary to its Righteousness; I will then acknowledge this to be an Argument against us, strong enough to overthrow the whole Cause. and make all Things else that can be said for it, totally ineffectual for its Support. But it is so far from having any such Flaw therein, that it is the perfectest Law of Righteousness which was ever yet given unto Mankind, and both in commanding of Good, as well as forbidding of Evil, vastly exceeds all others that went before it, and prescribes much more to our Practice in both, than the wisest and highest Moralist was ever able without it to reach in Speculation. For,

Ist, As to the forbidding of Evil, it is so far from indulging, or in the least allowing us in any Practice that suvours hereof, that it is the only Law which is so perfectly broad in the Prohibition, as adequately to reach whatsoever may be Evil in the Practice; and without any Exception, Omission, or Defect, absolutely, fully, and thoroughly forbids unto us, whatsoever may have but the least Taint of Corruption therein; and therefore it not only restrains all the Overt-acts of Iniquity, but also every Imagination of the Heart within, which in the least tends thereto; and in its Precepts prohibits us not only the doing or speaking of Evil, but also the harbouring or receiving into our Minds the least Thought or Defire thereafter; whereby it so effectually provides against all manner of Iniquity, that it plucks it up out of every one of us by the very Roots, and so makes the Man pure and clean, and holy altogether, without allowing the least savour of Evil to be remaining in him: And every one of us would be thoroughly such, could we be but as perfect in our Obedience to this Law, as it is perfectly given unto us. And,

2dly, As to the commanding of Good, its Prescriptions are, That we employ our Time, our Powers, and all other Talents intrusted with us, to the best we are able, both to give Glory unto God, and also to show Charity unto Men; and this last not only to our Friends, Relations, and Benefactors, but in general to all Mankind, even to our Enemies, and those who despightfully use us and perfecute us; and hereby it advanceth us to that height of Perfection in all Holiness and Goodness, as to render us like the Angels of Light in our Service unto God, and like God himself in our Charity For it directs us in the fame manner as to Man. the Angels to worship and serve our God to the utmost Ability of our Nature; and in the same manner as God, to make our Goodness to Men extend unto all, without Exception or Reserve, as far as they are capable of receiving it from us.

And can any Man think it possible that a Religion which so thoroughly and fully forbids all Evil, and in so high and perfect a manner prescribes us all Good, could ever be the product of a wicked Mind? The Fruit is too good to proceed from so corrupt a Root, and the Effect vastly above the Efficiency of such a Cause ever to produce it. For can it possibly be imagin'd, that a wicked Man could either have inclination to do so much for the promoting of that Righteousness which all his Passions and Defires fo violently run counter unto? Or if he would, that fuch a one could ever be so well acquainted with all the ways thereof, as so exactly to prescribe them? If it be fo difficult for such a one to conceal his Inclinations in his Expressions; if it be so hard for him, when he vents himself into Words or Writings, not to let loose something in them of what he really is (as I have already shown) how can any Copy be drawn from such a Mind, but what must in some Feature or other resemble the Original; or any thing at all proceed from thence, but what must carry with it some savour of the Iniquity thereof? Set but such a one to write a Letter. and he will scarce be able to do it without putting fo much of his Passions and his Temper into it, as that we may read from thence what he is, as every Man's Experience may tell him, that corresponds with such; and how much more then may we be assur'd will he lay himself open, when he hath the large Scope of a Book to express himself in, and especially when that Book is of such a nature, as gives him the fullest Occasion, and the most inviting Opportunity so to do? And what Book can be more such, than that which is to propose a new Law to Mankind? in the writing of fuch a Book, if ever, certainly the wicked Man will show himself, and in the same manner as Mahomet did, conform his Laws to his own Inclinations. and prescribe such Rules of living to others, as may best justify him in those which he himself follows. And although he should not intend any such thing, though he should not design so to do (and it is hard to imagine of fuch a Man, that he should not,) yet at least the prevailing Bent of his Passions, and the Corruption of his Judgment, which always follows

Οź

lows therefrom, must necessarily lead him thereinto: it being, morally speaking, altogether imposfible, but that the wicked Man must appear in what the wicked Man doth; and the Deeds, Words, and Writings which proceed from such a one, must in some measure savour of what he is. And therefore if there be nothing in the Law of our Holy Religion (as I hope I have fully shown that there is not) which can make the least Discovery of any fuch thing, nothing that can afford the least Pretence for such a Charge against it, where so large a Scope is given for it; this sufficiently proves, that neither the first Founder of the Chrifian Religion, nor those who first wrote it in the Books of the New Testament, in which we now have it, could possibly be wicked Men, and confequently not fuch Impostors as you would have them to be.

But here I know it will be objected, That there is no necessity that all Impostors should be as wicked as Mahomet; and therefore tho' Jesus Christ and his Apostles were no such wicked Persons, yet however they may be still Impostors for all that. For, first, it hath happen'd that very just and good Men have had recourse to Imposture, to bring to pass and establish their most commendable Designs; as we have an Instance in Minos King of Crete, and another in Numa King of Rome, both which, to give the greater Authority to their Laws, pretended to have had them by Divine Revelation. And, secondly, you will fay, It is possible a Man may be an Impostor by Enthusiasm, and Mistake, and falsly impose Things for Divine Revelation, not out of a wicked defign to deceive others, but that he is really deceiv'd herein himself. And if in these two Cases a Man that is not wicked may be an Impeftor ;

stor; you will urge, That though Jesus Christ and his Apostles were not wicked Men, yet this will not prove them not to have been Impostors, because it is possible, that in one of these two Cases they might have been such.

In order to the clearing of the first of these Objections, I desire you would consider these three following Particulars.

1. That in every Religion there are these two Parts to be observed, very distinct from each other.

1. The Religion it self. And, 2. The Means whereby it is promoted and propagated among Men.

2. When the Imposture is only in the former of these two; and a true Religion, or at least one that is really believ'd to be such, is promoted and propagated among Men by means of Imposture; that is, by seigning a Divine Revelation where there is none, or by counterseiting Miracles, or by any other such Means tending to deceive Men thereinto; this amounts to no higher than a pious Fraud, which out of an over-hot and inconsiderate Zeal some Men have made use of for the promoting of the best Ends. And such Men, for the Sake of such Ends, may still be denominated good and righteous in the main, how much soever they have been out in making use of such Means to promote them.

3. When the Imposture is in the End as well as in the Means; and not only the Revelation pretended, but also the Religion it self is all salle, counterfeit, and seign'd; this amounts to such an Imposture as is totally wicked, without any mixture of Good therein. In the former Case, where the Imposture is only in the Means, there is a good End delign'd, and therefore something still from whence the Person using it may be denominated Good;

but

but where the Imposture is in both, it is wickedness all over, without any thing at all in it to exempt him from being perfectly wicked that maketh use thereof.

Which Particulars being premis'd, my Answer to the Objection is as followeth.

1. I do acknowledge it to be related by * Au-thors of good Credit, That Minus King of Crete, when he first fram'd the Laws of his Country, to give them the greater Authority, us'd to retire into a Cave on Mount Diete, and from thence to bring them forth to the Cretans, as if they had been deliver'd to him by Jupiter. And that Numa. when he founded the Laws of Rome of practis'd the same Art, pretending to have received them from the Nymph Egeria, that so he might procure them to be receiv'd by the Romans with the greater Veneration. And by this Device they both obtain'd their End, in bringing very rude and barbarous People to fubmit to those good Orders and Rules which they prescrib'd for their living civilly, peaceably, and justly together. But this, although it were a Fraud in the Means, yet as far as it related only to a Political End, belongs to another matter, and doth not at all fall within that Argument of Religion which we are now treating of.

2. As to the Laws of Numa, I acknowledge that they reach not only Matters of State, but those of Religion also; and that the whole Method of the old Roman Religion was regulated and stated by them a

^{*} Plato in Minoe & in primo Dialogo de legibus. Dionyfius Halicarnasseus, lib. 1. Strabo, lib. 16. Valerius Maximus, lib. 1. c. 2. † Plutarchus in vita Numæ, & Dionysius Halicarnasseus, lib. 1.

them; but that Numa founded any new Religion is what I utterly deny. For Numa left no other Religion behind him in Rome at his Death, than that very same Heathenism which he found there at his first coming thither to be King. For the City having been then but newly founded, and the People made up of a Collection of the Refuse and Scum of divers Nations there gather'd together, they were as much out of order in Matters of Religion, as in those belonging to the Civil Government; and all that Numa did, when he came to reign over them, was to make Laws to regulate both, and therefore, as he founded several wholsome Constitutions for the orderly governing of the State, so also did he for the regular worshipping of the Gods then acknowledged among them, without making any effential Alteration in the Religion afore practis'd by them. For had he done fo, then the Religion of the Romans must have differ'd from the Religion of the other Cities of Italy, which we find it did For they communicated with each other in their Worship, as they did also with the Greeks. And in truth, the old Roman Religion was no other than the Greek Heathenism, the same which was practis'd in Greece, and in all those Countries which were planted with Colonies from thence, as almost all Italy was at that time. And therefore the Romans, as well as the rest of the Cities of Italy. look'd on Delphos as a principal Place of their Worship, with the same Veneration that the Greeks did, and had frequent Recourse thither on Religious Accounts, as the Roman Histories on many occasions acquaint us. And this Religion, Numa, while he liv'd among his Sabines, being accurately vers'd in, and also a diligent Practiser of it; on his coming to Rome, finding the Romans all out of order in that little which they had of it (for during the Reign of Romulus they minded little else but fighting, and therefore had not leifure, or perchance any great regard for this matter) he not only instructed them more fully in it, according as it was receiv'd in the Neighbouring Nations, but also fram'd several Rules and Constitutions for their more regular and orderly Practice of it, which did no more make the old Heathenism of the Romans to be a new Religion, than the Body of Canons given us by King James the First, for the more orderly regulating of our Worship and Discipline, makes our Religion a new Christianity. Only Numa, the better to make his Constitutions to obtain among those barbarous People for whom he made them. pretended to have been instructed in them by a Divine Person; and in this he practis'd a pious Fraud, but was by no means guilty of fuch an Imposture as we are now treating of. For he taught them no new Religion, but only the very same Greek Heathenism which he had receiv'd with the rest of the People of Italy from their Forefathers, and really believ'd to be that very true Religion whereby God was to be ferv'd; and therefore notwithstanding the Deceit he made use of, he might from the End which he proposed, and which he really effected thereby, to the civilizing of a very barbarous fort of People, be still reckon'd a just and good Man; and to give him his due, he really was one of the most excellent Personages of that Age in which he liv'd; and first fow'd among the Romans the Seeds of that Virtue with which they so eminently signaliz'd themselves for so many Ages after.

3. Jesus Christ and his Apostles took on them not only to be Messengers sent of God, but also to teach a new Religion to the World; and therefore if they were Impostors, they must be so in the largest Sense; both in respect of the Religion it self, as well as the Means whereby they promoted it. And in this Case there could be nothing to excuse them from being altogether as wicked as I have alledg'd. Where the Religion is true, or really believed fo to be, there is a pious Intention in the End, which may speak some Goodness in him that useth Fraud to promote it; and such a Goodness as greatly exceeds the Obliquity of the Fault which he committeth about it; and therefore, altho' he cannot on the account of the Good be excus'd from the Evil (for it is always a Scandal to Religion to be promoted by Falshood) yet still he must be reckon'd more commendable from the one, than faulty from the other; and in this Case there will still be room enough left from the Goodness of the End design'd, and the Piety of the Intention, to denominate the Man Good and Righteous in the main, notwithstanding the Fault committed in using such Means to bring it to effect. But where the Religion is all Forgery and Falshood, as well as the Means of promoting it, Deceit and Fraud, the Imposture then becomes to totally and perfectly wicked, without the least mixture of Good therein, as must necessarily denominate the Authors and first Propagators of it to be perfectly wicked also.

If you say, that such a perfect Imposture as this can have any good End, for the sake whereof the Authors of it may be freed from that Charge of Wickedness which I lay upon them, that good End must be either the Honour of God, or the Benefic of Men. But how can God be more dishonour'd than by a false Religion? Or how can Men be more mischiev'd than by having the Practice of it impos'd on them, whereby they must thus constantly disho-nour, and consequently offend and lose the Favour of him that made them? An Imposture in this Case hath that Aggravation from the Object it is about, as well as from the Perfection of Iniquity which is in the Act, that supposing it could be made productive of any good End, that Good would be fo vastly over-ballanc'd by the wickedness of the Means, that it would be of no weight in comparifon thereof, or at all avail to the rendering of those that shall make use of it, less wicked than I have faid. But when a Man can thus far proceed in Wickedness towards God, as to be the Author of constant Dishonour unto him in a false Worship; and towards Men, as to infnare them into all that Mischief which must be consequential hereto; it must necessarily imply such a thorough Difregard of both, as every good Intention, in respect of either, must be inconsistent with. And therefore, if it be possible that such a wicked Imposture can ever be made the Means to a good End, it is scarce to be conceiv'd how they who are so wicked, as to be the Authors of it, could ever intend any fuch Good thereby.

N

But further, if the Authors of such an Imposture as we are now treating of, can be lefs wicked than I have faid, on the account of any Good which you pretend they may defign thereby; I defire to know among what fort of Men you will place them, while you thus plead their Excuse. For they must be one of these three; that is, either Atheists, De-iffs, or Believers of an Instituted Religion.

1. If you say they are Atheists, that Word alone contains enough to prove them perfectly wicked, whatever can be faid to the contrary. It is indeed agreeable enough to the Principles of this fort of Men, that such an Imposture as we are treating of, may laudably be made use of to a good End. For they hold that all Religion is nothing else but a Device of Politicians to keep the World in awe. if the Atheist be the Deviser, what Intention of Good can the Device carry therewith? None certainly towards God, since he utterly denies his Being; nor can it in this Case have any towards Men, since by denying him for whose sake it is that we are to do good to others, he casts off therewith all the Reason and Obligation which he hath, abstractive of his own Interest, of doing any such at all. All the Good therefore that fuch a one can aim at. must totally center in himself to advance his own Enjoyments, and gratify his own Lusts in all those things which his corrupt Affections carry him after; and to enjoy these without restraint of Laws, or fear of Punishment, being that alone which is the real and true Cause that makes any Man deny that fupreme and infinitely good and just Being, whom all things else prove: whoever is an Atheist, must be perfectly wicked before he can be fuch; and what is there which can, while in that Impiety, ever give him a better Character afterwards?

may

2. If you say they are Deists, such as you profess your selves to be; your main Principle is against all Instituted Religion whatever, as if God were dishonoured, and Man injur'd by every thing of this nature practis'd among us and can you then think, that any who are thus persuaded, can without being first corrupted to a great degree of Impiety, as well as Hypocrisy, ever become themselves (so contrary to their own Sentiments) on any Pretence whatsoever, the Authors and Teachers of such as Religion among us?

3. But if you place them among those who are Believers of an Instituted Religion, they must abolish that which they believe to be true, before they can introduce that by Imposture which they know to be false. And this must be the Case of Jesus Christ and his Apostles, if they were fuch Impostors as you hold them to be. For they were educated and brought up in the Jewish Religion, which they believ'd to be from God, and the whole Tenour of the Religion which they taught, supposeth it so to be; and that it was the only true way whereby God was to be worship'd by them, 'till they deliver'd their new Revelations, which totally abolish'd this Religion, and establish'd the Christian in its stead; and therefore if those Revelations were not true and real, as they pretended they were, but all forg'd and counterfeited by them, as you fay; they must abolish a Religion, which they believ'd to be true, to make way for that which they knew to be false, and thereby become wilfully and knowingly, according to their own Belief, the Authors of leading Men from faving Truths, into damning Errors, to the utter Destruction of their Souls for ever; and also of depriving God of that acceptable Worship, whereby he was truly honour'd according to his own Appointment, to introduce in its stead a false Superstition of their own devising, which must be a constant Dishonour unto him as long as practifed among us. And if Jesus Christ and his Apostles were fuch Impostors, as all this imports; and such they must be if they were Impostors at all; they must be guilty of that Impiety towards God, as well as that Injustice towards Men herein, as must necessarily suppose them the wickedest of Men before they could arrive hereto; and therefore if they were not such wicked Men. this abundantly demonstrates, they could not be fuch Impostors as you charge them to be.

As

As to the second Objection, That a Man may be an Impostor thro' Enthusiasm and Mistake, and fally impose Things for Divine Revelations, not out of a wicked Design to deceive others, but that he is herein really deceiv'd himself; and that therefore there is no necessity that all Impostors should be such wicked Persons as I have alledg'd: My Answer hereio is,

I. I do acknowledge that Enthusiasm hath carry'd Men into very strange Conceits and Extravagancies upon the Foundation of a Religion already establish'd, as we have Instances enough hereof in the Anabaptists of Germany, the Quakers here with us, the * Batenists among the Mahometans, and in some of the Recluses of the Church of Rome. But that Enthusiasm could ever go so far, as to fancy a Divine Revelation for the establishing of a new Religion, and upon such a Fancy propagate that Religion in the World, as if it came from God, is that which I cannot believe; and there is no Instance, that I know of, that can be given hereof. But,

2dly, Allowing it possible, this Objection then, as apply'd to the Case in hand, must suppose Jesus Christ, and his Apostles, to have been deceiv'd by Enthusiasm into the Religion which they taught; and that therefore, altho' they were by no means such wicked Men as a wilful Imposture must suppose them to be, yet still they might be Impostors by Mistake; and being by Enthusiasm so far deluded, as

 N_3

^{*} They were a fort of Mabometan Entbusiasts in the Enst, who follow'd the Light within them in the same manner as the Quakers with us, and therefore were call'd Batenists from the Arabick Word, Baten, intus. And on this Principle they did all the Villanies imaginable, pretending an Impulse thereto from this Light within them.

to think That to come to them from God by Divine Revelation, which had no other Birth but from their own wild Fancies, might preach it to Men as such, not out of a wicked Design to deceive, but that they were really herein deceiv'd themselves. But is it possible for any Man to conceive, that so grave, so serious, and so wisely a fram'd Religion as Christianity is, could ever be the Spawn of Embusialm? Whatsoever is the Product of that, useth ever to be like the Parent, wild and extravagant in all its Parts, often disagreeing with all manner of Reason, and often as much with it self. But Christianity is in all its Parts as rational as it is good, giving us the justest Notions of God, the best Precepts of our Duty towards him, and the exactest Rules of living honestly and righteously with each other, and hath a thorough Conformity to it felf in every particular of it; on which account it hath been approv'd and admir'd for the excellency of its Composure, and the Wisdom of its Constitutions, even by the best and wisest of those who never submitted thereto; and therefore always carries with it Marks and Evidences enough in the very Nature of it, sufficiently to prove it vastly above the Power of such a Cause ever to produce it.

3. The Founder and first Teachers of Christianity gave such Evidences for the Truth thereof, as Enthusiasm could never produce. For can Enthusiasm raise the Dead to Life again, cure all manner of Difeafes, and work such other Miracles as Christ and his Apostles did? Had they by Enthusiasm been mistaken in the Doctrines which they taught, certainly God would never have wrought fuch wonderful Works by their Hands as give Testimony thereto.

4. Several of the principal Articles of our Faith depend upon such Matters of Fact, as allow no room for Enthusiasm to take place in them; as that of the Resurrection of our Saviour from the dead, his Ascension into Heaven, and the Descent of the Holy Ghoft in the Gift of Tongues. For in such things as these, which Men see with their Eyes, and hear with their Ears, and feel with their Hands (as one of the Apostles did the very Wounds of our Saviour after his Resurrection) no Enthusiasm can ever lead Men into a Mistake. For can it possibly be said, that it was only by Enthusiasm that Five hundred Men together saw Christ after he was risen again from the dead? Or that it was by Enthusiasm that his Apostles saw him ascend up into Heaven from Mount Olivet in the presence of them all at Noon day? Or that it was only by Enthusiasm that the same Apostles on the Day of Pentecost receiv'd the Gift of Tongues by the Descent of the Holy Ghost upon them, so as to be able to converse with all the several Nations then at Jerusalem in their own Languages, without ever having learnt any thing of them? To fay that Men could any way be mistaken in fuch Things as thefe, will be to deny the Certainty of Sense, and overthrow the Foundations of all manner of Knowledge whatever. It must therefore be faid as to these Particulars, as it must also of all the Miracles of our Saviour, which give Testimony to the Doctrines which he taught, That his Apostles, who testify'd them unto the World, and upon the Credit of them built up that Religion which they deliver'd unto us, did either see them really done as they relate, or they did not fee them. If they did see them, no Enthusiasm could ever make them be mistaken therein; and if they did not, they must be altogether as bad Impostors as Maho-N₄ met met himself, in testifying them unto us; and what but as great Wickedness as his, could ever induce them so to do?

SECT. IV.

IV. The next Mark of an Imposture is, That it must unavoidably contain in it several palpable Falfities, whereby may be made appear the Falsity of all the rest. For whoever invents a Lie, can never do it so cunningly and knowingly, but still there will be some Flaw or other left in it, which will expose it to a Discovery; and no Man who frames an Invention, can ever secure it herefrom without two Qualifications, which no Man can have; and they are, 1 ft. A thorough Knowledge of all manner of Truths. And 2dly, such an exact Memory, as can bring them all present to his Mind, whenever there shall be an Occasion. to make the Lie pass without Contradiction, he must make it put on a seeming Agreement with all other Truths whatever. And how can any one do this without knowing all Truths, and having them also all ready and present in his Mind to consider them in order thereto? And fince no Man is sufficient for this, no Man is sufficient so to frame a Lie, but he will always put fomething or other into it, which will palpably prove it to be fo. For if there be but any one known Truth in the whole Scheme of Nature with which it interferes, this must make the Discovery; and there is no Man that forgeth an Imposture, but makes himself liable this way to be convicted of it. This is the Method whereby we distinguish supposititious Authors from those which are genuine, and fabulous Writers from true Historians. For there is always something in such, which disagrees from known Truths, to make the Discovery:

Discovery; some Flaw always left, in spight of the utmost Care and Foresight of the Forger, that betrays the Cheat. Thus Annius's Imposture of his Berosus, Manetho and Megasthenes became detected. and so also we know the Tuscan Antiquities of Inghiramius to be a Cheat of the like Nature. And by the same Rule is it that we receive Salust, Tacitus, and Suetonius for true Historians, and reject others as Writers of Fables, and of no Authority with us: And if we examine the Alcoran of Mahomet by the same Method, nothing can be more plainly convicted of Falsity and Imposture, than that must be by it. For altho' in that Book he allows both the Old and the New Testament to be of Divine Authority, yet in a multitude of Instances he differs from both: I mean not in Matters of Law and Religion, for here his Design is to differ; but in Matters of Fact and History, which if once true, must evermore be the fame. They have a Fetch indeed to bring him off. by faying, that the Jews and the Christians corrupted those holy Books, and therefore where he relates Things otherwise than they do, he doth there restore Truth, and not vary from it. But certainly this will not hold, where by a very gross blunder, he makes the Virgin * Mary the Mother of our ^{*} Alcoran, c. 3. where observe, that through all that chapter, in every place, where the French, and out of that the English Translation of the Alcoran, hath Joachim, in the Original Arabic it is Amran, and from thence this Chapter in the Original is call'd Surato'l Amran, i. c. the Chapter of Amran. But in both these Translations it is called the Chapter of Joachim. For Mahomet mistaking the Virgin Mary to be the same with Miriam, the Sister of Moses, makes Amran to be her Father. But Ryer, the French Translator, very imprudently taking upon him to correct the Impostor's Blunder, puts Joachim in the place our Saviour, to be the same with Miriam, the Sister of Moses. For this would be to put the Gospel so close upon the Heels of the Law, as to allow no time for the taking place of this latter, before it would have been totally abolish'd by the former. But what most discovers his Imposture, are the monstrous Mistakes which he makes in the Moral part thereof. For he allows Fornication, and justifies Adultery by his Law, and makes War, Rapine, and Slaughter to be the main part of the Religion which he taught; which being contrary to the Nature of God, from whom he fays he receiv'd it, and contrary to that Law of unalterable and eternal Truth. which he hath written in the Hearts of all of us from the beginning; the obvious Principles of every Man's Reason convict him of Falshood herein, and thereby manifestly prove all the rest to be nothing else but an abominable Impiety of his own Invention. And were the Religion of Jesus Christ, as deliver'd to us in the New Testament, an Imposture like this, it must have the same Flaws therein, that is, many Falsities in Matter of Fact, and more in Doctrine, and all his Prophecies would be without Truth in the Original, or Verification in the Event. And when you can make out any one of these Particulars against it, then we will be ready to say the same thereof that you do, That all is Cheat and Imposture, and no Credit or Faith is any longer to be given thereto.

And 1st, As to the Matters of Fact contain'd in the History of the New Testament, whoever yet conwicted any one of them of Falshood? Or whoever so much as endeavour'd it in the Age when the Books of Amran, and thereby gives us a false Version, where it is very material in order to the exposing of that Imposture, to know the true. And the English Translator follows him herein.

were first written, when the Falshood might have been best prov'd, had there been any such in them, and the doing hereof would have so much serv'd the Designs of those bitter Enemies of the Christian Cause, who from the first did the utmost they could to suppress it? When Relations of Matters of Fact pass uncontradicted and uncontroll'd in the Age in which they were transacted, and among those who thought themselves greatly concern'd to have them believ'd false, this must be taken for an undeniable Argument of their Truth. Argument the History of the New Testament hath on its side in its fullest Strength. For the Books were written and publish'd in the very Age in which the Things related in them were done, yet no one then ever contradicted or convicted of Falfhood any one Passage in them, though Christianity had from the very beginning the Professors of all other Religions in most bitter Enmity against it, who would have been most ready and glad so to do. could they have found but the least Pretence for it. And had any of those Relations been false, there were then means enough undeniably to have convided them of it. For those Things which are related of Jesus Christ and his Apostles in the History of the New Testament, are not there said to have been done in Corners, where none were present to contradict them, but upon the open Stage of the World, and many of them in the Sight of Thousands; and therefore had they not been really done, or done otherwife than related, there could not have wanted Witnesses enough to make Proof hereof. And most certainly those who so bitterly oppos'd Christianity from the first, would have found them out, and made use of their Testimonies to the utmost for the overthrowing of the Cause they so violently oppos'd;

oppos'd; and had they done fo, to be fure we should have had those Testimonies in the Mouths of all its Enemies ever fince. For they would have yielded them the strongest and the most prevailing Argument they could possibly have urg'd against it. The false Pretences of all other Impostors have been detected by those who liv'd in their Times, and the true History is given of them instead of the false ones which they gave of themfelves. And had Tefus Christ and his Apostles been like Impostors, and the Things related of them in the Books of the New Testament false and forg'd, it is not possible to conceive, especially in the Circumstances abovemention'd, how they could have escap'd the like Discovery; but certainly in this case, amidst so many Witnesses who could have prov'd the Falshood, and so many Enemies who were eager to detect it, all must have come out, and every false Narrative would have been shown to be such, and the true one given in its stead, and we should have heard enough hereof from the Adversaries of our Holy Religion through evry Age since. And that this was not done when there was fuch bitter Opposition against the Christian Religion from the first propagating of it, and it would have been so strong an Argument against it, can be assign'd to no other cause, but that the Things related were so evidently and manifestly true, as not to afford the least Pretence for the contradicting of them. But this is not all we have to fay in the case. For it hath not only happened that none of those Matters of Fact have ever been contradicted, or prov'd false by any of the first Enemies of Christianity, who were best able to have done so, had there been that Imposture in them which you alledge; but on the contrary many of them have been allow'd true, true, and attested by them. For two of the most furprizing Particulars related in the Gospels are confirm'd by the Testimony of Heathen Writers, I mean the Murther of the Innocents by Herod at Bethlehem, and the wonderful Eclipse of the Sun, which happened at the Death of our Saviour, contrary to the Nature of a Solar Eclipse, when the Moon was in the Full. () Macrobius tells us of the former, and (+) Phlegon Trallianus of the latter. And that which is the most important part of all, and bears the greatest Testimony to the Truth of the whole, was allow'd and acknowledg'd on all Hands both by Jews and Heathens even in their bitterest Opposition against the Christian Cause, I mean the Account which is given in those Sacred Books of the Miracles of our Saviour. For both of them have yielded to the Truth hereof; only the Jews say, that he wrought them by virtue of the Tetragrammaton, or the Sacred Name Jehovah, stolen by him out of the Temple (which the ridiculousness of the Fable they relate concerning it, sufficiently confutes) and the Heathens, by Magick Art. And therefore Philostratus and Hierocles finding no other way to overthrow the Authority which those Miracles gave his Religion, confronted against him the History of Apollonius Tyaneus, whom they pretended by the same Art of Magick to have done as wonderful Things, and by this means endeavour'd at least to invalidate those miraculous Works of his, which they could not deny. And, ^() Saturnal. lib. 2. c. 4. (†) Vide Chronicon Eusebii, & Origenis contra Celsum librum secundum, & Traet. ad Matthum 35.

2dly. As to the Prophecies of our Saviour, the Truth of their Event in every particular proves the Truth of him that predicted them. For did he not come from God, how could he have this wonderful Knowledge, as thus to foretel Things to come? Were he not of the Secrets of the Almighty, how could he so certainly have foreshown what in Aftertimes he would bring to pass? If it were only by guess that he did so, how possibly could all things so exactly fall out in the Event, that nothing should in the least happen otherwise than as he predicted; especially since as to most of them, it cannot be so much as faid, that there was any place for Human Sagacity, or the least probable Conjecture to help him to any Foresight therein? For how improbable was it that the Religion which he taught, should, against the bent of the whole World, have made fo great and speedy Progress therein, as he foretold that it should? or that such Instruments as he employ'd in this Work, a company of poor, ignorant, and contemptible Fisher. men, should ever have been able to have effected it, without the extraordinary Providence of God over-ruling the Hearts, as well as the Power of Men? A thing in the ordinary course of Human Affairs so unlikely to succeed, could never have been brought to pass; nor could our Saviour have any manner of ground from the nature of the thing, so much as to guess at so strange an Event. and therefore could never have to punctually foretold it; but that being fent of God to begin this Work, he foreknew all that he would do for the perfecting of it. And the same is to be said of what he further predicted of this holy Religion as to its continuance among us to the end of the World, of the calling of the Gentiles thereinto, and the rejecting jecting of the Jews; of the great Calamities which should attend that People (as accordingly they have through all Ages fince,) and particularly of that great and terrible Calamity which was to fall upon them in the Destruction of Jerusalem, and accordingly happened about Forty Years after, which he so exactly foretold, not only as to the Time, (for he faith it should be before that * Generation should pass away) but also as to all other the most considerable Circumstances of it, that nothing can be a more exact and perfect Comment on the 24th Chapter of St. Matthew, and those other Passages in the Gospels where this dismal Destruction is foretold, than that History of Josephus which gives us an account how it was brought to pass. And that part of the Prophecy which relates to the final Destruction of the Temple, foretelling, that one Stone should not be left upon another, hath been so exactly verify'd, that notwithstanding several Attempts which have been made for the re-edifying of it, it could never be effected; no, not as far as the laying of one Stone upon another in order thereto. even to this Day. And when Julian the Apostate, out of design to confront this Prophecy, and give the Lye thereto, employ'd both the Power and the Treasure of the Roman Empire for the re-building of it. Heaven it self interpos'd in an extraordinary manner, to make good what Christ had predicted to be the establish'd Purpose of the Almighty, which nothing was able to alter, and by a miraculous Fire destroy'd the Work as fast as it was built, and at length forc'd the Undertakers totally to defift therefrom. For the Truth whereof, I will not refer you to the Testimony of Socrates Scholasticus; Sozomen, Chrysostom, or any other of the Christian Writers who relate it; but to one whom you cannot suspect of serving the Interest of the Christian Cause herein, he being as much an Adversary thereto as any of you; I mean Ammianus Marcellinus. who was an Heathen Writer, and then ferv'd under Julian in his Wars in the East, at the same time when this happen'd. His Words concerning it (lib. 23. c. 1.) are as followeth. ----- Ambitiofum. quondam apud Hierosolymam Templum, quod post multa & interneciva certamina, obsidente Vespasiano posteaque Tito, agre est expugnatum, instaurare sumptibus excogitabat immodicis, negotiumque maturandum Alypio dederat Antiochensi, qui olim Britannias curaverat pro Prafectis. Cum itaque rei idem fortiter instaret Alypius, juvaretque Provincia Rector, metuendi globi flammarum prope fundamenta crebris assultibus erumpentes secere locum, exustis aliquoties operantibus, inacceffum, hocque modo elemento destinatius repellentes cessavit inceptum: i.e. "Julian having a design to "rebuild with extraordinary Expence, the Temcople of Jerusalem, formerly a very stately Struct-" ure (which, first Vespasian, and after Titus, laying Siege thereto, was, after many bloody Con-" flicts, at length with difficulty taken and de-" ftroy'd) committed the care of the Business to "Alypius the Antiochian, who formerly had been roprafect of Britany, to be with all speed expe-" dited by him. But while Alypius was diligently or pressing on the Work, and the Governor of the " Province helping him therein, dreadful Balls of " Fire breaking forth from the Foundations of the " Building, did by their frequent Eruptions make " the Place unaccessible, the Workmen being se-" veral times destroy'd by the Fire, as they went to their Labour; and by this means the Element " still persisting as of purpose to obstruct it, the "Work ceas'd". And it hath never fince been again attempted, even to this Day, nor is there now left the least remainder of its Ruins, to show fo much as the Place where this Temple once flood; or have those who travel thither, any other Mark whereby to find it out, but the Mahometan Mosque, erected on the same Plat by Omar, the second Successor of Mahomet; and which hath now continued for above a Thousand Years to pollute with the worst of Superstitions, that sacred Ground on which it was formerly built. Had our Saviour been an Impostor, and foretold all these things without any Knowledge of the Counfels of him who was to bring them to pass, something certainly must have happened in the Event of so many Particulars, as would have given the Lye to his Predictions, and you the opportunity of convicting him thereof by plain Matters of Fact falling out contrary to them. And although this could not have been done at first, but possibly such Prophecies as these might have impos'd for a while on the Credulity of many; yet we that have pass'd the time of their Completion, could never be deceiv'd thereby; but by the Event must plainly know, whether what he foretold be true or falle, and from thence have enough to make a Judgment also of the Truth of him that predicted them. And therefore had our Saviour, like Mahomet, invented his Religion to deceive the World; if he intended it should have continu'd, he must have taken the same Course that Mahomet did, and never ventur'd at any Prophecy at all, that he might not be confuted by the Event, and so lose his whole Design. If you anfwer, That our Saviour foretold future Events after the same manner as the Pharisees said he wrought his Miracles; that is, by the Prince of the Devils: You ascribe that Knowledge to the wicked One, which is above his reach to attain unto. The Oracles which he gave in the Heathen Temples, only prove him able to cheat Mankind with dubious and dark Answers, but never clearly to inform them of the future Purposes of the Almighty. And indeed, how can it be imagin'd that fuch an accurfed one. as he that is cast off at the greatest distance from God (who alone governs all the Works of his Creation, and by the Wisdom of his Providence orders every Event that attends them) should ever be fo privy to his Counfels, as to be able to foreknow any thing that he determines concerning them; unless it be where he himself is imploy'd as an Executioner of his Justice to bring it to pass? But all our Saviour's Predictions were clear and full, foretelling Things to come, in the same manner as Historians relate them when past, without Ambiguity in the Words, or Perplexity in the Matter, or the leaft room left for Evafion or Deceit in them, and were all exactly fulfill'd in their appointed time; and we have the continuance of his Golpel, the spreading of it through all the Nations of the Earth, the Rejection of the Jews, the Calamities of those People in a continu'd Exile, and the total Destruction of their Temple, standing Evidences hereof, even to this Day. And how could all this ever have happened fo exactly according to his Word, but that he was that Holy and Blessed One, who had the Counsels of the Almighty communicated unto him, and was fent by Him on purpose to declare unto us as many of them as were necessary for us to know, in order to the attaining of Everlasting Life? And, adly.

^{*} Matth. c. 24. v. 34.

tef

3dly, As to the Doctrinal Part of his Religion, what can be more worthy of God, than the Notions which he gives us of him, and the Worship which he directs us to render unto him? And what more worthy of us, and perfecting of our Nature, than that Law for the Conduct of our Lives which he hath deliver'd unto us? And what can be more Holy, Pure, and Perfect, than the Precepts thereof? Here the Sublimity and vast Extent of the Matter give Scope large enough for the wifest of Men to bewilder and lose themselves in Error and Mistake; and yet convince us but of any one such in the whole Extent of our Religion, and that alone shall be sufficient to prove the Imposture you would charge it with, and I will yield you all you would have for the sake thereof. But it is so far herefrom. that I durst make you your selves the Judges, whether it delivers any thing else unto us of the Nature and Excellencies of God, but what the Reason of every Man (altho' barely that alone, thro' that Cloud of Ignorance and Error which the Fall hath over-spread us with, could never clearly make the Discovery) must now, when thus discover'd, ever instify and admire: Whether it prescribes us any one particular relating to his Worship, but what is most agreeable to those his Excellencies: And whether the Precepts and Laws therein laid down unto us for the governing of our Lives and Conversations, be any other than what do all correfoond so exactly with every thing which the rational Dictates of our Nature direct us to, that they take them all in without Omission or Defect, and improve them to the utmost without Error or Mistake in the least Circumstance that belongs unto them? If you say, that all this might be attain'd to by Human Wisdom and Study; I answer, suppo-0 1 fing fing it could, yet looking on our Saviour barely as a Man, and his Holy Apostles without any other Assistance than that of their own natural Endowments, how possibly could they reach so high? To do this requires that vast compass of Knowledge in all the things of Nature, Law, and Morality, as it is not possible to conceive Men of their Education and low Employments in the World, could ever have arriv'd unto. If you examine what other Men have done by Human Wisdom and Study only, you will find those of the most elevated Genius and sublimest Understanding could never with their utmost Industry and Search attain unto what you suppose herein, or that the highest Knowledge of Men could ever reach that Perfection in any of the Particulars above-mention'd, in which the Gospel of Jesus Christ delivers them unto us. For what Blunders and Absurdities do the wisest of the Philosophers lay down concerning the Deity? What Errors and Follies have they taught and practis'd concerning his Worship? And what Mistakes have those who exalted Morality to the highest pitch among Men, made therein? Plato in his Common-Wealth allow'd the common use of Women. Aristotle asserts it to be natural and just for the Greeks to make War upon the Barbarians, for no other Reason but that they are so; and both He and Tully place Revenge among their Virtues. And whoever had vaster Capacities for Human Knowledge, or ever went higher by the Abilities of Natural Reason and Understanding only in the Search thereof, than those Men? Yet still being no more than Men, they could not avoid putting fomething of the Infirmities of Man even into that wherein they made appear their highest Perfections; Error, Mistake, and Ignorance being so natural unto all of us, that neither neither the greatest, the wisest, nor the best among us can be totally free therefrom. And therefore had Christ and his Apostles no other help in the Doctrines which they taught, but that which is Human, they must also in like manner have put that which is Human thereinto, and the Infirmities, Mistakes and Errors that attend Human Nature. would have appear'd in all that they deliver'd unto us. But the Doctrines which they taught, and the Books in which they deliver'd them unto us, being fo totally free from all such Errors and Mistakes, as I have already shewn that they are; this directs us to look higher than Man for the Founder of this Holy Religion, and the Original Author of those Books in which it is contain'd; and necessarily proves, that only he who is infinite in Knowledge, and infinite in all other Perfections, could thus give us a Law so exactly like himself, throughly perfect in the whole, and infallibly true in every particular thereof.

SECT. V.

V. Another Mark of Imposture is, that whereever it is first propagated, it must be done by Crast and Fraud; and this is natural to all manner of Cheats. For the End of such being to deceive, Crast and Fraud are the Means whereby it is to be essected. In this Case a Lie must be made to go for a Truth, and an Appearance for a Reality; and to compass this, a great deal of Art must be made use of, both to dress up the Cheat, that it may appear to be what it pretends, and also to cast such a Mist before the Eyes of Men, that they may not see it to be otherwise, and that especially where the Cheat is an Imposture in Religion. For whoever comes with a new Religion to be proposed to the World, must find all Men so far prejudic'd and prepossess'd against it, as they are affected to the old one they have before profess'd; and therefore when Men are educated, or any otherwise fix'd and settled in a Religion (and all Mankind are in some or other) they are not apt easily to forego it, but it must be something more than ordinary that must bring them over to another contrary thereto. When the new Religion really comes from God (as the Jewish Religion first, and after the Christian did) it brings its Credentials with it, the Power of Miracles to make way for its Reception. For when Men find the Omnipotency of God working with it, they have from thence sufficient Evidence given them from whom it comes, and there is need of no other Means to induce them to believe, but that the Religion which God doth in fuch a manner own and attest, must be from him. But where there is no fuch Power accompanying the new Religion to gain Credit thereto, the defect hereof must be made up by somewhat else, to draw over the People to its Belief; and this is that which must put all Impostors upon Craft and Fraud in order to the compassing of their Ends. But that Jesus Christ and his Apofles made use of no such Crast or Fraud to induce Men into the Belief of that Holy Religion which they taught, and consequently could be no such Impoftors, will be best made appear by going over all those ways of Craft and Fraud which Mahomet ferv'd himself of: and by showing you that none of them can possibly be said to have been practis'd by any of them. For Mahomet being one of the craftiest Cheats that ever set up to impose a false Religion on Mankind, and the only Person that ever carry'd on his wicked Design with Success, you may be fure he left no Art or Device unpractis'd, which

which could possibly be made use of with any Advantage for the compassing of it. And therefore by proving unto you that none of those Methods of Craft and Fraud, which were made use of for the first propagating of Mahometism, were ever practis'd in the first preaching of Christianity; I shall fufficiently prove that no Craft or Fraud at all, which is any way practicable on fach Occasions, can ever be charg'd thereupon. For,

I. Mahomet made use of all manner of Infinuation both with Rich and Poor, for the gaining of their Affection, thereby to gain them to his Imposture also. But our Saviour Christ and his Apostles did quite the contrary, freely convincing all Men of their Sins, without having regard to any thing else but the faithful Discharge of the Mission on which they were fent; which instead of reconciling Men to their Persons, provok'd the World against them, and they sufficiently experienc'd it from the ill Usage which they found therein.

2. Mahomet, the easier to draw over the Arabians to his Party, indulg'd them by his Law in all those Passions and corrupt Affections which he found them strongly addicted to, especially those of Lust and War, which those Barbarians, above all the Nations of the Earth, were by their natural Inclinations most violently carry'd after; and therefore he allows them a Plurality of Wives, and a free use of their Female Slaves for the satisfying of their Lust, and makes it a main part of his Religion for them to fight against, plunder, and destroy all that would not be of it. But Jesus Christ and his Apostles allow'd no such Practices, but strictly prohibited all manner of Sin, how much soever in Reputation among Men, even to the forbidding of many Things till then allow'd and held lawful O 4.

among

among those who were call'd God's own People; and therefore instead of seeking the Favour of Men, by indulging them in their Lusts and sinful Practices, they laid a much stricter restraint upon them than was even done before.

3dly, Mahomet to please his Arabians, retain'd in the Religion which he taught them, most of those Rites and Ceremonies which they had been accustom'd to under that which he abolish'd, and also the Temple of Mecca, in which they were chiefly perform'd. But Jesus Christ, without having any regard to the pleasing of Men, abolish'd both the Temple and the Law, which the Jews were so bigotted unto, and also the total worshipping of God by Sacrifices, without being at all influenc'd to the contrary, by that extravagant Fondness which he knew the whole World had then for them.

4thly, Mahomet, when he found any of his new Laws not so well to serve his turn, crastily shifted the Scene, and brought them about to his Purpose by fuch Alterations as would best fuit therewith; and therefore when his making his Kebla towards Ferusalem did not so well please his Country-men, he turn'd it about again towards Mecca, and order'd all his Pilgrimages thither, as in the time of their Idolatry. And the like Changes he made in many other Particulars, according as he found his Interest requir'd. And this is that which every Impostor must do. For Interest being the End which all fuch aim at, it is impossible that they can so well lay their Designs in order to it, but that emerging Changes in the one, will frequently require Changes in the other also. But Jesus Christ never made the least alteration in any of the Doctrines or Precepts which he deliver'd, but what he first taught, both he and his Disciples immutably persisted in, with, without at all regarding how violently all the Interests of the World ran counter to them herein. And what can be a more certain Evidence that none such was the bottom which they were built upon?

5thly, Mahomet, under pain of Death, forbad all manner of Disputes about his Religion, and nothing could be a wifer Course to prevent its Follies and Absurdities from being detected and expos'd. For they being such as could never stand the trial of a rational Examination, they must all have soon been exploded, had every Man been allow'd the free use of his Reason to enquire into them. But Christ and his Apostles direct the quite contrary Course. For our Saviour bids the Jews search the Scriptures for the trial of those Truths which he taught them, (John 5. v. 39.) And the Noble Berwans are commended, that they did so, before they would receive those Doctrines of the Christian Religion which were preach'd unto them, Acts 17. v. 11. And St. Paul gives us this general Rule, first to prove or try all Things, and then to hold fast that only which we find to be good, I Thef. 5. v. 21. It is only Error and Falshood that desires to shelter it felf in the dark, and dares not expose it self to an open View and Trial. But Truth being always certain of its own Stability, makes use of no Art to support it felf, but dares venture it felf abroad on its own Foundation only, and boldly offers it felf to every Man's Search; and the more it is sifted and examined into, the more bright and refulgent will it always appear. And fince Christianity from the first ever took this Course (as it still dothwhereever purely profess'd) and initead of prohibiting Disputes about it, invites all Men to search and examine thereinto; this fufficiently argues, how certain certain the first Teachers of it were of its Truth, and that no Cheat or Imposture could ever be intended thereby.

6thly, Mahomet made choice of a People first to propagate his Imposture among, who were of all Men most fitted to receive it; and that on two Accounts: 1. Because of the Indifferency which they were grown to as to any Religion at all: And, 2. Because of the great Ignorance they were in of all manner of Learning at that time, when he first vented his Forgeries among them, there being then but only one Man among all the Inhabitants of Mecca that could either write or read. For who are more fit to be impos'd on than the Ignorant? And who can be more easy to receive a New Religion, than those who are not preposses'd with any other to prejudice them against it? The Papists, who, next Mahomet, have the greatest claim to Imposture, as to those Errors which they teach, very well understand how such a Cause is to be serv'd by both those Particulars; and therefore make it their Business as much as they can, to keep their own People in Ignorance, and pervert all those they call Hereticks, to Atheism and Infidelity, that fo having no Religion at all, they may be the better prepar'd again to receive theirs. And that there are so many Atheists now among us, it is too well known, how much it is owing to their Hellish Artifice against us. But all was quite contrary as to those whom Christ and his Apostles first preach'd our Holy Religion unto. Our Saviour did not chufe such ignorant Times to come among us in, or a People so indifferent in Religion, first to manifest himself unto. For the Jews were so far from being weary of that Religion which they had fo long profess'd, when he first appear'd in his Mission among

among them, that they were then grown into the contrary Extreme; a very extravagant Bigottry and Superstition concerning it; so that nothing was more difficult, than to withdraw them from it; nor could any thing be more offensive to them, than an Offer tending thereto; and so it continues with them, even to this Day. And the Case was not much otherwise as to all the rest of Mankind; the Gentiles being then grown almost as tenacious of their Idolatry, as the Jews of their Law; and Learning was in that Age among both at the highest pitch that ever it was in the World; and confequently, Men were never less dispos'd than at that time, to receive a new Religion, or ever better able to defend their Old. And therefore had Christianity been an Imposture, it could never have escap'd, in such an Age as that, a full Detection, or ever have been able to have born up against it; fuch inquisitive Heads, and piercing Wits, as were then in the World, would have fifted it to the bottom, div'd into its deepest Secrets, and unravell'd and laid open the whole Plot, and the prejudic'd World would immediately have crush'd it to pieces thereupon, fo that it should never more have appear'd among Mankind. But the Truth of our Holy Religion was fuch, that it boldly offer'd it felf to this Tryal; and it feems to have chosen fuch an Age as this, first to come into the World. on purpose to undergo it, that so it might be the better justified thereby. And justify'd by it, it was; for although it were oppos'd by the utmost Violence of the prejudic'd World, they could get no ground of it; though it were throughly examin'd, and diligently search'd into by the acutest and subtilest Wits of those Ages in which it first appear'd, they could never discover any Fraud, or make make out the least Flaw therein; but, in spite of both, it triumph'd, by its own naked Truth only, over all manner of Opposition, and by God's Mercy continues still so to do, even to this Day. That a Cheat and a Fraud in a Thing of this nature should be imposed on Men totally ignorant and illiterate, or that such as they, when void of all manner of Religion, (as the Men of Mecca for the most part were when Mahomet began his Imposture among them) should be easy to embrace a new one, is no hard matter to conceive; but that an Impofure should be receiv'd, and obtain such Prevalency over Men in so learned and discerning an Age, as that wherein Christianity first appear'd in the World, or that that they who were then so zealously addicted to the Religion they had been educated in, whether Jews or Gentiles, should ever have been induc'd to forsake it for a new one, founded only on a Cheat and Fraud, is what, morally speaking, we may very well reckon impossible.

7thly, Mahomet offer'd at no Prophecies, that he might not run the hazard of being confuted by the Event. But Jesus Christ deliver'd many clear and plain Prophecies, several of which respected that very Age in which he liv'd, and were all in their proper time as plainly verify'd by the Completion of them.

8thly, Mahomet offer'd at no Miracles in publick, although continually call'd upon and provok'd to it by his Opposers. For not being able to work any true ones, he would not hazard himself to a Discovery by those which were counterfeit. And therefore all those Things which he would have go for Miracles; that is, his Converse with the Angel Gabriel, his Journey to Heaven, and the Armies of Angels that help'd him in his Battles, are only related by

by him as Things acted behind the Curtain, of which there was no other Witness but himself alone, and confequently there could be no Witness on the other side ever to contradict them. Tefus Christ and his Apostles having the real Power of working Miracles, did them openly in the fight of Thousands, where all manner of Opportunity was given to every Spectator to examine into them. and try whether they were true or no; and therefore had there been any Cheat or Fraud in them, it is not possible to conceive how they should have escap'd a Discovery. And yet no such Discovery could ever be made; which was fo convincing an Argument of their Truth and Reality, that even the bitterest Enemies of our Holy Religion from the first yielded in this particular, and both fews and Heathens allow'd all those miraculous Works which are related of our Saviour and his Apostles in the Books of the New Testament, to have been really and truly wrought by them, as hath been afore observ'd. And indeed the Evidence was too manifest to be deny'd, since those very Blind that receiv'd their Sight, those Dumb that were enabled to Speak, those Deaf that were restor'd to their Hearing, those Lame that were made to Walk, and those Dead that were rais'd again to Life, liv'd many Years after to be as standing Monuments of the Truth of those Things, which no one could contradict. And therefore the Opposers of the Gospel of Jesus Christ have all along rather chosen to invalidate the Authority of those Miracles, than deny the Truth and Reality of them.

For they allowing the Matters of Fact, object that there are other Powers lower than the Divine, that are able to bring them to pass; and therefore, although those Works were wrought,

they

they do not yet prove either the Persons or the Doctrines which they taught to come from God. and consequently can give no such Evidence, as that which we infift upon them for the Truth of that Religion which we profess; That others, by Marick Art, have done the same Things; That the Scriptures tell us so of Jannes and Jambres, and Simon Magus; and prophane Writers of Apollonius Tyaneus, Apuleius, and others; and both Moses and Tesus Christ knew this very well, and therefore forewarn'd their Disciples against it, telling them that False Prophets should arise, who should show Signs and Wonders to deceive, if possible, the very Elect; and that they should take Care not to hearken to them. And therefore, fay they, if Signs and Wonders can be wrought by False Prophets, how can they be Evidences for the true; Or how can we at all rely upon them for the verifying of any Doctrine which they deliver unto us? Or if those Miracles which were wrought by them who are fent of God, be only true Miracles, and all others falle ones, how shall we distinguish the one from the other, so as by them to discern, whether the Doctrines be of God or no?

But these Difficulties will be easily removed, and the Miracles of our Saviour and his Apostles, as they are allowed to be truly wrought by them, so also will they as truly prove the Doctrines which they taught, to come from God, if you will but consider these following Particulars.

1. Miracles are Works done which are strange and amazing to us, as being brought to pass out of the ordinary Road, and in a manner which we cannot comprehend; and these are of two Sorts:

1. Such as exceed only the Power of Man to effect them; and these we call Signs or Wonders: And,

2. Such as exceed the Power of any created Being whatsoever; and these only are properly Miracles.

2. Where-ever such Miracles are wrought, as are of this last fort, God alone must be the Author of them; and therefore, where-ever such are found, they manifestly prove the Power of God co-operating with the Persons, at whose Word they are done; and with whomsoever it doth thus co-operate, it necessarily demonstrates their Mission from him, and puts such an authentick Seal to the Truth of the Doctrines which they teach, as cannot be deny'd.

3. Where-ever a creating Power is necessary to the Effect produc'd, or the stated Laws of Nature are alter'd, there it is certain none but God himself can be the Author of the Work done. For he alone is able to create; and he having created all things according to his infinite Wisdom, and given to each their proper Essence and Operations, he allows none but himself to alter the Natures of them, or change that Course which he hath put them into.

4. But within the Laws and Powers of Nature, there are abundance of Things which exceed the Power of Man to effect, and therefore feem as Miracles to us, which may be produc'd by other created Beings, and these are evil Spirits as well as good.

5. To the producing of these Effects, evil Spirits as well as good are enabled two manner of Ways:

1. By their greater Knowledge of the Powers of Nature; And, 2. By the greater Agency which they have to apply them to Effect. For,

6. There are a Multitude of Things in Nature, that those Spirits know the Nature of, which we do not. For their Abilities of knowing are vastly above ours, as not working by the dull Tools of Earth and Clay, as we do, and their Experience exceedingly greater, as having known the Works of God from the Beginning, and by long Observation pry'd deep into the Secrets of them. If a Chymist or a Mathematician, by his Skill in the Powers of Nature, can do many Things, which, to the ignorant and unlearned, shall seem as Miracles, (as we often find) how much more can those knowing Spirits do so, whose Knowledge of the Powers of Nature is vastly more above all ours put together, than the highst and perfectes of ours is above that of the most ignorant that lives among us. But,

7. As those Spirits have a vastly greater Knowledge of the Powers of Nature than we can have, fo also have they a vastly greater Power to apply them to Effect. For they are of a much greater Agility in their Motion, of a much finer Substance to penetrate into Things, and actuate them into Operation; and also of a much stronger Agency or Power to work than we have, and which, no doubt, they are endow'd more or less with, according to the different Orders and Degrees in which God hath created them; and by both these together, that is, their greater Knowledge of Natural Causes, and their greater Power to apply them to Effect, can they do a great many Things within Nature's Limits, which exceed all the Powers of Men to effect, and feem as miraculous and wonderful unto us, whenever brought to pass.

§ 8. Good Spirits never work those Miracles, but in Subserviency to the Divine Will, as they are necessary for the effecting of those Things which God hath ordain'd by their Ministry to bring to pass. And to them those Miracles mention'd in Scripture, which exceed not the Power of fuch created Beings, may be referr'd as the immediate Authors of them; it not being likely that God would interpose his immediate Power, excepting only in such Cases, as where there was need of it. For why should the Lord himself put his Hand to that Work, which may as well be discharg'd by the Ministry of his Servants?

which

9. Evil Spirits having in a great measure the same Knowledge of Natural Causes as the Good; and the like Power to bring them to effect, can also work the like Wonders, and by God are often permitted so to do, both for the Trial of Men, and also for other good Causes which to him of his infinite Wissom seem sitting; and we have a plain Instance of the Case of St.

Instance of it in the Case of Job.

10. Evil Spirits have not only this Power of working the like Wonders, which Good Spirits do. but also another, which Good Spirits will never make use of; that is, by Juggle, Delusion, and Deceit to imitate those true and proper Miracles, none but God himself can really effect. And thus, by the Delusion of the Devil, was a Cheat put upon Saul in the railing of Samuel to him from the Dead. For really to raise Samuel from the Dead. none but God could, and therefore that Appearance which Saul saw, was no more than a false Appearance, contrived by the Devil to put a Cheat and Delusion upon him. And of this same fork may we reckon the Miratles which Jannes and Jambres wrought in imitation of Moles. For to turn a Rod into a Serpent, and Water into Blood, or to cause Frogs to come up upon the Land, in which three Particulars they did the same thing by their Inchantments, that Moses did by the Hand of God, are Works, which if really done, require the creating ating Power to bring them to effect, which none but God hath; and therefore in this Case the Devil acted for them, not by his effecting, but only by his deluding Power. And such Miracles the Scripture calls recare 420 Just nut inspection of Zamva; i.e. * Lying or false Miracles, which are not really wrought, but only made so to appear by the juggle and debusion of Satan.

- vhereby he imitates the true and real Miracles of God, which he cannot work, are only in transient. Effects, like those of Juglers upon a Stage, never in such as are lasting and permanent. And where the Effect is totally transient, God's Works are often so far above the Devil's Imitation, that even in these there will be still a multitude of Particulars, wherein he can have no Power, as much as by Juggle or Delusion, to do any thing like unto them.
- by Magicians or False Prophets, must be referred to one of these two Heads; that is, that they are either the Devil's Works, or the Devil's Delusions: And the Scriptures, which tell us of Magicians and False Prophets working such Signs and Wonders, do in many Places refer them hereto.
- 13. Those Signs or Wonders which are really wrought by the Devil and his Evil Spirits, are to be distinguished from those which are wrought by the Power of Angels or Good Spirits, by these following Marks: 1. That Angels or Good Spirits never work those Wonders, but in Subserviency to the Will of God, for the promoting of Truth and Righteous.

ness; but the Devil and his Evil Spirits only for the promoting of Error and Wickedness. 2. Angels or Good Spirits, never co-operate in the Production of those Wonders with any Prophet or Teacher, but fuch only as, being fent of God, are good and righteous Persons; but the Devil and his Evil Spirits only with fuch as, not being fent of God, are evil like themselves. 3. Angels or Good Spirits never exert their Power to work these Wonders, but in Things serious and grave, whereby either the Good of Men, or the Honour of God is promoted; but the Devil and his Evil Spirits do it mostly in Things mischievous both to God's Honour and Man's Goods or elfe in fuch trivial and foolish matters as are beneath God or his Holy Angels to be concern'd in And by the same Marks also may we distinguish God's Miracles from the Devil's Juggles, and those wonderful Works which the Hand of the Almights really effecteth, from those false Appearances which the Devil makes in Imitation of them, to put a Cheat and a Delusion upon us. Which Particulars being premis'd, the Answer to the foregoing Oblections will be as followeth.

wonderful Works may be effected by Powers lower than the Divine, and that not only by Good Spirits, but also by Evil.

2. That therefore fuch Works alone are never fufficient Proof of a Divine Mission, unless corroborated by such concurring Circumstances as prove them not to be from Evil Spirits, but only from Good.

3. That where-ever such wonderful Works are done at the Word of a wicked Man, or to a wicked Purpose, (i. e. either to influence to a wicked Practice, or to give Credit to some salse Doctrine)

r a

or else in such mean and trivial Cases as are beneath the Majesty of God or his Ministring Spirits to be concern'd in, there we may be sure that he that doth those Works, how much soever he may pretend to a Divine Mission, is only a False Prophet; and that it is not by the Power of God or his Good Spirits, but only by the Power of the Devil and his wicked Spirits, that they are wrought; and against those Wonders is it, and the Workers of them, that Moses warneth the Jews, and Jesus Christ his Disciples.

ples, that they should be aware of them.

4. Where they who work those Wonders are holy and righteous Men. and do not teach any Doctrine contrary to the certain Dictates of Natural Religion, or the Revelations of God afore given us, and the Wonders which they work are in fuch serious and grave Matters as are not unworthy of God or his Ministring Spirits to be concern'd in, there we have no Reason to suspect Satan's Power in the effecting of them; and therefore such Works may, altho not of themselves alone; yet with these concurring Circumstances, be sufficient Proofs of the Truth of any Doctrine which they give Testimo-For although they cannot be prov'd to ny unto. be immediately from God, because producible by inferiour Beings; yet with these Circumstances accompanying them, they must at least appear to be the Works of his Ministring Spirits, who can bear Testimony to nothing but what is from God, whose Will they are in all Things subservient unto.

5. As such Works which the Devil and his evil Spirits can do, are not of self-sufficient Proof to a Divine Mission, so neither are such which he can by Juegle or Delusion imitate; because Men may be deceived by the one as well as the other; and therefore the same concurring Circumstances are necessary necessary to these also, and by the same Marks are they to be try'd, whether they be of God or no.

6. But where the Works are such as no created Being can either really produce, or by Juggle or Delusion imitate, there those Works do of themselves alone prove a Divine Mission, and give an authentick Seal of undeniable Truth to every Dostrine thus revealed unto us.

7. Although therefore it should be allow'd, that some of the Miracles which Christ and his Apostles wrought, might be producible by Powers lower than the Divine; yet fince they who did them were most holy and righteous Persons, and did not teach any Doctrine contrary either to the Dictates of Natural Religion, or the Revelations of God afore given unto Men, and the Miracles themselves were not in such mean and trivial Cases as are related of Apollonius Tyaneus, and others like him; with these Circumstances they sufficiently appear to be, if not immediately from the Hand of God, yet at least from his Ministring Spirits, and their Works; fince all done in Subserviency to the Divine Will, do as thoroughly prove a Divine Mission, where-ever they evidently appear to be theirs, as those of God himself. That Christ and his Apostles were most holv and righteous Persons, and taught no Doctrine which was in the least contrary to the Dictates of Natural Religion, hath been afore shown; and how far their Miracles were from being in mean and trivial Matters, the Works themselves make evident: And it is as certain, that no Doctrine of theirs ever contradicted in the least any Divine Revelation afore given unto Men. For Jesus Christ and his Apostles every where allow both the Law and the Prophets to be from God. Had they taught any thing which would have charg'd a Faishood on P 3 either.

either, they must then indeed have been said to contradict Divine Revelations afore given, and would thereby have fallen under that Character and Mark of False Prophets which I have above laid down; but they were so far from this, that the Law and the Prophets were the Ground-work which they founded all their Doctrines upon. For the Law contain'd in Types and Shadows, and the Prophets in their Prophecies and dark Sayings, whatever the Gospel hath in Substance and Reality since clearly deliver'd unto us; and laid down all that in the first Rudiments, which Christ and his Apostles afterwards built up into Perfection, in that Holy Religion which they have given unto us. And therefore, although the Gospel hath abolish'd the Law, it was not by contradicting or condemning it, but by perfecting and fulfilling it in that Manner as all the Prophets foreshow'd that it should.

8. But the Miracles of Jesus Christ and his Apor files, were most of them undeniably such as could not be produc'd but by the immediate Hand of God himself, as necessarily requiring the Creating Power to effect them; and also of that Permanency, as allow'd no Room for Juggle or Delusion to take Place in them. For what other Power but that of the Almighty could raise a Man, who had been four Days dead, again to Life? Or what other Hand, but that of the Creator himself, could make him fee, who had been without the natural Organs of Sight from his very Birth? Or what but the same Power which first form'd Man of the Dust of the Earth, could restore him, in so many Instances as our Saviour and his Apostles did, to Health and Perfection, when the very Parts and Vessels necessary thereto, were thoroughly perish'd; and in so miraculous a Manner, with a Word of their Mouth, bring bring back total Privations again to their former Habits? Or what Craft of Satan can reach as much as to an Imitation of fuch wonderful Works as these, which left behind them, for many Years after, Effects of lasting Permanency in the Persons cured, not only to be Monuments of the Things done, but also undeniable Evidences of the Truth and Reality of them? It would be too long to go over all the Miracles of this Nature, which Christ and his Holy Apostles did for the Confirmation of those Holy Truths which they taught. These already mention'd are sufficient to shew, that some of their Miracles at least were such as are above the Powers of all created Beings either to effect or imitate; and therefore these certainly must be allow'd to be from God alone, without Possibility of Imposture, Deceit, or Delusion in them; and in that they are so, they must necessarily prove the Mission of them, at whose Words they were done, to be from him also, and consequently become a Witness to the Truth of every Doctrine deliver'd by them, as firm, certain, and infallible as the Veracity of God himself, which can never err or deceive for ever. And so much of the fifth Mark of Imposture.

SECT. VI.

VI. No Imposture, when entrusted with many Conspirators, can be long conceal'd. For what Plot or Conspiracy have we ever known or heard of, which hath been thus manag'd, and hath not had some false Brother or other to discover it; especially if there be any great Wickedness intended by it, or any great Danger attending the Execution of it (as mostly is in such Designs.) For then if the Thing it self doth not work the Conscience into an Abhorrence, the Fear of the Consequence may at least least deter from it; and it seldom fails but one of these two, in all such Cases, drives some or other into a Discovery; and in this Age of Plots we have Instances enough hereof. And what Plot can be more wicked, than to impose a false Religion upon Mankind? And what can be more dangerous than to attempt it? What hath been already faid, sufficiently proves both thefe Particulars; and therefore, if the first planting of Christianity were such a Plot, certainly one of these two, that is, either the Wickedness, or the Danger, would have wrought some or other into a Discovery of it. For they were not a few that were admitted thereinto. They were at least (*) five hundred that were in that, which you must call the greatest Secret of it; I mean the Resurrection of our Saviour from the dead; For that is the main Article of our Holy Christian Religion; the Truth of which proves all the rest, and without which all the rest must have fallen to the Ground, and our whole Faith become (+) vain. And therefore had but any one of these five hundred, who are afferted to have been the Witnesses of it, discover'd the Thing to have been only a Conspiracy of Imposture between them, this Discovery must have laid open the whole Design, and put a total End thereto. And were not the Thing certainly true which they attested, it is scarce to be conceiv'd but that some or other of them must have done fo. Among the Twelve Apostles one was found a Traytor to his Master; and how much more then may we expect that there should have been one fuch among five hundred? And especially in a Case where all ought to have been so; that is, to discover a Plot against the Souls of all Mankind, and deliver the World from being impos'd on thereby. Among so many it scarce happens, but some or other prove false to the best Cause; and how hard is it then to conceive, that in such a Number none should be found to betray the worst? And can we call it any other than the worst, if it be such an Imposture as you would have it to be? Were Christianity really such, and this Doctrine of the Resurrection of our Saviour totally the Forgery of those who attested it, so many as five hundred could never have all kept the Secret; or if they should, out of Love to their own Invention, or any Self-ends which they might have therein, be inclin'd so to do; yet Punishment, Pain, and Torture, use to extort the most hidden Devices, and make the most obstinate Offenders, the closest Designers, and the most reserv'd Plotters of Mischief, to come to a Confession. And what Punishments, what Pains, what Tortures did those first Witnesses of this main and fundamental Article of our Faith go through for the Sake of that Testimony which they did bear thereto? And yet did any one of them ever flinch from it? Did any one of them ever retrast what he had attested concerning it? Prove but this, and then you will fay fomething to make out the Charge which you lay against it. But they were so far herefrom, that they all persisted in it to the last; and not only so, but were every one of them ready to shed their Blood for a Witness to the Truth of what they asserted, and a great many of them actually did so; and all the Terrors, Threats, and Tortures of their Persecutors were not able to deter them there-from. And what greater Evidence then can there be given to any Truth in the World, which depends upon Matter of Fact, than that which Christianity hath from the Testimony of those Men in so great a Number and such a Manner bearing Witness thereto?

^{(*) 1} Cor. 15, 6.

SECT. VII.

VII. The last Mark of an Imposture is, That it can never be establish'd without Force and Vio-For if it hath wicked Men for its Authors, Tence. worldly Interest for its End, Falsity and Error for its Doctrines, and receives its Rife from the Craft and Fraud of its first Promoters, as I have already shown, the Search of the Inquisitive will soon find it out, and Mankind will not long bear the Impoflure, unless they be over-rul'd by Violence, and have all Objections against it silenc'd with the Sword at their Throats. This was the Method which Mahomet took to establish that False Religion which he invented. For he profecuted with War all that would not submit thereto, and made it no less than Death for any to gainfay it, or so much as raife the least Dispute against any of the Doctrines And without his doing this, the Reason of all Mankind must have appear'd against it, and it could never have stood. And the Romanists have learnt from him to take the same Course, as to those Doctrines of Imposture which they have superadded to the Christian Religion. For they declare all those to be Hereticks, and prosecute them with. Sword, Fire and Faggot, that refuse to receive them; and thus, by the Power of their Dragoons and their Inquisitions, they have establish'd and still kept up those gross Errors in their Church, which neither Reason nor Religion can ever support; and the same must be done as to all other Falsities impos'd on Mankind, before they can have any firm Footing among them. For it is only Force and Violence

Violence that can cram fuch Things down Men's Throats, which their Reason and their Judgment must ever renounce. The unthinking Multitude may for a while be carry'd away by the Craft of the Impostor, and by the Arts of Hypocrify and Delusion be made easy to swallow any Forgery that shall be offer'd unto them; but when the Heat of the first Zeal is over, and the Matter comes to be examin'd into by Reason, and cooly scann'd through by the Inquisitive, Imposture cannot stand the Test, but must soon be laid open, blasted, and exploded thereupon. And therefore, unless it be accompanied with Force to suppress this Enquiry. and hath Power on its Side to compel Men to acquiesce therein, how much soever it may delude Men at first, it can never obtain any lasting Establishment among them. And this hath been the Case of all the Impostors which have ever yet appeard in the World, without this Power to back them; and how great Progress soever any of them may have made in the first Heat, they have all at length been detected, and exploded, and funk to nothing, for want of this Support on their Side to keep them up. For nothing but Truth can of it felf alone stand the Test of Ages upon its own Bottom only. Falshood and Error are too weak for such a Tryal, and therefore unless supported by some external Strength, and fenc'd thereby against all Asfaults of Opposers, they must necessarily fall to the Ground, and again come to nothing; and where Education, or the Force of long-receiv'd Custom, is not strong enough for this, (and neither can in the first propagating of an Imposture) there the Sword must come in to over-rule all, or nothing of this Nature can be establish'd among Men. But Jesus Christ and his Apostles, instead of making Use of any fuch Force to establish the Religion which they taught, had all the Force and Powers of the World in Opposition against it; and yet in Spight of the World, it at length prevail'd over the World by the Dint of its own Truth only; and after having stood the Assault of all Manner of Perfecutions, as well as other Oppositions, for three hundred Years together, carried the Victory over the fiercest of its Enemies, and made the greatest of them, even the Roman Emperors themfelves, to submit thereto; and all this while it had sharpen'd against it, not only the Sword of the Superior Powers, but also the Tongues of the Slanderers, and the Wits of all the Learned of those Times. But how much foever it was oppress'd by the first of these, blacken'd by the second, and fifted and fearch'd into by the last, it stood all these Tryals without losing any Thing thereby, but at last came out of them all, like Gold out of the Furnace, still of the same Weight, Fineness, and Purity, without receiving from that Fire which confumeth all things else, the least Waste or Diminution thereof. Had it been false, and ow'd its Original only to Deceit and Imposture, it would have needed all those Means of Violence for its Establishment and Support; but since it thus stood. not only with them, but also in Spight of them; when all arm'd on the Adversaries Side for three Centuries together, in bitter Opposition against it. what greater Argument can we have for the Truth thereof? For can you think that Fallhood and Imposture could ever have held out with such steady and unshaken Constancy for so many Years, as Chriflianity thus did? Or that it is possible for any fort of Men so long to have born all this for the sake of a Lye? Falshood can have no Foundation for such a Con-

Constancy, or Impusture any Reason to engage Men thereto. The Interest of this World is ever the Bottom and Foundation of all fuch Forgeries; and therefore, as foon as Punishments and Persecutions make it to be no Man's Interest to be for them. they ever fall of themselves, for want of that Foundation on which they afore stood. But Christianity having come into the World contrary to all the Interests of it, and in its very Infancy thus stood the Shock of all the Powers thereof engag'd in Perfecution against it, as I have mention'd; and not only fo, but also prosper'd and became establish'd in the midst of the hottest Assaults thereof, this plainly shows that it had another kind of Foundation on which it was built, a Foundation of Truth and Righteousness, and not only so, but a Foundation that was laid and fix'd in fuch a Manner by the Hand of God himself, as never to be shaken. For what Truth of it self alone could ever have made its Way into the World in fuch a Manner as the Christian Religion did, or ever have gain'd, against all the Powers thereof, such a Prevalency over it, without some extraordinary Assistance, conducting and helping it therein? The strongest Truths we know are crush'd by such Means of Violence as that encounter'd with, and even first Principles themselves have been overpower'd by them. And therefore that Christianity should thus enter the World, and thus from its first Entry bear up against such long and terrible Trials of Persecution and Oppression as it met with. without the least flinching under them, must be owing to somewhat more than its own bare Truth. And what but the Hand of God himself backing and strengthening it in the Conflict, could be sufficient to give it such a Victory therein? For that a few poor Fishermen, the Disciples of a Crucified Muster, should, without Power, Learning, or Rebutation, or any other of the Interests or Favours of the World on their Side, be able to introduce a new Religion into the World directly opposite to all the Interests, Pleasures and prevaling Humours of it, as Christianity then was; and that this Religion, in Spight of all the Powers, Cunning, Malice, and learning of the World joyn'd together in most fierce Opposition, and bitter Persecution aagainst it for three hundred Years together, should not only bear up, but also at length prevail over the World, and subject the highest Powers therein to the Obedience of its Laws, is an Event fo strange and wonderful, and morally speaking, so far above the Possibility of all ordinary Means to bring it to pass, as plainly manifesteth the extraordinary Working of God himself therein. And for my Part, had the Christian Religion no other Miracle to bear Witness thereto, this alone would be a Miracle enough to me, sufficiently to convince me of the Truth thereof. At least, since it thus enter'd into the World, and thus became establish'd in it, it must be allow'd to be so far differing from an Imposture in that Method of Violence which that needs for its Establishment, as to be totally oppofite thereto, and in this Particular (as I hope I have shown of all the rest) not to have the least Mark or Character thereof.

And thus far having laid before you all the obvious Marks of Imposture, and prov'd that none of them can belong to Christianity, I hope what hath been said will sufficiently infer the Conclusion, which I have undertaken to make out unto you, that our Holy Christian Religion cannot be such an Imposture as you would have it to be, but really is that Sacred Truth of God, which you are all bound to believe.

that

It is too common with Mankind to frame their Judgments according to their Inclinations, and upon very flight Grounds hastily to run away with Ideas of Things, when they correspond with the prevailing Bent of their Affections, which, whenever put into a true Light before them, must all appear to be false and wrong taken. And this reckon to be your Case. Your Inclinations strongly leading you into Infidelity, you would fain have Christianity be an Imposture, and therefore have over-easily and hastily been induc'd on very weak Grounds to believe it so to be. And that you may be undeceiv'd in fo dangerous and destructive an Error, I have endeavour'd in the easiest and most familiar Manner I could think of, to put this Business into a true Light before you. By letting you fee what an Imposture is, in that true Picture which I have drawn of it, in the Life of him who was really and truly such an Impostor as you would have Jesus Christ to be. 2. By examining into the Marks and Properties which naturally belong to every such Imposture, and showing of each of them that they cannot belong to that Holy Religion which we profess. hope, when you have confider'd all this thoroughly, you will fee how much you have been deceiv'd in those Opinions which you have so precipitately given up your selves unto.

You cannot but be sensible how great the Stress is which we lay on this Matter, and how very ill your Case must be, if we are in the right, and you in the wrong; and therefore the Thing is of sufficient Importance to deserve your most serious Consideration, and that in such a Manner as to make you lay aside all those groundless Prejudices and wrong Byasses which may obstruct an impartial Inquiry; and if you will be pleas'd, for the sake of your own Souls, to do thus much, I am content to leave the Success of what I now offer unto you, to God's Grace, and your own Judgments.

As to the particular Reasons which you may alledge for your Disbelief of our Holy Christian Religion, whether they be Objections drawn against it. either from History, Philosophy, or the Inconsistencies which you imagine you find in the Books of Holy Writ, in which it is deliver'd down unto us, it is not my Purpose now to enter into any Disputes with you about them. That which I at present purpose, is not so much to consider those Premisses, as the Conclusion which you pretend to draw herefrom, That Christianity must therefore be an Imposture; and from the Nature of such an Imposture, and the Nature of our Holy Christian Religion laid in a true Light, and compar'd together with each other, to evidence unto you the Inconsistency of this Charge. And if what I have now faid can be of any Force to let you into a clear Sight of this Matter, it will be totally needless for me to meddle any further. For all those Objections which you pretend to have been the particular Reasons of your Infidelity, have been already abundantly answer'd and confuted by others. But the Opinion which you have conceited, that Christianity is an Imposture, having so far preposless'd your Judgment, as to influence it against all Things of this Nature that can be propos'd unto you, it will be in vain to offer any Thing farther as to those Particulars, till this Prejudice be remov'd; and were it once remov'd, what hath already been faid in Answer to them, will be abundantly sufficient to give give you full Satisfaction. Although this Method may feem illogical, thus to affault the Conclusion without medling with the Premisses from which you pretend to have deduc'd it; yet it is no other than what you your felves have necessitated me unto. by taking up the Contlusion first, and the Premisses afterward. Had you indeed first began with those Reasons which you offer for your Infidelity, and been really, by the Conviction of them led into this Conclusion, That Christianity is an Imposture, it would then have been proper and fitting that I should have begun there too, and no otherwise have endeavour'd to overthrow the Conclusion, but by first overthrowing the Premisses from whence you deduc'd it. But fince it is well known that the Conclusion hath been of greater Force with the most of you, to make you affent to the Premisses, than the Premisses to prove the Conclusion; and it is only the fond Conceit you have taken up in Compliance with ill Company, or worse Inclinations, that Chris fianity must be an Imposture, that hath made many of those Arguments seem so conclusive with you. which are brought to prove it; this makes it ne. cessary for me to begin my Endeavours for your Conviction, at that same Point where you first began your infidelity, and to attack the Conclusion in the first Place, before any Success can be expected towards the setting you right as to any Thing else. For as long as you are wilfully bent, out of a meet Fondness for Infidelity, to hold Christianity to be an Imposture, this will make every Argument seem strong to you that is brought to prove it, and every Solution insufficient which is given thereto, and render all Means for your Conviction utterly ineffectual unto you. And therefore this being in Truth the first Error which hath influenc'd your Mind

Mind to all the rest, this must be first remov'd; and if what I have said can be of any Force in order thereto, by letting you see how much you have been mistaken herein, this I hope will remove that Prejudice which hath hinder'd you from seeing the Strength of those Arguments which have been already offer'd for your Conviction, as to all other Particulars of that Insidelity which you have given up your selves unto, and make you clearly discern how much you have been mistaken in them also, and thereby become the Means of delivering your Souls from that terrible Danger which you expose them unto; the accomplishing of which is the whole End, Scope, and Design of this Discourse which I now offer unto you.

.. But here perchance it may be ask'd, and I think it reasonable to give you Satisfaction herein, Why I have set forth unto you an Imposture by so foul a Picture as that of Mahomet? And to this I have these two Answers to return. 1. Because I have none other to do it by, Mahomet being the only Impostor who could ever prevail so far as to establish his Imposture, and make it a standing Religion in the World; and had it not gone fo far, it could not have been such an Imposture as you would have Christianity to be, or at all fit to be compar'd with it in the Argument now before us. And, 2dly, How foul foever the Picture of Mahomet may be, we have no Reason, from the Nature Thing, ever to imagine that any other Impostor can have a fairer, 'till you bring us an Instance thereof. And these two I hope may be sufficient to clear me from acting any Way unfairly in this Matter, as if I had made Choice of the Life of so wicked a Perfon as Mahomet, therein to picture out an Imposture unto you, only to make it appear in the foulest Dress

A Letter to the DEISTS. 227

Dress it is capable of, the better to advantage thereby that Cause which I handle.

But to the first of these Answers, I foresee this Objection will be made: If Mahomet be the only Impostor that ever establish'd his Imposture in the World, how then hath it come to pass, that there have been so many false Religions among Mankind? To which I reply, Not by Imposture, such as Mahomet's was, and such as Christianity must be, if it be fuch an Imposture as your Charge against it suppofeth, but by Corruptions infensibly growing on from that Religion which was first true. Religion which God gave unto Man, was that natural Religion which he imprinted on his very Nature. when he first created him; and as much of that as escap'd that Ruin with which the Fall overwhelm'd him, was that whereby God was worshipped and served by him afterwards; only with this Addition, that whereas Man in his Innocency address'd himself to God immediately of himself alone, and in his own Name, he could never after his Fall from it, have any more Access unto him, but through a Mediator; God's infinite Purity and Greatness on the one Hand, and Man's infinite Guilt and Vileness on the other, after that fatal Miscarriage of our first Parents, did put them at fo vast a Distance the one from the other, that in the Nature of the Thing there could be no other Way thenceforth of maintaining any Communion between them; and therefore had not this Way been found out again to bring Man to God, he must totally have been estrang'd from him for ever after. But God of his infinite Mercy having refoly'd not thus to cast us off, he appointed us a Mediator as foon as we had fallen, and promis'd to fend him in his appointed Time to take our Nature upon Q_2 him.

228 ALetter to the DEISTS.

him, and therein pay down that Price of Redemption for us, by Virtue whereof his Mediation should always be sufficient to obtain Mercy, and Pardon, and Acceptance for us. And this is that which was meant by God's promising immediately after the Fall, that the Seed of the Woman should break the Serpent's Head; which being farther explained by After-Revelations, the whole Religion of God's People after that, was to offer up their Worship unto him through Hope in this Mediator; and all the Idolatry, Polytheism, and other false Worships, which after arose in the Heathen World, were all by such corrupt Deviations therefrom, as the Superstitions of Men, the unfaithful Way of transmitting Divine Revelations by Tradition only, and the Decay of all Divine Knowledge occasion'd thereby, in Process of Time introduc'd among them. For when Mankind began to increase after the Flood, and they were taught from Noah their Fore-father thus to worship God through hope in a Mediator, as the Knowledge of those Divine Truths which he deliver'd to them began to decay, and Superstition to increase among them, they began to determine themselves to such Mediators as their own Imaginations led them to fancy, and some chose Angels, and others Men deceased, for this Office, and in Process of Time erected Temples and Images unto them, and honour'd them with Divine Worship, in order to render them the more helpful and beneficent unto them. The Babylonians or Chaldeans, who were the first form'd State after the Flood, look'd on Angels to have been the Mediators God had appointed, through whom they were to come unto him; and for this Reason directed their Worship to the Sun, and Moon, and the rest of the Planets, which they fancy'd to be the Habitations (a) where those Angels dwelt; and also erected Images unto them, into which they reckon'd their Influence and Divine Power did descend and remain with them, when those Luminaries themselves were fet and disappear'd in their Horizon; so that their Notion was to make their Addresses through the Images to the Planets, and through the Planets to the Angels that dwelt in them, and through the Angels to God himself, whom they acknowledg'd to be the One Supreme Being, who was the Creator and Governor of all Things. And this was the first Idolatrous Religion which was establish'd in the World, and long prevail'd over a great Part of it, and is still preserv'd in the East among the Sect of the Sabians even to this Day. But the Persians not liking the Worship of the Planets by Images, would endure no other Symbol to represent those glorious Luminaries by, but Fire only, of which they reckon'd them to be constituted; and therefore wherever they prevail'd, they destroy'd all Images out of the Temples, and plac'd Fire in their stead; and from hence the Magior the Worshippers of Fire had their Original. But from their having one Symbol, they speedily came to the

⁽a) Hence Ariftotle seems to have had his Doctrine of the Intelligences moving the Spheres; and Plato that which he taught of the Stars being living Bodies. For it was the Opinion of the ancient chaldeans, as it is of the Sahii now, who are descended from them, That there was in each Star an Angel in the same Manner as our Souls are in our Bodies, and that the Stars are animated by these Angels, and hence have all their Motion, and also that Insluence which they are supposed to have over this World, and for this Reason was it that they worshipped them.

afferting but of one Deity represented by it, which they would have to be Light, and that of the Mixture of this and Darkness, all Things in this World were compounded; that Lath was the Cause or Principle of all Good, and Darkness the Cause or Principle of all Evil; and therefore under the Symbol of Fire they worshipp'd Light as their God, but detested Darkness in the same Manner as we do the Devil. And from hence Manes the Heretick had his two Principles, which he would have introduc'd into the Christian Religion. But above both these they acknowledg'd a Supreme God, in Respect of whom their God Light was but an inferiour Deity, or a God Mediator, by whom they were to have Access unto him. And this Religion obtain'd through all Persia, and other Parts on the East of it, and doth there remain even unto this Day among the Persees in India, and the Inhabitants of the Province of Kerman, on the Southern Coast of Persia. But the Practice of the Babylonians or Chaldeans in worshipping their Gods Mediators by Images, obtain'd in all the Western Parts of the World. For they holding, that they were to have Access to God through Angels as their Mediators, and to the Angels through the Planets, and to the Planets through the Images which they erected to them, did give to those Images the Names of the Planets, and under those Names paid Divine Worship unto them; which Idolatry passing from Babylon or Chaldea into Arabia, and from thence to the Egyptians and Phanicians was by them carry'd into Greece, and from thence spread it self into all Parts on this Western Side of the World, as that of the Magi did on the Eastern. For the chief Gods of the Greeks, as well as the Names by which they were called, came from the Egyptians and Phænicians, and were no more than

than the Images by which the Babylonians worshipped the Sun, Moon, and other Planets, with the Names of those Planets given unto them. Afterward indeed they added to their Number other Deities also, which were originally either some of the fix'd Stars, or else the Souls of Men departed, as of Bel or Belus among the Babylonians, Abraham and Ismael among the Arabians, Orus and Osiris among the Egyptians, Asculapius and Hercules among the Greeks, and Romulus or Quirinus among the Romans. For it early began a Custom among all the Worshippers of Images, as well Greeks as Barbarians, to Deify Men departed; reckoning those who liv'd justly and righteously, or had made themselves eminent by any great and worthy Actions in this Life, to have those Habitations allotted them in the Heavens above, where they were in a Capacity to be Mediators to God for them; and therefore they offer'd Divine Worship to them as such. this was it that gave Occasion to so many Apotheofes or Deifications among them, and so vastly encreas'd the number of their Gods in all the Idolatrous Parts of the World, and also the various Methods of Superstition, whereby they paid their Worship unto them. Yet they all still held to their Notion of One Supreme God, and reckon'd all the others to be no more than Gods Mediators under him. And this One God, whom they held to be made of none, and to be the Maker or Father of all things else that are, was among the Chaldeans of old (as still among the Sabians, who are the remainder of them) call'd Deus Deorum, and among the Arabs, Allah Taal, i. e. the High or Supreme God; and agreeable hereto, among the Greeks, was there also their marily and, an 78 Stor Te, One Supreme God, who was the Father both of Gods and Men. And thus far in Answer to your Q 4 Question.

Question, have I given you an Account how all the False Religions in the Heathen World had their Original; and herein I have been the longer, for the sake of two Resections which are obvious for you to make hereon.

1st. That the Notion of a Mediator between God and Man, was that which did run through all the Religions that ever were in the World, to the coming of Jesus Christ, and was the fundamental Principle which prevailed in every one of them, as to all the Worship which was practis'd in them; which could no otherwise become so universal among Mankind, but by a Tradition as universally dellver'd unto them. And what can better account both for this Tradition, and also the Universality of it, than what is deliver'd unto us in Scripture, of our being descended from one common Parent, who on his Fall from the Favour of God, having had this Promise of a Mediator made unto him, thro' whom we might be again reconciled unto him, transmitted it to all his Posterity.

2dly, That the Mistakes and Errors about the Worship of God, and the Service we owe unto him, which Men are apt to run into, when left to the Conduct of their own Light only, are monstrous and endless, and therefore evidently demonstrate the Necessity of Divine Revelations. For if God doth expect from us an Account of our Actions, it is necessary he should give us a Law for the Rule of them; and if the Law of our Reason alone be insufficient for this (as from the continual Errors and endless Absurdities which Mankind, when left to themselves, have ever hitherto run into, it doth evidently appear that it is:) This demonstrably proves the Necessity of another to supply its Defect, and that in our Case we must have a Revealed vealed Religion as well as a Natural, or else we can have no certain Knowledge of the Will of God, or any of those Duties of Worship and Service which we are to perform towards him. And if this proves the Necessity of such a Revealed Religion (as I think it undeniably must, to every one that believes God will account with us for what we do;) all that I have farther to offer, is, That you would thoroughly examine and confider that Holy Christian Religion which we profess, and compare it with all the other Religions that are in the World; and if it does not appear vastly above them all, the worthiest of God for him to give unto us, and the worthiest of us to observe, and that not only in Respect of the Honour given to him, but also of the Improvement and Perfection brought to our own Nature thereby, I will be content that you shall then persist to believe it an Imposture, and, as fuch, reject it for ever.

Humphrey Prideaux.

AN

ACCOUNT

OFTHE

AUTHORS

Quoted in this Book.

Arabic Authors.

Bul Faraghius, a Physician of Malatia in Lesser Armenia, of the Christian Religion, and of the Sett of the Jacobites. He is an Author of eminent Note in the East, as well among Mahometans as Christians. His History of the Dynasties is from the Creation of the World to the Year of our Lord 1284. It was publish'd at Oxford with a Latin Version fion by Dr. Pocock, A. D. 1663. He flourished about the Time where his History ends. His Name at length is Gregorius Ebn Hacim Abul Faraghi.

Abul Feda, an Author of great Repute in the East for two Books which he wrote: The first, a general Geography of the World, after the Method of Piolemy; and the other, a general History, which he calls the Epitome of the History of Nations. He was born A. D. 1273. He finish'd his Geography, A. D. 1321: Twenty Years after that he was advanc'd to the Principality of Hamah in Syria, from whence he is commonly call'd Shahab Hamah, i. e. Prince of Hamah, where after having reigned three Years, two Months, and thirteen Days, he dy'd, A. D. 1345. being feventy two Years old. He was by Nation a Turk, of the Noble Family of the Jobida, of which was Saladin the famous Sultan of Egypt. His Name at Length is Ismael Ebn Ali Al Melec al Moaiyad Amaddodin Abul Ecchelensis quotes him by the Name of Ismael Shiabin (hiah.

Abunazar, a Legendary Writer of the Mahome-tans, much quoted by Huttinger.

Agar, a Book of great Authority among the Mahometans, saith Guadagnol, (pag. 165.) wherein an Account is given of the Life and Death of Mahomet. Joannes Andreas makes great Use of it under the Name of Azaer, as doth Bellonius in the third Book of his Observations under the Name of Asaer. Guadagnol who had a Copy of the Book, calls it the Book Agar, and takes most of what he objects against the Life and Actions of Mahomet out of it.

Ahmed Ebn Edris, an Author that writes in the Defence of the Mahometan Religion against the Christians and the Jews.

Ahmed

Ahmed Ebn Tuseph, an Historian who flourish'd A. D. 1500. for then he finished his History.

Ahmed Ebn Zin Alabedin, a Nobleman of Hispahan in Persia, of this last Age, who hath wrote the sharpest and acutest Book against the Christian Religion, in Defence of the Mahometan, of any they have among them on this Argument. It was publish'd on this Occasion. Echar, the Great Mogul, Great Grandfather to Aurang Zeb, who at prefent reigneth in India, for some Reasons of State, making Show of encouraging the Christian Religion, did in the Year 1595, write to Matthias de Albuquerque, then Viceroy of the Portuguese in India, for some Priests to be sent to him to his Court at Agra. The Persons pitch'd upon for this Mission, were Jeronimo Xavier, then Reltor of the Colledge of the Jesuits at Goa, and Emanuel Pigneiro, and Benedict de Gois, two others of that Society. On their coming to Agra, they were very kindly receiv'd by the Mogul, and had a Church there built for them at his Charges, and many Privileges and Immunities granted unto them, which on the Death of Echar (which happen'd A. D. 1604.) were all confirm'd to them by his Successor Jehan Guire. At the Command of this Echar, Xaverius wrote two Books in Persian (wich is the Language of that Court;) The first, the History of Jesus Christ, collected for the most Part out of the Legends of the Church of Rome, which he intended to be instead of the Gospel among them; and the other call'd A Looking-Glass. shewing the Truth, which is a Defence of the Do-Ctrines of that Gospel against the Mahometans. What the former is, those who have the Curiosity to see what kind of Gospel the Jesuits preach in the East, may satisfy themselves, for the Book is translated into Latin by De Dieu, and was publish'd by him with the Original, A. D. 1639. This Gospel of the Jesuits was first presented to Echar by Xaverius at Agra, A. D. 1602. But the other Book was not publish'd till a Year or two after. When it first came abroad, it unluckily fell into the Hands of this learned Persian Gentleman, who immediately wrote an Answer to it, which he calls The Brusher of the Looking-Glass, wherein he makes terrible Work with the Jesuit, through the Advantages which he gave him by teaching the Idolatry and other Superstitions and Errors of the Church of Rome, for the Do-Etrines of Fesus Christ. When this Book came abroad, it so alarm'd the College de propaganda Fide at Rome, that they immediately order'd it to be answer'd. The first who was appointed for this Work was Bonaventura Malvasia, a Franciscan Fryar of Bononia, who publish'd his Dilucidatio Speculi verum monstrantis, in Answer to this Brusher, A.D. 1628. But this, I suppose, not being judg'd so sufficient by the College, they appointed Philip Guadagnol, another Franciscan Fryar, to write a second Answer thereto. And on this Occasion he compos'd his Book stil'd Apologia pro Christiana Religione, which was publish'd at Rome first in Latin, A. D. 1631, and after in Arabic, 1637. For this, I suppose, meeting with better Approbation from the College, they order'd it to be translated into that Language; and it being accordingly done by the same Author, they fent it into the East to be dispers'd among the Mahometans, for the Defence of the Jesuits Looking-Glass against this rude Brusher of it. But his Performance doth by no Means answer the Design, abundance of his Arguments being drawn from the Authorities of Popes and Councils, which will never convince an Infidel of the Truth of the Christian Re-· ligion.

ligion, how much Noise soever they may make with them among those of their own Communion.

Al Bochari, an eminent Writer of the Traditionary Doctrines of the Mahometan Religion. He is reckon'd by Johannes Andreas, c. 3. and Bellonius, lib. 3. c. 4. to be one of the Six Doctors, who, by the Appointment of one of the Califs, meeting at Damascus, first made an Authentick Collection of all those Traditions which make up their Sonnah. His Book contains the Pandects of all that relates either to their Law or their Religion, digested under their several Titles in Thirty Books, and is the ancientest and most authentick which they have of this Matter, and, next the Alcoran, of the greatest Authority among them. He was born at Bochara in Cowarasmia, A. D. 809. and dy'd A. D. 869.

Al Coran, i. e. The Book to be read, or the Legend, it is the Bible of the Mahometans. The Name is borrow'd from the Hebrew Kara or Mikra (Words of the same Root as well as Signification, with the Arabick Al Coran) by which the Jews call'd the Old Testament, or any Part of it; and so any Part of the Mahometan Bible is call'd Alcoran. The whole together they call Al Moshap, i. e. The Book, which also in Respect of the Chapters, into which it is divided, they call Al Furkan, from the Arabic Word Faraka, which from the Hebrew Pharak signifies to divide or distinguish; but others will have that Book to be so call'd in Kespect of the Matter or Doctrine therein contain'd; because, say they, it distinguisheth Good from Evil.

It hath been lately publish'd in Arabic, with a large Presace before it in Latin, by Abraham Hinckleman, at Hamburg, A. D. 1694. Had he added a Latin Version, he would have made it much more useful. For that which hath been publish'd by Bibliander for a Latin Version of the Alcoran, is only an absurd Epitome of it, compos'd by Robertus Retinensis, near 600 Years ago, whereby the Sense of the Original is so ill represented, that no one can by the one scarce any where understand what is truly meant by the other. In the Year 1647, Andrew du Ryer, who had been Agent for the French Merchants at Alexandria, publish'd a Translation of it in French, from which it had been put into English by Alexander Rosse. Hottinger and Plempius much commend this Translation, and, indeed, it must be said that it is done as well as can be expected from one who was only a Merchant.

Al Fragani, an Astronomer of Fragana in Persia, from whence his Name Al Fragani, i.e. Fraganensis, by which he is commonly called. His Name at Length is Mohammed Ebn Katir Al Fragani. He wrote a Book called, The Elements of Astronomy, which hath been several Times published in Europe, at Neurenburg, A. D. 1537, at Paris, A. D. 1546, at Frankfort, cum Notis Christmanni, A. D. 1590, in Latin; and afterwards by Golius in Arabic and Latin at Leiden, A. D. 1669, with large Notes, of great Use for the understanding of the Geography of the East. He flourished while Al Mamon was Callif, who dy'd A. D. 833.

Al Gazali, a famous Philosopher of Tusa in Persia. He wrote many Books, not only in Philosophy, but also in Defence of the Mahometan Religion against Christians, Jews, Pagans, and all others that differ therefrom, whereof one is of more especial Note, entituled, The Destruction of Philosophers, which he wrote against Al Farabius, and Avicenna, and some others of the Arab Philosophers; who, to solve the monstrous Absurdities of the Mahometan Religion, were for turning many Things into Figure and Allegory, which were commonly understood in the literal Sense. Those he violently opposeth on this Account, accusing them of Heresy and Insidelity, as Corrupters of the Faith, and Subverters of Religion, whereon he had the Name of Hoghatol Eslam Zainoddin, i. e. The Demonstration of Mahometism, and the Honour of Religion, He was born A. D. 1058. and dy'd A. D. 1112. His Name at length is Abu Hammed Ebn Mohammed Al Gazali Al Tusi.

gory,

Al Jannabi, an Historian born at Jannaba, a City in Persia, not far from Shiras. His History comes down to the Year of our Lord 1588, and therein he tells us that he went in Pilgrimage to Mecca, and from thence to Medina, to pay his Devotions at the Tomb of the Impostor, in that Year of the Hegira which answers to the Year of our Lord 1556. His Name at length is Abu Mohammed Mustapha Ebnol Saiyed Hasan Al Jannabi.

* Al Kamu, i. e. The Ocean, a famous Arabic Dictionary so call'd, because of the Ocean of Words contain'd in it. It was written by Mohammed Ebn Jaacub Ebn Mohammed Al Shirazi Al Firauzabadi. He was a Person of great Esteem among the Princes of his Time, for his eminent Learning and Worth. particularly with Ismael Ebn Abbas, King of Yaman. Bajazet King of the Turks, and Tamerlan the Tartar, from the last of which he receiv'd a Gift of Five Thousand Pieces of Gold at one Time. was born A. D. 1328, being a Persian by Birth, but he liv'd most at Sanaa in Yaman. He finish'd his Dictionary at Mecca, and dedicated it to Ismael Ebn Abbas, under whose Patronage he had long liv'd, and afterwards dy'd at Zibit in Arabia, A. D. 1414. being near ninety Years old.

Al Kodai, an Historian. He wrote his History about the Year of our Lord 1045, and dy'd A. D.

1062. His Name at Length is Abu Abdolla Mo-

bammed Ebn Salamah Ebn Jaafar Al Kodai.

Al Masudi, an Historian. He wrote a History call'd the Golden Meadows, but in what Time he liv'd I do not find. His Name at Length is Ali Ebn Hosain Al Masudi. He wrote also another Book. wherein he makes it his Business to discover and expose the Fraud which the Christians of Jernsaleme are guilty of, about lighting Candles at the Sepulchre of our Saviour on Easter-Eve. For then three Lamps being plac'd within the Chapel of the Sepulchre, when the Hymn of the Resurrection is sung at the Evening Service, they contrive that these three Lamps be all lighted, which they will have believ'd to be by Fire from Heaven, * and then a Multitude of Christians of all Nations are present with Candles to light them at this Holy Fire, which hath been a fraudulent Practice kept up among them for many Hundred Years. And the Emperor Cantacuzenus was fo far impos'd on by this Cheat, that in his Third Apology for the Christian Religion against the Mahometans, he makes mention of it, and urgeth it against those Infidels, as a Miracle, which being annually performed in their Sight, ought to convince them of the Truth of the Christian Religion, and convert them thereto. But the Impeffure hath all along been too well known to the Mahometans to be of any such Effect with them. For the Patriarch of Jerusalem always compounds with the Mahometan Governour to permit him to practice this Trick for the fake of the Gain which it brings to his Church, and annually allows him his Share in it. And therefore, instead of being of any Effect to convert them, it becomes a Matter of continual Scandal among them against the Christian Religion. And not only this Author, but Abmed Ebn Edris, and most others of the Mahometans, that write against the Christian Religion, object it as a Reproach thereto (as in Truth it is) and orge it with the same Earnestness against the Christian Religion, that Cantacuzenus doth for it. Al Mansor Hakem Beamrilla, Calif of Egypt, was so offended at it, that A. D. 1007, he order'd the Church of the Resurrection at Jerusalem, wherein this Chappel of the Sepulchre stands, to be for this very Reason pull'd down and raz'd to the Ground, that he might thereby put an End to so infamous a But the Emperor of Constantinople having by the Release of Five Thousand Mahometan Captives, obtain'd Leave to have it re-built again, the Imposture hath still gone on at the same Rate, and it is there, to the great Sport of the Mahumetans (who come in Multitudes every Year to fee this Farce) acted over in their Sight in the same Manner as it is above related even unto this Day. Thevenot. who was once present at it, gives us a large Account of this whole Foolery in the first Part of his Travels, Book 2. Chap. 43.

^{*} Vide W. Malmsburiensem de Gestis Regum Anglorum, 11b. 4. c. 2. f. 79, & f. 83.

Al Mostatraf, the Name of a Book, written by an unknown Author.

Al Motarrezi, the Author of the Book call'd Mogreb, he was born A. D. 1143, and dy'd A. D. 1213. His Name at Length is Nasir Ebn Abil Macarem Abal Phatab Al Motarrezi. He was of the Sect of the Motazali, and seems by his last Name, Al Motarrezi, (by which he is usually call'd) to have been by Trade a Taylor, that being the Signification of the Word in Arabic.

Assamael, a Book much quoted by Johannes Andreas, and also by Guadagnol.

Bidawi, a famous Commentator on the Alcoran. He dy'd A. D. 1293. His Name at Length is Naferoddin Abdollah Ebn Omar Al Bidawi. His Commentary is written for the most Part out of Zamachshari.

Kazwini, an Arabic Author, so call'd from the City Kaswin. His Name at Length is Zacharias Ebn Mohammed Ebn Mahmud Al Kaswini. In what

Age he liv'd I cannot find.

Dialogus Mahometis cum Abdollah Ebn Salem, a Book wrote in Arabick, containing a great many of the Fooleries of the Mahometan Religion, under the Form of a Dialogue between Mahomet and this Jew, who was his chief Helper in forging the Imposture. It was translated into Latin by Hermannus Dalmata; and that Version of it is publish'd at the End of the Latin Alcoran set forth by Bibliander.

Disputatio Christiani contra Saracenum de Lege Mahometis. It was written in Arabic by a Christian, who was an Officer in the Court of a King of the Saracens, to a Mahometan Friend of his, who was an Officer with him in the same Court, and contains a Confutation of the Mahometan Religion. Peter, the samous Abbot of Cluny in Burgundy, who flourish'd A. D. 1130, caus'd it to be translated into Latin by Peter of Toledo; an Epitome of which is printed with the Latin Alcoran by Bibliander, taken out of the 24th Book of the Speculum Historiale of Vincentius Bellovacensis.

Elmacinus, an Historian of the Christian Religion. His History is from the Creation of the World to the Year of our Lord 1118. The latter Part of it, which is from the Beginning of Mahometism, was published by Erpenius, under the Title of Historia Saracenica, A. D. 1625. He was Son to Yaser Al Amid, who was Secretary of the Council of War under the Sultans of Egypt, of the Family of the Jobida, for 45 Years together, and in the Year of our Lord 1238, (in which his Father dy'd) succeeded him in his Place. His Name at Length is Georgius Ebn Amid; and for his eminent Learning he was also stil'd Al Shaich Al Rais Al Macin, i.e. The prime Doctor, solidly Learned. The last of which Titles, Almacin, was that whereby Erpenius, (who pronounceth it Elmacin) chose to call him; but by others he is generally quoted by the Name Ebn Amid.

Ebnol Athir, a Mahometan Author, who was born A. D. 1149, and dy'd A. D. 1209. His Name at Length is Abussadat Al Moharac Ebn Mohammed Al Shaibani Ebnol Athir Al Jazari Magdoddin.

Ali Ebnol Athir, an Historian, Brother to the former Ebnol Athir. His Name at Length is Abul Hasan Ali Ebn Mohammed Al Shaibani Ebnol Athir Al Jazari Ezzoddin. He was born A. D. 1160, and dy'd A. D. 1232. His History, which he calls Camel, is from the beginning of the World, to the Year of our Lord 1230.

Ebnol Kassai, Author of the Book call'd Taarifat. which is an Explication of the various Terms us'd in Arabic by Philosophers, Lawyers, Divines, and other Sorts of learned Professions among them.

Ebn Phares, a Mahometan Author, who dy'd A. D. 1000.

Eutychins, a Christian Author of the Sect of the Melchites, his Name in Arabick is Said Ebn Batrick. He was born at Cair in Egypt, A. D. 876, and became very eminent in the Knowledge of Phylick, which he practis'd with great Reputation, being reckon'd reckon'd by the Mahomerans themselves to have been one of the eminentest Physicians of his Time. But towards the latter Part of his Life giving himfelf more to the Study of Divinity, he was A. D. 933, chosen Patriarch of Alexandria for his Sect. (for there was another Patriarch of that Place for the Jacobites at the same Time) and then he first took the Name of Eutychius. But he happen'd not to be so acceptable to his People; for there were continual lars between them until his Death, which happen'd seven Years after, A. D. 940. His Annals of the Church of Alexandria were published at Oxford in Arabic and Latin by Dr. Pocok, A. D. 1656, at the Charge of Mr. Selden, and this is the Meaning of these Words in the Title-Page, [Johanne Seldeno Chorago] for he who was the Chorayus in the Play, always was at the Charges of exhibiting the Scenes. And therefore Mr. Selden having born the Expences of this chargeable Edition, the most worthy and learned Author of that Version acknowledg'd it by those Words in the Title-Page, which feveral having mistaken to the robbing him of the Honour of his Work, as if Mr. Selden had begun the Translation and Dr. Pocock finish'd it, I cannot but do this Justice to that worthy Person, now with God, to clear this For he needed no Partner in any of his Matter. Works. The Translation was totally his, and only the Charges of printing the Book Mr. Selden's, Mr. Selden did indeed publish a Leaf or two of that Author, which he thought would ferve his Purpole to express his Spight against the Bishops of the Church of England, in revenge of the Cenfure Which was inflicted on him in the High Commission Court for his Mifford of Tythes; but he made those Slips in that Vertion, that Dr. Pocock was not at all eas'd eas'd of his Labour, by having that little Part of it translated to his Hands.

 R_3

Liber de Generatione & Nutritura Mahometis, a most frivolous and silly Tract, wrote originally in Arabic; and being translated into Latin by Hermannus Dalmata, is publish'd with the Latin Alceran by Bibliander.

Geographia Nubiensis, so the Book is call'd by Sionita and Hefronita, who publish'd it in Latin with a Geographical Appendix annex'd thereto, A. D. 1619. But this Book is only an Epitome of a much larger and much better Book written by Sharif Al. Adrisi, at the Command of Roger, the second of that Name, King of Sicily, for the explaining of a Terrestrial Globe, which that King had caus'd to be made of a very large Size, all of Silver. finish'd this Work A. D. 1153, and entituled it Ketab Roger, i. e. the Book of Roger, from the Name of him who employ'd him to compose it. The Author was of the Race of Mahomet, and therefore is call'd Sharif, which Word fignifieth one of a noble Race, especially that of Mahomet, and was descended from the noble Family of the Adriside. who reign'd in some Parts of Africa, and therefore he is call'd Al Adrisi, that is, of the Family of Adris. His Name at Length is Abu Abdollah Mohammed Ebn Mohammed Ebn Adris Amir Olmumi-There was a very fair Copy of this Book among Dr. Pocock's Arabic Manuscripts.

Georgius Monachus, Abbot of the Monastery of St. Simeon. He wrote a Tract in Defence of the Christian Religion against the Mahomerans, which is a Disputation he had with three Mahomerans, of whom the chief Spokesman was Absulama Ebn Saar of Mosul.

Faubari, the Author of a famous Arabic Dictionary, call'd Al Sabah: His Name at length is Abu Naser Ismael Ebn Hammad Al Jauhari. He was by Nation a Turk. He dy'd A. D. 1007. This is reckon'd the hest Dictionary of the Arabic Language next Kamus. Golins makes his Arabick Lexicon mostly out of it.

Jalalani, i. e. the Two Jalals. They were two of the same Name, who wrote a short Commentary upon the Alcoran, the first began it, and the second finish'd it. The first was call'd Jabal Oddin Mohammed Ebn Ahmed Al Mahalli; and the second Falal Oddin Abdorrahman Al Osynti. This latter, on the Death of the former, finish'd the Book, A. D. 1466, and was also Author of a History called Mezhar.

Shahresthani, a Scholastical Writer of the Mahometan Religion. He was born at Shahrestan, A. D. 1074, and dy'd A. D. 1154.

Safioddin, the Author of a certain Geographical Dictionary in the Arabic Tongue.

Zamacshari, the Author of a Book call'd Al Chethat, which is a large Commentary upon the Alcoran, and that which is of the best Esteem among the Mahometans of any of its Kind. His Name at length is Abul Casem Mohammed Ebn Omar Ebn Mohammed Al Chowarasmi Al Zamachshari. was born at Zamachshar, a Town of Chewarasmia, A. D. 1074, and dy'd A. D. 1143.

Hebrew and Chaldee Authors.

Haldee Paraphrase, an Interpretation of the Old Testament in the Chaldee Language. That of Onkelos on the Pentateuch, and that of Jonathan on

The Prophets, are ancient, being written, according to the Account which the Jems give of them, before the Time of our Saviour. But those which are on the other Parts of Scripture, as also that which bears the Name of Jonathan on the Law, were written by some later Jews. The Author of the Chaldee Paraphrase on Job, the Psalms and Proverbs, was Rabbi Joseph Cacus,

Sepher Cozri, a Book written by Way of Dialogue between a Jew and the King of the Cozars, from whence it hath its Name Sepher Cozri or Cozari, i.e. the Book of the Cozar. The Author of it was Rabbi Judah Levita, a Spanish Jew, who wrote the Book originally in Arabic about the Year of our Lord 1140, and from thence it was translated into Hebrew by Rabbi Judah Ebn Tibbon, in which Translation it was publish'd by Buxtorf, with a Latin Version, A. D. 1660.

Rabbi David Kimchi, a famous Jewish Commentator on the Old Testament. He was by Birth a Spaniard, Son to Rabbi Joseph Kimchi, and Brother to Rabbi Moses Kimchi, both Men of eminent Learning among the Jews; but he himself far exceeded them both, being the best Grammarian in the Hebrew Language which they ever had, as is abundantly made appear not only in his Commentary on the Old Testament (which gives the greatest Light into the literal Sense of the Hebrew Text of any extant of this kind) but also in a Grammar and Dictionary which he hath wrote of the Hebrew Language, both by many Degrees the best of their Kind: The first of these he calls Miclol, and the other Sepher Shorashim, i. e. the Book of Roots. Buxtorf made his Thesaurus Lingua Hebraa out of the former, and his Lexicon Lingue Hebrae out of the latter. He flourish'd about the Year of our Lord 1270.

Maimonides,

Maimonides, a famous Jewish Writer; his Book, Tad Hachazakah, is a Digest of the Jewish Law according to the Talmudists. His Book Moreh Nevochim contains an Explication of Words, Phrases, Metaphors, Parables, Allegories, and other Dissiputities which occur in the Old Testament. It was first wrote in Arabic, and after translated into Hebrew by Rabbi Samuel Ebn Judah Ebn Tibbon, from which Translation it was published in Latin by Buxtors, A. D. 1629. He was born at Corduba in Spain, A. D. 1131, but lived mostly in Egypt, from whence he is commonly called Rabbi Moses Agyptims, where he dy'd A. D. 1208.

Mishnah, a Collection of all the ancient Traditions of the Jews, to the Time of Rabbi Judah Hakkodifh, the Compiler of it, who flourish'd about the Middle of the second Century, in the Reign of the Emperor Antoninus Pius. This Book is the Text to the Talmud, and that a Comment on it. The Ferusalem Talmud was compiled by the Fews who dwelt in Judaa, about 300 Years after Christ; and the Babylonish Talmud by those who dwelt in Masqueramia, about 500 Years after Christ, according to the Account which the Jewilh Writers give of them. But there are feveral Things contained in the latter, which feem to refer to a much later Date. These three, with the two Chaldee Paraphrases of Onkelos and Jonathan, are the ancientest Books which the Jews have, next the Bible. For how much Noise foever may be made about their Rabbinical Writers, there are none of them above feven hundred Years old. There are some of them indeed lay Claim to a much ancienter Date, but without any Reafon for it.

Greek Authors.

A Ristotelis Ethica & Politica.

Bartholomai Edesseni Consutatio Hugareni, a Greek Tract against Mahometism, published by Le Moynt among his Varia Sacra. The Author was a Monk of Edessa in Mesopotamia. In what Age he liv'd it doth not appear.

Cantacuzenus contra Seltam Mahometicam. This Book contains four Apologies for the Christian Religion, and four Orations against the Mahometan. The Author had been Emperor of Constantinople, but resigning his Empire to John Palacologus his Sonin-Law, A. D. 1355, he retired into a Monastery, where being accompany'd by Meletius, formerly called Achamemid, whom he had converted from Mahometism to the Christian Religion, he there wrote this Book for the said Meletius, in answer to a Letter written to him by Sampsater, a Persian of Hispahan, to reduce him back again to the Mahometan Superstition.

Cedreni Compendium Historiarum, an History from the Beginning of the World, to the Year of our Lord 1057.

Chrysoftomi Homilia.

Confut atio Mahometis, a Greek Tract, publish'd by Le Moyne among his Varia Sacra; the Author not known.

Dionysii Halicarnassei Antiquitates Romana.

Eusebii H. storia Ecclesiastica, and Praparatio Evangelica.

Hierocles, the Fomenter and chief Manager of the tenth Persecution against the Christians. He was first Governor of Bithynia, and after of Egypt, in in both which Places he profecuted the Christians with the utmost Severity; and not content herewith, he also wrote two Books against them, which he call'd Λόγως φιλαλώθεις, wherein, among other Things, he compar'd Apollonius Tyaneus with Jesus Christ, and endeavour'd to prove him, in working of Miracles to have been equal to him; to which Particular Eusebius wrote an Answer, which is still extant among his Works; but these Boooks of Hierocles are now wholly lost, excepting some Fragments preserv'd in the said Answer of Eusebius.

Josephi Antiquitates Judaica, and de Bello Judaico.

Origenes contra Celsum.

Philostratus de Vita Apollonii Tyanei.

Phlegon Trallianus, a Freed Man of Adrian the Emperor. He wrote a Chronicon or History, which he call'd The History of the Olympiads. It contain'd 229 Olympiads, whereof the last ended in the fourth Year of the Emperor Antoninus Pius. But there is nothing of this Work now extant, except some few Fragments, as they are now preserv'd in such Authors as have quoted it. That relating to the Eclipse of the Sun at our Saviour's Crucifixion is preserv'd in Eusebius's Chronicon, and is also made Mention of by Origen, in his 35th Tract on St. Matthew's Gospel, and in his second Book against Celsus.

Plato.,

Plutarchi Vita.

Strabonis Geographia.

Socratis Scholastici Historia Ecclesiastica.

Sozomeni Historia Ecclesiastica.

Theophanis Chronographia; this is one of the Byzantine Historians, and contains a Chronological History of the Roman Empire, from the Year of our Lord 285 to the Year 813. The Author was a Noble-

Nobleman of Constantinople, where he was first an Officer of the Imperial Court, but afterwards turning Monk wrote this History. He was born A. D. 758, and A. D. 815 dy'd in Prison in the Island of Samothracia, a Martyr for Image-Worship, for which he had been a zealous Champion in the fecond Council of Nice.

Zonara Compendium Historiarum. Another of the Byzantine Historians. It contains an History from the Beginning of the World to the Death of Alexius Comnenus, Emperor of Constantinople; which happen'd A. D. 1118. when the Author flourish'd. He was first a prime Officer of the Imperial Court at Constantinople; but afterwards became an Ecclesiaflick, and is the same who wrote the Comment on the Greek Canons.

Latin Authors Ancient and Modern.

Mmiani Marcellini Historia. Anastasii Bibliothecarii Historia Ecclesiastica. The Author was a Priest of the Church of Rome, and Library-Keeper to the Pope. He flourish'd about the Year of our Lord 870.

Bellonii Observationes de Locis ac Rebus Memorabilibus in Asia. This Book was first publish'd in French, A. D. 1553, and after in Latin, A. D. 1589.

Bocharti Hierozoicon.

Busbequii Epistola, the Author was Ambassador from the Emperor Ferdinand the First to the Port, from whence he wrote his Epistles Buxtorfii Lexicon Rabbinicum.

Buxtorfi Synagoga Judaica.

Caroli a Sancto Paulo Geographia sacra, sive Notitia antiqua Episcopatuum Ecclesse Universe. Lutetia Pa-visiorum, A. D. 1641.

Clenardi Epistola. The Author of these Epistles was the most famous Grammarian of his Age. Out of Love to the Arabic Tongue, he went to Fex, on Purpose to learn it, A. D. 1540, when well advanced in Years, from whence he wrote many Things in his Epistles, of the Manners and Religion of the Mahametans. He dy'd at Granada in Spain as soon as he return'd.

Cusani Cribratio Alcerani. The Author of this Book was the famous Nicolas de Cusa, the eminentest Scholar of the Age in which he liv'd. In the Year 1448 he was made Cardinal of Rame, by the Title of St Peter's ad Vincula, and dy'd A. D. 1464, about ten Years after the Turks had taken Constantinople. Which seems to have given him the Occasion of writing this Book, that so he might provide an Antidote against that False Religion, which on that Success had gotten so great an Advantage for its farther spreading it felf in those Parts of the World. For it appears by the Dedication, that this Book was not written till after the Loss of that City; it being dedicated to Pope Piges Secundus, who enter'd not on the Papacy till the Turks had been about three Years in Possession of it.

Abrahami Ecchellensis Historia Arabum. This Book is subjoin'd to his Chronican Orientale, in two Parts, collected out of the Arab Writers. The Author was a Merenite, of Mount Libanus in Syrie, and was employ'd as professor of the Oriental Languages in the College de propaganda Fide at Rome, from whence about the Year 1640, he was call'd to Paris, to assist in preparing the great Polyglott Bible for the Press, which was there publishing, and made the King's Profesior of the Oriental Languages in that City. The Part assign'd him in this Work, was that which they had before employ'd Sionita in, a Man of thorough Abilities to perform it; but on some Distaste taken against him, they discharg'd him, and sent to Rome for Ecchellensis; of whose Performance herein a learned Sorbonist making a Cenfure, truly says, Ibi peccatum eft toties ac tam enormiter in apponendis vocalibus & apiculis, ut quod ibi primum inter tegendum occurrerit, summam fapere videatur Tyronis alicujus oscitantiam. He was indeed a Man but of little Accuracy in the Learning which he profess'd, and shews himself to be a very futilous and injudicious Writer, in most of that which he hath publish'd.

Abrahami Ecchellensis Eutychius vindicatus; which Book is in two Parts; the first writ against Mr. Selden's Eutychii Patriarcha Alexandrini Ecclesia sua Origines; and the second against Hottinger's Historia Orientalis. The greatest Skill which he snews in this Book, is in Railing. It was publish'd at

Rome A. D. 1661.

Forbesii Instructiones Historico Theologica, publish'd

at Amsterdam, 1645.

Fortalitium Fidei, a Book written in Defence of the Christian Religion against the Jews, Mahomatans, and other Adversaries. The Author takes Occasion to acquaint us Lib. 2. Consideratione 6. Hares. 5. that he was at Work in writing this Book A. D. 1458; and the Title of the first printed Edition tells us, that it was finish'd the Year sollowing, and that the Author was an eminent Doctor of the Order of the Franciscan Fryers. It was printed first at Nuremberg, A. D. 1494, and after that that, at Lyons, A. D. 1525. But in all these Editions the Name of the Author being suppress'd; some have called it the Work of William Toton, who was only the Editor of the second Edition; and others have ascrib'd it to others. But Mariana, in the second Tome of his Spanish History, Lib. 22. Cap. 13. tells us, the true Author of the Book was Alphonsus Spina, a Franciscan Fryar of Castile in Spain, who from a Jew turning Christian, enter'd himself of that Order, and after, by several Advances, came to be a Bishop in that Kingdom. But the present General of the Jesuits, notwithstanding the Authority of this great Man of his Order, in a Book lately publish'd by him against the Mahometan Religion, still ascribes it to William Toton. But the Book is of better Use to acquaint us with the Doctrines and Opinions of the Christians of that Age, than to give us any true Light either of Mahomet or his Religion. For in that Part which is levell'd against this Imposture, too many of his Arguments are built upon such Relations, both concerning it and the Author thereof, as have no other Bottom, but the mistaken Traditions of the Vulgar.

Golii Nota ad Alfragani Elementa Astronomica; which are exceeding useful for the understanding of the Geography of the East. The Book was publish'd at Leyden, A. D. 1669.

Philippi Guadagnoli Apologia pro Christiana Religione, contra Objectiones Ahmed Filii Zin Alabedin Perfa Aspahensis. Of which Book I have already given an Account in what I have written of Ahmed Ebn Zin, against whom it is written.

- Gentii Nota ad Musladini Saadi Rosarium Politicum; publish'd at Amsterdam, A. D. 1651.

Grotius de Veritate Christiana Religionis; & Epistola ad Gallos.

Hottingeri Historia Orientalis. Of this Book there are two Editions; the first A. D. 1651, and the second A. D. 1660. the latter is much enlarged. The Author was Professor of the Oriental Tongues; first at Zurich in Swisserland, and afterwards at Heidelbergh; from whence being call'd to be Professor at Leyden, he was, while on his Removal thither; unfortunately drowned in the Rhine. He was a Man of great Industry and Learning; but having written very much within the Compass of a sew Years (for he dy'd young) his Books want Accuracy; tho' all of them have their Use.

Historia Miscella, a Roman History begun by Eutropius, continu'd by Paulus Diaconus, and finish'd by Landulphus Sagax.

Johannes Andreas de Confusione Setta Mahometana. The Author of this Book was formerly an Alfaki, or a Doctor of the Mahometan Law; but in the Year 1487, being at Valentia in Spain converted to the Christian Religion, he was received into Holy Orders, and wrote this Book in Spanish against the Religion which he forsook; from whence it was translated into Italian by Dominicus de Gazelu, A. D. 1540. And out of that Translation it was published in Latin by Johannes Lauterbach, A. D. 1595, and re-printed by Voetius at Utrecht, A. D. 1656. He having thoroughly understood the Religion which he consutes, doth much more pertinently write against it, than many others do that handle this Argument.

Macrobii Saturnalia.

Caii Plinii Secundi Naturalis Historia.

Caii Plinii Cacilii Secundi Epistola.

9

Pocock. The famous Professor of the Hebrew and Arabick Tongues at Oxford; who was, for Eminency of Goodness, as well as Learning, the greatest Ornament of the Age in which he siv'd, and God bleffed, him with a long Life to be useful He was born A. D. 1604, and dy'd at Christ-Church in Oxford, in the Month of September, A. D. 1691. He was for above fixty Years a constant Editor of learned and useful Books: The first which he publish'd, contains an Edition of Four of the Catholick Epistles in Syriac, i.e. the Second, of St. Peter, the Second and Third of St. John, and the Epistle of St. Jude, with Versions and Notes, which was printed at Leyden, A. D. 1630. by Vofsius, to whom he presented it the Year before at Oxford, on his coming thither to fee that University: And the last was his Commentary on Joel, which came forth the Year in which he dy'd. Specimen Historia Arabica, which I frequently make Use of in this Tract, was publish'd A.D. 1650, and is a most accurate and judicious Collection out of the best Arab Writers, relating to the Subject which he handles.

Richardi Confutatio Legis Saracenica. The Author was a Dominican Fryar, who in the Year 1210 went to Bagdat, on purpose to study the Mahometan Religion out of their own Books, in order to consute it; and on his return publish'd this learned and judicious Tract concerning it. Demetrius Cydonius translated it into Greek for the Emperor Cantaguzenus, who makes great use of it, taking thence most of that which he hath of any Moment in his sour Orations against the Mahometan Religion. From this Greek Version of Demetrius Cydonius it was translated back again into Latin by Bartholomeus Picenus, which Translation is publish'd

Publish'd with the Latin Alcoran of Bibliander, and that is all we now have of it, the Original being lost. This, and Johannes Andreas's Tract de Confusione Sesta Mahometana, are the best of any that have been formerly publish'd by the Western Writers on this Argument, and best accord with what the Mahometans themselves teach of their Religion. Others have too much spent themselves on false Notions concerning it, for want of an exact Knowledge of that which they wrote against ledge of that which they wrote against.

Roderici Toletani Historia Arabum. It contains an History of the Saracens from the Birth of Mahomet to the Year of our Lord, 1150. The Author was Archbishop of Toledo in Spain, and was present at the Lateran Council, A. D. 1215. His History, from the tenth Chapter, is mostly confin'd to the Saracens of Spain, and is but of little Credit, where he relates any Thing of them out of that Country. It was publish'd with Erpenius's Historia Saracenica at Leyden, A. D. 1625.

Schickardi Tarich, seu Series Regum Persarum, Tu-binga, A. D. 1628.

Spankemii Introductio ad Historiam Sacram, Amstel. A. D. 1694

A. D. 1094.

Scaliger de Emendatione Temporum, and Nota ejus ad Spharam Manilii.

Valerius Maximus.

Vaninus, a famous Atheist. He was by Birth a Neapolitan, and came into France on Purpose to promote the Impiety he had embrac'd; of which being convicted at Tholouse, he rather chose to become a Martyr for it, than renounce it; and therefore was publickly burnt in that City, A. D. 1619, persisting to deny the Being of a God with a wonderful Obstinacy even in those Flames in which he perish'd. He wrote two Books; the first was publish'd A.D. 1615, entituled Atterna Providentia Amphitheatrum; and the other the next Year after, which is his Dialogi de Admirandis Natura, in both which he serves that Cause for the Sake of which she dy'd.

English and French Authors.

Purchas's Pilgrimage.

Ricaut's History of the Present State of the Ottoman Empire.

Smyth's Remarks upon the Manners, Religion, and Government of the Turks.

Thevenot's Travels.

FINIS.

